WILSON TO BLOCK RAILROAD STRIKE; CALLS LABOR MEN

Four Brotherhood Chiefs Will Attend a White House Conference Nov. 22.

INSISTS ON LOYALTY FIRST

"Inconceivable" That Patriotic Men Should Now Think of Tying Up Lines.

HINT OF FEDERAL OPERATION

Workers' Leaders Non-Committal on the Question of Mediating Wage Demands.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Operation of the railroads of the country as a military necessity, under the authority contained in the Federal railway eight-hour law, may be exercised by President Wilson if the railway brotherhoods carry out their proposed demand for an increase of wages for railway employes and transportation facilities are paralyzed as a result.

A broad hint that the President might be obliged to invoke the authority to operate railroads is contained in a letter which he has sent to William L. Chambers, Commissioner of Mediation and Arbitration, expressing deep interest in Judge Chambers's efforts to bring about an agreement as to wages between the railroad executives and the representatives of the brotherhoods.

In order to take every measure to prevent transportation paralysis at this critical time, when all the railroads must work at full capacity to assist the Government and its allies in the movement of war material, the President has invited the heads of the railway brotherhoods to confer with him at the White House on Nov. 22. He is determined that there shall be no transportation paralysis, and it is believed that he will resist any effort on the part of the brotherhood heads to follow the tactics that enabled them to coerce Congress into enacting the railway eight hour day law when sentiment in the National Legislature was opposed to this step.

Judge Chambers has been in conference with the heads of the brotherhoods but it is gathered, from what was said today, that he did not make any progress in his effort to persuade them that at this time patriotism demanded they should not press their grievances. The brotherhood heads are credited with giving the cold shoulder to suggestions that their differences with the railroad executives be submitted to arbitration.

President Wilson's Letter.

The following letter from President Wilson to Judge Chambers expresses the President's attitude toward the situation:

> My Dear Judge Chambers: May I not express my very deep and serious interest in your efforts to bring the railroad executives and the brotherhoods engaged in train operation to an agreement that there shall be no interruption in their relations on either side until ample opportunity shall have been afforded the United States Board of Mediation and Conciliation to bring about, if possible, an amicable agreement, and that in the event of a failure to bring about such an agreement any controversy that may have arisen will be submitted to arbitration in accordance with the provisions of the Newlands law?
>
> I take it for granted that your efforts will succeed because it is inconceivable to me that patriotic men should now for a moment contemplate the interruption of the transportation which is so absolutely necessary to the safety of the nation and to its success in arms, as well as to its whole industrial life; but I wanted, nevertheless, to express my deep personal interest in the matter and to wish you Godspeed.
>
> The last thing I should wish to contemplate would be the possibility of being obliged to take any unusual measures to operate the railways and I have so much confidence that the men you are dealing with will appreciate the patriotic motives underlying your efforts that I shall look forward with assurance to your success.
>
> Cordially and sincerely yours,
> WOODROW WILSON.

Statement by Judge Chambers.

Judge Chambers issued this memorandum:

"As a result of the efforts of the Board of Mediation to bring the railroad executives and the brotherhoods engaged in train operation to an agreement that there shall be no interruption in their relations on either side until ample opportunity shall have been afforded the United States Board of Mediation and Conciliation to bring about, if possible, an amicable agreement, and that in the event of a failure to bring about such an agreement, any controversy that may have arisen will be submitted to arbitration in accordance with the provisions of the Newlands law, Commissioner Chambers has held conferences with leading railroad officials and chief executives of the brotherhoods.

"At a conference in Cleveland, Ohio, on Thursday last, between Judge Chambers and Warren S. Stone, Grand Chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; W. S. Carter, President of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen; L. E. Sheppard, First Vice President of the Order of Railway Conductors, and W. G. Lee, President of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, it is understood certain substantial agreements were reached.

Pershing's Troops Avenge Raid by Ambushing a Large Patrol, Who Bolt With Their Dead

By The Associated Press.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Nov. 14.—American infantrymen exacted a partial revenge for a trench raid during a recent night by ambushing a large German patrol in No Man's Land, killing or wounding a number of the enemy.

The American patrol, in which there were some Frenchmen, arranged the ambuscade near the German lines on a shell-ruined farm.

After they had lain in the mud nearly all night the patience of the watchers was rewarded by the sight of a large German patrol—its number more than double that of the Franco-Americans.

The Germans were allowed to pass, when the Americans and Frenchmen on their flank opened a hot fire from shell craters and other shelters where they were secreted.

The Germans were taken completely by surprise and bolted, carrying with them their men who had been hit. The number of dead and wounded Germans is uncertain, but none of the men in the brush was hit by the bullets which the Germans later sent in from a distance.

There were congratulations all round when the Americans and French reentered their trenches.

Patrol work on both sides is becoming more active, as is also the artillery fire. The Germans during one twenty-four-hour period of a recent day sent over at least three times as many shells as on the first days during which the Americans were entrenched. One night the firing in the back areas against the approaches of the communication trenches reached the proportions of drumfire. It was evident the Germans thought American trench relief was taking place. As a matter of fact, no relief was in progress, and no material damage was done.

During the last two nights the Germans have continuously used machine guns in the direction of the American line. Sniping is becoming more active on both sides. American sharpshooters are working close to the German lines, especially when the nights are clear.

The activity by enemy snipers thus far has resulted in one American casualty. A non-commissioned officer was hit in the head and killed.

The third series of American battalions is now occupying the first line and the second American detachments to enter the trenches have returned to their billets.

Included among the returning troops is the company which bore the brunt of the recent raid on the American trenches.

Openings here and there in the ranks showed how many men had been killed, wounded and made prisoners in the trench fight.

The second return battalions yesterday were going through the same series of bathing and cleaning as the first detachment. The men are to enjoy several days' rest before taking up the training work again.

MANY STATE JOBS TO GO TO WOMEN

Gov. Whitman Makes Two Appointments and Says More Are to Follow.

WOMAN SEEKS A JUDGESHIP

Expects Hylan to Place Her in Special Sessions—Conference on Woman Patronage.

Governor Whitman, who came to the city last night for the first time since the election, said he was well pleased with the suffrage victory won by the women. The Governor believes that some public responsibilities should go with this new power, and as opportunity offers will appoint women to places in which they can do useful service to the State.

"I appointed one woman today—Mrs. Elinore Higley of Hudson Falls—to a place on the State Board of Charities," said the Governor. "Mrs. Higley is the first woman ever appointed to such an important position in the State service. I expect to make other appointments of women to places in which they can be of service to the State.

"There are a great many women on our boards at Albany concerned in the management of our charitable institutions and institutions caring for the sick. I have found that they give useful and conscientious service. There are a great many places, involving what is commonly known as social service, under the State administration, for which I regard women as peculiarly qualified. It is my purpose, in so far as I can do it with propriety, to extend women's opportunity for public service that should go with their new-won power. I expect to appoint women when qualified for positions which they can fill, and I do not intend to convey the idea that any future appointments of women that I may make necessarily will be confined to positions of the character to which I just made reference."

Woman Seeks Judgeship.

A woman candidate for Justice of Special Sessions appeared yesterday. She is Miss Sarah Stephenson, a lawyer of Brooklyn. Miss Stephenson, who wants to preside over the Children's Court, is an aspirant to the place on the Special Sessions bench that will become vacant with the expiration on Dec. 31 of the term of Justice George J. O'Keefe. Judge Hylan will appoint the successor of Justice O'Keefe.

Miss Stephenson is not an enrolled Democrat as yet. She was a Progressive while the Progressive party was alive. She said yesterday that her leanings now were all in the direction of the Democratic party.

"My Democratic friends are well aware that I am more of a Democrat than anything else," said Miss Stephenson. "I have not as yet made up my mind whether to become an enrolled Democrat and an active worker in the party ranks."

Miss Stephenson said she was not prepared to say whether she had made formal application to Judge Hylan for the place.

"It is not the salary that I care about," she said. "We women have been fighting for a long time for legislation compelling the Mayor to appoint a woman to this court because Justices to preside in the Children's Court are designated from the Court of Special Sessions. We believe there should be a woman in the Children's Court."

Judge Hylan was told last night that there was a woman aspirant for a Special Sessions Justiceship.

"I had not heard of it," he said; "but the women are entitled to consideration and will get it. Let them put in their applications. We like to have them in the home, don't we?"

Conference on Jobs for Women.

The Mayor-elect reiterated his determination to give women representation on the new Board of Education that he will appoint. As to whether women would be represented in other departments and to what extent Judge Hylan was not prepared to say, but it is understood that the whole question will be taken up at a conference of all the newly elected city officials in the near future.

The political leaders of "the other sex" are looking with some alarm at the tendency of the newly elected to "coddle" the newly enfranchised, as one of them put it. There are enough male applicants to fill ten times over every job that the incoming administration will have to give, and many of the candidates have political claims. The advent of women could not have come at a more inconvenient time, in the view of male patronage hunters.

This phase of the situation is sup-

OUR WAR COSTS BELOW ESTIMATES

BIG SAVING UP TO DATE

War Department Expenditures Are 50 Per Cent. Less Than Were Figured.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 14.—In a speech before the Investment Bankers' Association here tonight Secretary McAdoo disclosed that Government expenditures are running far below estimates given to Congress, and predicted that the amount of money still to be raised for the fiscal year would not exceed $10,000,000,000.

"Vague and unfounded apprehensions seem to exist in the public mind as to the extent of the financial requirements of the United States during the current fiscal year," the Secretary said. "It may be helpful to the country to know that these requirements have been greatly exaggerated, and that in the judgment of the Secretary of the Treasury there is no reason whatever for apprehension on this score. This opinion is based upon the latest estimates of our financial needs.

"During the last few days the various departments of the Government have submitted to me their estimates of expenditures during the current fiscal year. On the basis of these estimates I am confident that, allowing for a liberal balance in the general fund at the close of the fiscal year, not more than $10,000,000,000 remains to be raised by the issue of bonds, war savings certificates, and Treasury certificates of indebtedness.

"This it not regarded by the Treasury Department as a task which will in any way strain the capacity or resources of the United States. The splendid success of the second Liberty Loan shows that the people are fully determined to support the war and are prepared to make such sacrifices of luxuries, pleasures, comforts, and conveniences as may be necessary.

"The estimates of the various departments include appropriations already made and proposed supplemental estimates to be submitted at the forthcoming session of Congress. Though the estimated ordinary expenditures (excluding advances to the Allies) for the year average about a billion a month, the ordinary expenditures for the four months' period ended Oct. 31 have been only $1,296,000,000, or at the rate of $324,000,000 a month. For instance, the expenditures for the War Department for the four months' period have been 50 per cent. less than was estimated by that department for that period. It may be confidently expected, therefore, that the actual expenditures for the balance of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, will not exceed the estimates.

"The actual credits to the Allies have averaged $500,000,000 per month, or within the estimates of the Secretary of the Treasury, and the actual cash disbursements against the credits so established have fallen below the estimates. Of the expenditures made for the account of the United States, as well as those for the account of the Allies, a very great preponderance is for purchases in the United States, so that the operations involve merely a shifting of credits, and have not been a strain on the financial resources of the country. Not only is this true, but every precaution is being taken, by wise restrictions upon the shipment of gold, accompanied by careful study of the course of international trade, to husband the resources of the country.

"The gold monetary stock (coin and bullion used as money) in the United States on Nov. 1, 1917, is estimated at $3,041,500,000. The increase in the last ten months has been $174,500,000, while in the last five years it has been $1,161,333,000. In five years the portion of the world's gold monetary stock held by the United States has increased from approximately one-fifth to more than one-third."

U-BOAT SINKINGS OF BRITISH SHIPS AT LOWEST MARK

Admiralty Reports One Vessel of Over 1,600 Tons and 5 Under Lost in Week.

Two French and One Italian Ship Lost Last Week—Persius Admits Defeat.

HIGH MARK WAS IN APRIL

Forty of the Larger British and Fifteen of the Smaller Vessels Sunk in a Week Then.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Only one British merchant vessel of more than 1,600 tons was sunk by mine or submarine last week, according to the weekly statement of shipping losses issued this evening. This is the low record since Germany began her submarine campaign.

Five vessels of less than 1,600 tons and one fishing boat were sunk during the week.

The Admiralty statement says that the arrivals at British ports during the week fere 2,125, and the sailings 2,307. The number of merchantmen unsuccessfully attacked, including three previously, was eight.

Not since Germany began her intensified submarine campaign in February has the total number of British merchantmen sunk by mine or submarine been as small as the above Admiralty statement shows. The previous low record was twelve merchantmen, eight of them of a tonnage in excess of 1,600 and four of less than 1,600 tons.

The high crest of the wave of British merchantmen sunk was during the week of April 22, when forty ships of 1,600 tons and over and fifteen of less tonnage were sunk—a total of fifty-five. The next high record was the following week, when thirty-eight vessels of the larger and thirteen of the smaller category were sent to the bottom.

The record of losses of British vessels by weeks since the Admiralty began official publication of the totals is as follows:

French and Italian Sinkings.

PARIS, Nov. 14.—The losses to French shipping through mine or submarine for the week ended Nov. 11 were two vessels over 1,600 tons, one of which was actually sunk the previous week, and no vessels under that tonnage. Four unsuccessful attacks were made by submarines.

ROME, Nov. 14.—Only one small sailing vessel of Italian nationality was lost during the week ended Nov. 11, it was officially announced today, as the result of the operations of hostile submarines. The statement reads:

"During the week ended Nov. 11 vessels to the number of 384 entered ports and 333 left. The loss due to submarines was one sailing vessel of more than 100 tons."

Persius Confesses Defeat.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—What is considered further evidence that the German people have awakened to a realization of the failure of the German Admiralty campaign to starve England by U-boat warfare in 1917 reached the United States Government today from Franco-Swiss sources. Announcement was made that the United States radio service had received a wireless message from the French radio station at Lyons quoting a message from Zurich as saying:

"Captain Persius publishes in the Berliner Tageblatt a sensational article, in which, after having confessed that the German people are beginning to have their doubts as to the results of piracy without mercy, he himself recognizes that the German Admiralty was grossly mistaken in its calculations, and that in Germany today credence is no longer given to the decisive influence of the submarine war, as was the case last February, when the most optimistic forecast was published. Captain Persius will not permit of supposing that the supply of foodstuffs in Great Britain will be threatened by the submarine warfare before the second half of the year 1918."

Complete exchange of information as to ways of meeting the submarine menace is taking place between Admiral Benson and officers of his staff and officials of the British Admiralty at London. Secretary Daniels said today that the Admiral had gone to England equipped to discuss the subject in every phase and to acquaint the British officials with all that the United States Government had learned through its own experiments. On their side British Admiralty officials are disclosing both what they have done and hope to do to defeat the U-boats.

Mr. Daniels indicated that Admiral Benson was imparting ideas of possible procedure against submarines rather than absolutely new devices developed in the United States. At the same time results of the countless experiments made by the navy technical experts and members of the Naval Consulting Board also are being contributed to the pooling of ideas of the allied powers for greater co-ordination of anti-submarine operations.

Allies Can't Help Italians to Hold Piave, Maurice Says

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Major Gen. F. B. Maurice, Chief Director of Military Operations at the War Office, said today:

"The Italian situation is extremely critical and will remain so for the next few days. If the Italians fail to hold the Piave line it is almost certain Venice will fall. Holding the Piave depends on the Italians themselves, as not for some days yet can Franco-British troops be in the fighting line."

General Maurice did not attach vital importance to the fact that the Germans had already succeeded in crossing the Piave River at one point, as he said only a small force had crossed and the Italians should be able to deal with them adequately.

"The Italians' line on the Piave," he continued, "is the shortest one for them and was the line originally fixed by Cadorna when he began his withdrawal. The next line of defense is the Brenta, and the next after that the Adige. Both are much longer than the Piave line.

"One danger to the Italians is their northern, or mountain, front. If the enemy breaks through there he cuts off the Italian forces in the plains. On the other hand, the mountain front is one which should be easily held.

"There is much reason for optimism about the Italian situation on the Piave."

ROME, Nov. 14.—Small detachments of Austro-Germans have succeeded in crossing the Piave river near the coast, the War Office announces. The statement says that at Grisolera, four miles from the mouth of the river, groups of the enemy filtered through into the marshy region between the Piave and the Vecchia, where they are being held. An attempt to cross between Quero and Fenere was suppressed. The enemy suffered severely.

In the north following a withdrawal to a new line of resistance east of Asiago the Austrians occupied the Tezze-Lamon-Fonzaso-Arten-Feltre front between the Brenta and the Piave.

The official announcement reads:

After a short but intense artillery action at dawn yesterday the enemy attempted a violent surprise attack against our positions from Lake Ledro to Lake Garda. Thanks to the effective resistance offered by our troops, the attack failed completely and the enemy was compelled to retire.

The Withdrawal in the North.

On Monday night our troops on the Asiago Plateau which were occupying advanced positions on Monte Longara after having repulsed the fourth and most powerful attack were withdrawn to a line of resistance further to the rear.

During the afternoon the enemy, starting from the heights to the south of Gallio, advanced toward Monte Sisemol. He was repulsed. In the region from Asiago to the Sugana Valley our advanced posts continued lively engagements with enemy forces proceeding from the Marcesina-Monte Della Focellona-Monte Lisser front, between the Brenta and the Piave rivers. The enemy occupied the front of Tezze-Lamon-Fonzaso-Arten-Feltre. During the course of partial engagements our troops effectively defended themselves at Tezze and at the outer forts of the Cima di Campo and the Cima di Lano.

Along the Piave combative activity has progressively increased. Our artillery and the enemy's developed intense actions. Enemy attempts to cross the river between Quero and Fenere, at St. Dona di Piave and at Intestadura were suppressed and the enemy suffered very serious losses. Desperate fighting took place at di Papadoli and at Zenson, where our counter-offensive continues, but it has not yet succeded in dislodging the enemy completely. At Grisolera enemy groups succeeded in filtering through into the marshy region between the Piave and the Vecchia where, however, they are held.

During the day we captured 121 prisoners and some machine guns. Our aviators effectively renewed their bombarding actions.

Text of Agreement For the Allied War Council Limits It to Recommendations for Western Front

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The agreement of Great Britain, France, and Italy for the Interallied War Council, as read by Premier Lloyd George in the House of Commons today, is as follows:

First.—With a view to better co-ordination of the military action on the western front, a Supreme War Council is composed of the Prime Minister and a member of the Government of each of the great powers whose armies are fighting on that front, the extension of the scope of the council to other fronts to be reserved for discussion with the other great powers.

Second.—The Supreme War Council has for its mission to watch over the general conduct of the war. It prepares recommendations for the consideration of the Governments and keeps itself informed of their execution and reports thereon to the respective Governments.

Third.—The General Staff and military commands of the armies of each power charged with the conduct of the military operations remain responsible to their respective Governments.

Fourth.—General war plans drawn by competent military authorities are submitted to the Supreme War Council, which under high authority of Government insures its concordance and submits, if need be, any necessary changes.

Fifth.—Each power delegates to the Supreme War Council one permanent military representative, whose exclusive function is to act as technical adviser to the council.

Sixth.—Military representatives receive from the Government and the competent military authorities of their country all proposals, information, and documents relating to the conduct of the war.

Seventh.—The military representatives watch day by day the situation of the forces and the means of all kinds of which the Allies and enemy armies dispose.

Eighth.—The Supreme War Council meets normally at Versailles, where the permanent military representatives and staffs are established. They may meet at other places according to circumstances. Meetings of the Supreme War Council take place at least once a month.

Situation in Russia Still in Doubt; No Direct News from Petrograd

Attempts to Communicate With Capital From Finland Fail—Kerensky Victories Reported From Scandinavia—Story That Siberia Has Declared Independence and Made ex-Czar Its Emperor.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—While, according to advices from Stockholm, vain attempts to get into telegraphic communication with Petrograd have been made by the cable station at Nystad, Finland, since yesterday afternoon, when telegraphic communication was interrupted, the conclusion being drawn being that the Petrograd station is occupied by military forces, reports of victories by Kerensky's army continue to be received from the Scandinavian capitals. These tally so closely with those sent out on Sunday and Monday that it is surmised that they are delayed versions of the same reports.

The most sensational of the dispatches which reached here today comes from Copenhagen. It reads:

"The Berlingske Tidende's Haparanda correspondent in a dispatch received here says:

"'Officers at Tornea, Finland, say that Siberia has declared its independence and proclaimed former Emperor Nicholas as Emperor.

"'Cossacks have occupied Kiev.'

"The same paper's Petrograd correspondent says General Korniloff's troops have taken the Kremlin at Moscow after a severe fight."

An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from the Danish Capital says that the arrival of Premier Kerensky in Petrograd, accompanied by troops, is reported by the Russian Legation at Stockholm. M. Kerensky is said to have defeated the Bolsheviki.

An undated dispatch from Haparanda to the Stockholm Dagens Nyheter quotes Lieut. Col. Mouravieff, commander of the Bolsheviki forces in Petrograd, as having issued this proclamation:

"Kerensky has circulated a false rumor that the troops in Petrograd have gone over voluntarily to the Provisional Government. The troops of the free Russian people are not retiring and are not surrendering. They only have evacuated Gatchina in order to avoid useless bloodshed and take a defensive position nearer Petrograd. The position now is strong enough to resist forces ten times as strong as Kerensky's. Our troops are in the best of spirits. Order and calm prevail in Petrograd.

"Besides the cruiser Aurora the warships Sarga and Svobody, the training ship Afrika, and six torpedo boats of the Baltic Fleet have arrived from Helsingfors and anchored in the Neva near the Nicholas Bridge in the centre of Petrograd, whence they can bombard the entire capital. Their crews are made up of Bolsheviki."

The Finnish Telegram Bureau says the whole of Russia except a small part of Petrograd is now in the hands of the Provisional Government.

Travelers arriving from Petrograd, the bureau reports, say that when they left the Capital there was fighting in the streets between the Bolsheviki and the populace. The Petrograd garrison was reported to be deserting the Bolsheviki, and the Allied Embassies were said to have got into touch with Premier Kerensky. The people of Petrograd, the travelers said, were turning down the Bolsheviki proclamations and hooting their leaders on the streets.

According to these advices, which were received in a cablegram filed at Stockholm at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, Premier Kerensky defeated the Bolsheviki at Tsarskoe Selo. The Cossacks are reported to have destroyed the Red Guard. The telegraph lines are now in Kerensky's hands.

Moscow is the headquarters of the Provisional Government, the Telegraph Bureau continues, and Premier Kerensky has issued orders from Moscow which have appeared in the Petrograd papers. The anti-Bolsheviki papers of Petrograd, as well as the Helsingfors newspapers, have headlines announcing that the Bolsheviki movement is nearing its downfall. General Kaledines, the Cossack leader, is said to be dictator of Southern Russia. The orders of the Provisional Government are signed by M. Kerensky, General Kaledines, and General Korniloff.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 14.—The Cologne Gazette prints a dispatch from Helsingfors saying that a state of siege has been proclaimed throughout the whole of Finland; that anarchy is increasing, and that theft and murder are prevalent.

The dispatch adds that the Governor General of Finland is in Petrograd and refuses to resume his duties, fearing that his life would be unsafe in Finland.

TEUTON PRESS JUMPS AT BOLSHEVIKI OFFER

Lauds Armistice Idea, but Doubts Whether the Extremists Can Retain Power.

BERLIN, Tuesday, Nov. 13, (via London, Nov. 14.)—The Berlin press generally gives a friendly reception to the peace manifesto of the Russian Maximalists. The Vorwärts, the Socialist organ, and the Germania, the Catholic organ, both raise the question whether the Bolsheviki will retain the power in Russia.

The question as to whether the belligerents aer ready for a three months' armistice for the purpose of discusing peace, the Vorwärts says, can be only answered by the German Government affirmatively, declaring at the same time that it does not intend to annex or consent to annexation at Germany's cost. Whatever Germany has to say concerning annexation, it adds, is contained in the Reichstag resolution of July 19 and in the German reply to the Pope. The Vorwärts continues:

"German Socialists do not accept all the theories of the Bolsheviki, but recognizes them as Socialists and comrades. Therefore, they gladly record the Bolsheviki offer as worthy of socialism and most promising."

A temporary cessation of hostilities between Russia and the Central Powers, the Germania says, would bring peace nearer. It adds that Germany and Austria-Hungary would promptly agree to a limited armistice as proposed, and that Russia's allies could not escape the effects of such a step.

The difficulties of arranging such an armistice are pointed out by the National-Zeitung, which asks how an armistice would be interpreted. It asks also what Great Britain will expect should the war be halted. While the allied blockade of Germany would be raised, the Zeitung objects to such a procedure on the ground that England could then calmly restock herself while Germany would not enjoy any benefits, adding:

"For who would supply Germany? The overseas countries yet neutral would count for little."

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 14.—The German Independent Socialists, according to the Tageblatt of Berlin, publish in the Volks Zeitung of Leipsic a manifesto calling upon the Socialist proletariat in Germany to respond to the Russian peace offer as made by the Maximalist Government in Petrograd. The manifesto suggests that meetings be held evreywhere in favor of a general armistice to obtain a peace without annexations.

Austrian newspapers print a statement from the official news agency pointing out that neither Vienna nor Berlin has received an actual peace or armistice proposal from the Russian Government, and as long as the new rulers of Russia do not submit proposals the Central Powers can do nothing in the matter, according to a dispatch from Vienna. Should the Maximalists retain the upper hand in Russia and come forward with a peace offer the Austro-Hungarian Government would, the statement says, immediately establish accord with its allies and fix a common attitude.

"The Soldiers' and Workmen's program," the statement continues, "is capable of forming a point of departure for serious peace discussions with Russia. A just peace, without annexations and without indemnities, is also the goal of the Austro-Hungarian Government, but what we understand by an annexations and what every one has understood about it up to the present does not correspond with the interpretation of the present Russian Government. On this point countr proposals would have to be made on our part."

PREMIER TELLS PURPOSE

New Allied Council Will Have No Executive Power.

ONLY A STEP TOWARD UNITY

Replies to Asquith That the Best Explanation Is the Agreement Itself.

DEBATE SET FOR MONDAY

Asquith Is Believed to Control Government's Fate—Talk of Calling Northcliffe.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Premier Lloyd George, returning today from his trip to encourage and help Italy, found himself confronted by the sharpest crisis of his political career. The storm of opposition to the Allied War Council project, based on the belief that it tends to political control of military operations, added to the shock created by his strictures on Allied blunders in his Paris speech.

Promptly upon his return to the city he appeared in the House of Commons, where the proposed Inter-Allied Council was the subject of preliminary discussion.

The former Premier, H. H. Asquith, brought the question before the House. Mr. Asquith asked Premier Lloyd George whether he would now state the precise functions of the council, and, in particular, of its military staff; whether it was proposed that the council, if so advised by its staff, should have the power to interfere with and override the opinion on the matter of strategy of the General Staff at home and the commander in chief in the field; whether the military staff of the Inter-Allied Council was to have intelligence and operations departments, or either of them, of its own; whether the ultimate decision as to the distribution and movement of the various armies in the field was to rest on the council or on the Governments represented in it, and whether opportunity would be given to discuss the proposed arrangements and the statements made in connection with them in the Premier's Paris speech.

Premier Announces Council's Limits.

The Premier, in replying to Mr. Asquith, said that the best way of answering the question was to read the actual terms of the agreement among the British, French and Italian Governments for the creation of a supreme council of the Allies, which he proceeded to do.

[The text is published elsewhere in THE TIMES.]

The Premier went on:

"From the foregoing it will be clear that the Council will have no executive power, and that final decisions in the matter of strategy and the distribution and movements of the various armies in the field will rest with the several Governments of the Allies, there will therefore be no operations department attached to the Council. The permanent military representatives will derive from the existing intelligence departments of the Allies all information necessary in order to enable them to submit advice to the supreme allied council.

"The object of the Allies has been to set up a central body charged with the duty of continuously surveying the field of operations, as a whole, by the light of information derived from all the fronts, and from all the Governments and staffs, and of co-ordinating the plans prepared by the different general staffs, and, if necessary, of making proposals of their own for the better conduct of the war."

Mr. Lloyd George announced that the Government had set aside Monday for the discussion of his Paris speech and the proposed council.

Northcliffe Urged to Join Cabinet.

The Globe says that great pressure is being brought on Lord Northcliffe to enter the Government, which, it adds, "He alone is deemed capable of bolstering up."

A section of the British press has made a play of the alleged connection of Winston Spencer Churchill with the crisis, on the ground that he was with the Premier at Rapallo and Paris. An authoritative statement, issued tonight, stated that Churchill was not at Rapallo and, therefore, took no part in the conference at which the agreement was reached.

No action taken by any British Government since the beginning of the war has caused such a maelstrom of criticism, speculation, and symptoms of uneasiness as the announcement of the new War Council. The questions are being asked whether such a vital change is necessary, whether it will bring effective control of the campaign, and, particularly, how far the new military trinity will supersede or overlap the management of British operations by the General Staff of the army.

The War Cabinet is said to be at one with the Premier on all the essential points of his Paris speech and the policy which is announced, and to be prepared to hold to this policy. The attitude of the rank and file of the Unionists will have a considerable effect on the Parliamentary situation, as Chancellor Bonar Law has always said he would not remain a member of the coalition Cabinet unless he retained the general support of the Unionists. There is a good deal of criticism of the Premier's new policy from the Unionists.

Asquith Opened Way for Debate.

Much also depends upon the attitude of Mr. Asquith and his followers. Mr. Asquith has loyally supported Premier Lloyd George's administration up to the present time, although on two or three occasions he had the power in his hands to cause serious trouble for his successor if not to overthrow him. Mr. Asquith inquired in the House of Commons yesterday whether the Premier was likely to be in the House today "and make a statement regarding the very serious matters touched upon in his speech in Paris." Andrew Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer, replied that the Premier was certain to respond to such a suggestion.

The whole question of the government of the country by the new and unprecedented machinery of a War Cabinet consisting of five members, with the other members of the Cabinet, including the Minister of Foreign Affairs, outside its deliberations, is also being discussed. This revolution in the machinery of the British Government has been sharply attacked since it was put into effect, but the general feeling of the country has been that it was willing to "scrap" the Constitution temporarily if the winning of the war could be promoted by such a method.

The fear that the new International Council will usurp the position of the General Staff and the direction of military affairs now in its hands, is the crux of the present agitation. General Sir William Robertson and Field Marshal Haig command the absolute confidence of the nation, so far as the newspapers are competent to voice the sentiments of the people, and the seeming threat to sidetrack them has unloosed the storm. Trained soldiers and not politicians should direct the military operations, the critical press contends.

PREDICT THAT CABINET WILL SURVIVE STORM

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 15.—It was to a crowded and tensely interested House that Premier Lloyd George read his statement on the supreme Inter-Allied War Council. Between now and Monday, when there will be a debate on the subject in the Commons, there will be a sufficient interval for calm consideration and for straightening out the somewhat tangled skein spun off after the Rapallo conference. Better information regarding the decisions taken at Rapallo and also respecting the preliminary steps to those decisions will be given to the public during the next few days, and though prophecies are dangerous, it may almost certainly be predicted that there will be no political or other serious upheaval in England as a consequence of the somewhat sensational method by which the Inter-Allied War Council was ushered into the world.

Partisan politicians who still harbor resentment against Lloyd George because of his "way of turning out" Asquith are up in arms against the Premier and are hoping that Asquith will come decisively into the field against him. Asquith, they say, holds the fate of the Government in the hollow of his hand, just as he held it there some months ago.

Many good parliamentary judges believe this to be a fairly correct diagnosis of the political situation, but Asquith takes a much broader view of the necessities and requirements of the situation than some of the fiery zealots on the Liberal benches. Those who can speak with the most knowledge of Asquith today say that on Monday next he will lend no encouragement to any attempt to bring about Lloyd George's fall and that, in fact, if need be, he will come to the rescue of the Government should it seem to be in danger of going on the rocks. Asquith's attitude, it is predicted, will be that of constructive criticism.

For the moment passion and prejudice are still rampant. The press is chock full of recriminations, denunciations, and suggestions. Writers who hold Massingham's theory that the Lloyd George Government is the worst Britain has ever had have been too prone to judge the plan of the Inter-Allied War Council not upon its merits but upon the fact that it emanated from Lloyd George. Alfred G. Gardiner, in today's Daily News, printed a two-column slashing attack on Lloyd George, whom he described as a man who having made himself political dictator at home, proposed to make himself military dictator, too. The Morning Post was equally virulent.

Distinction must be drawn between criticism which is directed against the plan agreed upon at Rapallo, and criticism of speech in which Lloyd George announced it in Paris. In regard to the letter there is practical unanimity in the press comment. Even The Daily Mail, which today fulminated against the "old gang," with the idea that Lloyd George's difficulties might bring Asquith and other members of the old Cabinet back to office, found fault with the speech on the ground that it contained assages which the Prime Minister ought to have suppressed because they represented opinion and not fact.

There is reliable information that Lloyd George was perfectly well aware of what a sensation he was going to create and in fact that he deliberately chose to make a sensation. It can also be stated definitely that the decision of the Rapallo conference was not arrived at in hasty, haphazard fashion such as has been suggested in several editorial articles here.

The need of unified control of the war has long been appreciated. Various efforts made in that direction in the past failed, one of several reasons being that that conferences held at different times and places partook more of the character of a debating society than of a board of management. They were both too large and too indiscriminate.

It became particularly clear after the conference held in Paris in July last that a remedy must be provided, and steps were taken then looking to the formation of a real controlling body. Lloyd George went to Italy with the scheme, which had received the approval of the War Cabinet of this country.

Both in newspapers and in the gossip of the Parliamentary lobby and clubrooms it has been said that the Prime Minister had not even consulted his colleagues. This is entirely incorrect. Various reports which have been widespread in these last few days as to the attitude of General Sir William Robertson, who accompanied Lloyd George to Italy but returned to London before him, are, it is stated on excellent authority, equally baseless.

What remains to be seen is how Lloyd George's plan will work when it comes to be put in operation. Much, if not all, will depend on the good will and cooperation of all engaged in it. While it is too early to say definitely that the Unietd States will appoint representatives to the council, a great deal is hoped for from American counsel and co-operation.

The scheme which has been matured for the creation of an Allied Council has, The Chronicle understands, been under consideration for some time. A draft prepared by the British Cabinet met with the general approval of President Wilson, and was accepted by France and afterward by Italy on the occasion of the recent visit of the Prime Minister. It also had the assent of General Smuts, who has been intimately associated with the development of the proposal and who attaches vital importance to it.

"The Prime Ministers of the allied countries will attend the supreme war council," adds The Chronicle, "but the Minister accompanying each will not always be the same individual. When general military questions are under consideration Smuts will probably accompany Lloyd George. It may be, however, that naval matters will have to be dealt with, in which case Sir Eric Geddes or Balfour would attend. Presumably each of these Ministers will be accompanied by his experts.

"America will join in the supreme war council before long, but no nominations have yet been made on the part of President Wilson. Obviously, in this case, the personnel must be varied, as an American Prime Minister is not available."

The Chronicle's Parliamentary correspondents writes:

"Although the tension has abated, the political situation is still a perplexing one, and there may be remarkable developments before the end of the year. The position is very similar to what it was this time last year, when disappointment at the collapse of Rumania reacted very detrimentally on the prestige of Asquith's administration, though it had no more responsibility for the Rumanian collapse than has the present administration for the disaster in Italy.

"Members find it difficult to harmonise today's statement with the Prime Minister's speech in Paris, the agreement being what it is and having been reached without apparent friction, where was the justification for the Paris utterance? Moreover, some passages in the speech were not happily phrased, for they seem to imply disparagement of the magnificent work done by us on the western front in the present year when time and again the flower of the German army has been vanquished and compelled to give ground to British and Colonial troops, most of whom knew nothing of military exercises before this war began. If only the other armies had fought with the same tenacity in 1917, the military situation of the Allies today would be much better than it is.

"There is widespread resentment against the constant suggestion that whenever things go wrong with our allies the responsibility belongs in some mysterious way to this country. Nobody here can be blamed for the fact that the Italian soldiers opened the gates of their country to the invaders, or for the fact that Russia is paralysed by revolution. One might in justice recognize that both in Russia and Italy the military strength is impaired by grave economic conditions that prevail in those countries."

LONDON PAPERS TAKE LLOYD GEORGE TO TASK

Suspect Political Control of Fighting and Say Paris Speech Helped Germany.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The flood of comment in the London papers on Premier Lloyd George's speech in Paris, while tinged with the political alignment of the respective papers, is characterized generally by sharp denial that the Premier's strictures on the Allies' conduct of the war were fully warranted. Suspicion is expressed that the new Allied War Council will substitute political for military direction of the war.

The Morning Post's political correspondent, discussing the Premier's Paris speech, says:

"He must know the extent of the displeasure it caused in Parliament, but does not know, perhaps that the only people who are thoroughly pleased with it are the pro-German and pacifist sections. At first the tendency of lobby opinion was that this burst of oratory had severely shaken the position of the Prime Minister. Especially was this the case with the Radicals on the front Opposition bench.

"Even Asquith showed a trace of eagerness when he put his question to the leader of the House, and his political friends were talking of a change of tenants at 10 Downing Street before very long, though not necessarily the occupancy of the official residence by their chief. It would be enough for them if there were a change of any sort. Lloyd George is clever at extricating himself from difficult situations, and that this situation is difficult for him is undeniable.

"Apart from the admitted blunder of making the speech at this time, especially its delivery in a foreign country, the incident has brought to a head the latent rivalry between the advocates of dispersion and concentration of our military forces. It has ranged the Prime Minister publicly on the side of the dispersionists, and has confirmed the worst fears of that large number of members who for a long time have suspected Lloyd George of a desire to make the military chief subordinate to the politicians on questions of strategy. If this be his real aim, then reconstruction of the Government will be inevitable, because some Ministers are opposed to any thing of the sort, as are a great many members on both sides.

"It is generally believed that not only was the speech made without the knowledge of his colleagues in the War Cabinet, but that since Lloyd George's return some of those colleagues and other Ministers have expressed to him their profound disapproval of his action."

The Morning Post says editorially:

"We are committed to military unity, and this unity is to be achieved by what? Why, by a political council. This political council, advised by its own staff of experts, is to see to it in the future that no opportunity is missed of skipping from one Dolomite peak to another into Germany by way of Vienna. Moreover, as the western front is 'impenetrable,' we may take it that the political council will transfer the serious business of war to the gates of the Balkans and other distant and fascinating places where there are opportunities for 'straight fighting' not afforded in the west. The political council will, in fact, give a tinge of reality to a war hitherto carried on in the realms of rhetoric.

"It is an amazing and, we must add, an alarming prospect, nor are we reconciled to it by Painlevé's sober explanation. Strategic unity we all desire, but political strategy is something which fills us with apprehension.

"We are not surprised that Asquith, no doubt for his own political ends, seizes upon his opportunity and intends to make the most of it in the House of Commons. Lloyd George has presented that arch-politician an opportunity which he cannot fail to turn to his advantage and the discomfort of the Government.

"We are far from rejoicing at such a prospect, for we recognize in Lloyd George a man infinitely more zealous in the national and allied cause than his predecessor. Lloyd George has many inspirations, some of great value to the country. If his energies could only be guided and controlled he might lead the country to victory.

"In Sir William Robertson and Sir Douglas Haig he has two loyal and faithful soldiers who may be confidently trusted never to let him down. Let him continue to trust them and he is sure of ultimate victory, but if he interferes, if he catches the reins from the hands of the charioteer at every corner of the course, he will have a spill, and not only himself but all he stands for will come to ruin."

The Westminster Gazette is afraid the phrase "unity of control" might lead to a dispersal of forces and asks a series of questions regarding the blunders with which Lloyd George charged the Allies. One of them will indicate the general trend of these questions:

"Would unified control," The Westminster Gazette asks, "have accepted the idea which the Prime Minister quotes, with approval from an American journalist, of an offensive via Laibach against Vienna, and if on various grounds it had rejected that idea would it, in the face of General Cadorna's assurance that he was not in any anxiety about a German-Austrian attack, have sent troops from other fronts to make assurance doubly sure?"

The Evening Standard and The Pall Mall Gazette support Lloyd George. The Evening News abstains from comment and the Globe is frankly hostile.

"Lloyd George's speech," says The Globe, "revealed the man in his true colors. He is still a dangerous demagogue, not too scrupulous in his methods. Will it be believed that his colleagues of the war cabinet were virtually not consulted on this matter until it was done? Such, we have reason to believe, is the fact. This wiggle with the strategy of war, for it is nothing else, has been manoeuvred in a corner by politicians of three countries.

"We are told by Lloyd George that if he had not been able to deprive the soldiers of their power to conduct the war he would have resigned, for that in effect is what his threat amounts to. The public, we are confident, will say, with unmistakable emphasis, 'Let him resign.' Better lose a thousand Lloyd Georges than the war."

The Star does not believe in swapping strategists while crossing a Niagara.

Flays "Partisan Manoeuvres."

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The Daily Mail, which is one of Premier Lloyd George's strongest supporters and extremely antagonistic to former Premier Asquith, comments editorially upon the Premier's Paris speech under the heading: "The Old Gang on the Make," and writes of the "partisan manoeuvres" to secure the return to power of Mr. Asquith and his followers, which it says nobody could contemplate without alarm. Nevertheless, it lectures the Premier for indulging in "loose talk" in his Paris speech, and while maintaining that he is absolutely right on the main point, the necessity of unified control and the establishment of a permanent military council, it says:

"Some of the Premier's emotional assertions were distinctly unfortunate, and ought to have been suppressed because they were unwise or because they represent opinion and not fact. It was a great error to refer to the German line in the West as an impenetrable barrier or to belittle the splendid victories on the Somme as if they were bloody assaults which resulted in nothing, nor was his reference to appalling casualties correct, in view of the gigantic scale of the war. It is such loose talk as this which may fairly be criticised, and we hope the Premier will not miss the opportunity of putting into juster language his second thoughts on these and some other matters dealt with in the Paris speech."

The Times's criticisms are less vehement than those of some of the other newspapers. Nevertheless it says:

"Least fortunate of all is the impression conveyed by the speech that all the past efforts of the Allies have been unwise or wasted. We approve of plain speaking; no people thrive on it so well as the British; but disheartening statements must be justified by facts and the facts in this case are by no means so damaging as the Premier would make them."

In commending Lloyd George's Paris speech, The Manchester Guardian cites the success of the Central Powers with inferior forces and smaller resources as largely due to "unity of control through the military dominance of Germany and the enormous advantage which comes from the power thus obtained of swift and decisive action." The paper asserts that by the Allies the war to this day has never been envisaged, planned for, and conducted as a whole. In order to neutralize the advantage obtained by the Central Powers, it says, "it is obvious we must produce among ourselves some approach, at least, to the unity of control which they from the first possessed and possess increasingly."

After outlining the proposed scheme, and saying that the United States, of course, undoubtedly will be represented in the council, the Guardian continues:

"Of course we shall be told, indeed we have already been told by certain violently partisan organs, that here are politicians again at work putting a finger in the pie and interfering with the soldiers, who alone have the right to control the war and all that belongs to it."

To this criticism the paper says the only answer is that it is essential that there shall be a single, joint control, to which the local controls on the various fronts by the General Staffs and the Generals of the different powers must submit. It concludes:

"Let it at least be said plainly that we have had too much of this assertion of soldier against statesmen and of the particularism of men, however gifted and however worthy of our gratitude, who see only their own front, and naturally are disposed to resent all interference with their plans in regard to it. These things have got to cease."

SAYS WILSON BACKS COUNCIL.

Lloyd George Consulted Him Before Paris Speech, Says the Temps.

PARIS, Nov. 13 — (Delayed). — The French newspapers praise the speech made here yesterday by Premier Lloyd George. The Temps approves the British Premier's frankness and says it took courage to acknowledge the Italian disaster and to admit the loss of 200,000 prisoners and 2,500 guns.

"In the General Staff on the Western front one place is vacant," says the Temps. "It is that of the United States. It is not that America has been forgotten, far from that. Premier Lloyd George before going to Rapallo consulted with the Washington Government and the President of the United States approved the principles which have just been laid down.

"Now that Colonel House is in London awaiting the Allied conference in Paris, we hope the United States will not delay in passing from approbation to participation. American presence is necessary, but it also will mark but one stage toward the goal."

GEN. CADORNA RECONSIDERS.

Consents to Represent Italy on Interallied Committee.

PARIS, Nov. 14.—According to the correspondent of the Temps on the Italian frontier, it is now stated that General Cadorna, who was said to have declined the offer to represent Italy on the Inter-Allied Military Committee, has yielded to pressure and consented to act as Italy's representative.

WANT CLEMENCEAU TO LEAD IN CRISIS

"Tiger" ex-Premier Is Most Prominently Talked of as Painleve's Successor.

PARIS, Nov. 14.—President Poincaré received this morning M. Painlevé, the retiring Premier, the Speakers of the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies and several members of the outgoing Cabinet, including Leon Bourgeois, Louis Barthou, aul Doumer, and Raoul Peret, In the afternoon he received the Chairmen of the Army, Foerign Affairs, and Parliamentary Committees, Georges Clemenceau, Georges Leygues and Rene Renoult, and former Premiers Viviani, Briand, and Ribot.

The Painlevé Ministry's defeat by a direct vote in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday marked the first time such action has been taken by the Chamber since the beginning of the war, as up to the present time it has been a point of honor with many Deputies not to vote against the Government, but to express criticism by abstaining from recording their votes.

Strong dissatisfaction with the Government's handling of the Bolo Pacha affair is believed to be the motive which changed the passive discontent to active opposition. Two other things thought to have had a part in the downfall of the Cabinet were the Premier's statement exonerating M. Malvy, the former Minister of the Interior, and the fiasco attending the prosecution of l'Action Francaise, edited by Leon Daudet, the accuser of M. Malvy.

The Painlevé ministry goes without many regrets, after having dragged out its existence for two months. Its fall had been discounted for the last two weeks, but the abrupt manner of its passing came as a surprise. The feeling of the public and the press is voiced fairly, but bluntly by Gustave Hervé in La Victoire. He says:

"The consistent enemy of ministerial crises in wartime, this is the first occasion upon which this journal has rejoiced at the fall of a cabinet. I admit that I experienced the same anxiety that passengers on a liner feel when they see that the Captain has lost his head during a storm."

In view of the present situation at home and abroad, the ministerial crisis is regarded as of exceptional gravity. All the morning newspapers agree that what is needed imperatively is a real leader, but they aslo say President Poincaré will find it a most difficult task to hit upon such a man. According to tradition the President, in choosing the new administration, should be guided by the composition of the vote which overthrew the Cabinet; but Premier Painlevé was defeated by a coalition of the Extreme Right and the Extreme Left, so that it is manifestly impossible to follow precedent in this instance.

The name most frequently mentioned is that of former Premier Clemenceau. It would be the logical step on the part of President Poincaré to offer him the Premiership, as he originated the campaign against Boloism in Parliament and it was on that issue that M. Painlevé fell.

The "tiger," as the former Premier is nicknamed, would undoubtedly be welcomed by the general public and the army, for he is known as the exponent of the big stick and it is believed he would stamp out Boloism radically and rapidly. That is what the people desire.

NOT DORIS I. AVILOV.

The Bolsheviki Minister Not the Russian Who Visited New York.

One channel of speculation as to the identity of the Avilov who was named as Minister of Posts and Telegraphs in the Bolsheviki administration in Petrograd was definitely cleared yesterday by a statement sent to THE TIMES by the law firm of Greene, Hurd & Stowell, pointing out that the Bolsheviki Minister was certainly not Boris I. Avilov, President of the Aksai Machinery Corporation, who some time ago paid a visit to this country. On the authority of the Aksai Corporation itself, the firm wrote:

"We are advised by our clients that the Avilov whose name appears in connection with the Bolshiviki faction is Michael Avilov, who is not related or connected in any way with Boris I. Avilov. Our clients also advise us that any inquiry directed to sources of Russian information in New York will confirm this statement."

Nauseated Troops, Forcing Them to Remove Masks—Asphyxiating Kind Followed.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Nov. 14.—From different sources, including military experts returning from the front, I am able to piece together the following explanation of the break on the Isonzo which led to the Italian rout.

The positions held by the Italians, which had been won by the exhibition of greatest valor and by great loss, seemed almost impregnable, except to protracted siege. The terrain opposite Tolmino on the Isonzo front was most precipitous and the positions along the top of this small mountain range were most strongly fortified with cannon of large calibres. The slopes and foot of the ridge were fortified by trenches with wire entanglements and other obstacles. The Isonzo River flows at the foot of the above described ridge. Along the top of this ridge had been constructed an excellent road, macadamized and drained. This position, in front of Tolmino, appeared to be very strong and it is believed that this view was held by the Supreme Command of the Italian army, and whereas they have been criticised for placing troops there who might have been infected, it can be stated in their favor that troops with any spirit whatever could have held this position sufficiently long for reinforcements to be sent them in case of wavering.

It would seem, however, that the Second Army, unknown to the higher command and fostered by very subtle socialistic and other propaganda, had been honeycombed by sedition, coupled with an intense desire for peace and for an opportunity to return to their families, peasants composing the largest percentage of this army. A portion of this army, it has been stated, when captured or when searched had on their persons copies of the Socialist paper Avanti.

Attack Made in Fog and Mist.

It has been stated that a very heavy bombardment was turned on the trenches in front of Tolmino, and that a shell fell within every hundred feet of trenches every fifteen seconds for two hours preceding the attack. The Austro-German attack was aided by mist and fog from the river valley. This, however, was a normal condition as usually in the morning, even in August and the beginning of September in a good season this mist was present along particularly the upper and middle Isonzo Valley.

It has been stated that the trenches of the Italian position which were carried by the Austrians were first bombarded with a new gas which caused the men in the trenches to be nauseated during the first part of the bombardment, compeling them to remove their masks. Four to five minutes after this first bombardment of nauseating gas, asphyxiating gas was used which caught the men with their masks off, and there were a great many casualties resulting therefrom as well as confusion.

The intelligence work of the Austro-Germans was excellent, the first shot fired during the bombardment, it was reported, destroyed the telephone central of that section of the front. Disaffection was not confined to men in the front line trenches only, but was prevalent among the reserves, and many positions in the front line trenches were held until the Italians were practically annihilated. The reserves who should have supported them had already retreated. Thus a gap in the line was left through which there was practically no resistance. It is said that the way to Udine was absolutely clear if the Germans had known it thirty-six hours after their first attack.

When one portion of the defensive line in the lines gave way, there being very few roads in the mountains, undoubtedly these roads became greatly congested, and the rolling up of the line on both sides of the gap once commenced could not be arrested. At once about twelve kilometers of the defensive line fell, and through this gap poured the Austro-German offensive, practically without resistance excepting by a few isolated organizations, as the Bersaglieri and Alpine Regiments, who were practically annihilated. When the opening through the line became so large that it could not be closed it caused the withdrawal of the armies on both sides thereof. This withdrawal added to the confusion.

I have also been informed that wireless and telegraphic codes were captured by the enemy or obtained by treachery. The Supreme Command at Udine could not communicate in any way with the lesser commands except by means of messengers.

Whereas 2,500 guns of different calibres were captured, many of these guns were old and of obsolete patterns, and a great many, while they were a loss to the Italians, could not be used against them, as many parts were destroyed before capture.

The greatest difficulty at present, however, seems to be not so much lack of men but the great loss of arms, equipment, guns, and munitions of every description.

A few days ago a royal decree was promulgated by the Supreme Command giving five days' grace for all soldiers separated from their armies to report to military authority. If this was not done within the time specified they would be treated as deserters and shot in the back, according to the army Penal Code.

Lies Circulated About Allied Troops.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Light is thrown upon hitherto unexplained references to German intrigue in the ranks of the Italian Army by an official dispatch received here today from Rome.

"An investigation," says the dispatch, "has brought to light the most treacherous ruse resorted to by the enemy in order to undermine the morale of our soldiers immediately before the inauguration of the present offensive. On Oct. 20 the enemy succeeded in smuggling through our lines and caused to be distributed in specified sectors thousands of forged copies of Il Giornale d'Italia Il Corriere della Sera, in which were were reported tumults and rebellions in Naples, Florence, Sicily and Puglie, with hundreds of people killed in Tuscany by English soldiers firing upon women and children, and also describing French soldiers riding over the bodies of agitators, &c.

"It also was established that in certain sections Bulgarians and Croats, wearing Italian uniforms, penetrated among our troops, favored by a thick mist and the ability of speaking Italian perfectly, having studied at the Turin Military Academy, and ordered our soldiers through telephone communications to abandon important defensive positions, thereby causing great confusion and anxiety."

WOUNDED AND MAIMED PLEAD WITH THE ARMY

By PERCEVAL GIBBON.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMY, Monday, Nov. 12.—Hope grows and the flame of it is catching hold of the fuel. It is useless to deny that there have been moments in which it languished and sank, but now we are on the line of the Piave, allied forces are in Italy, and hope, which is the lifeblood of armies, runs high.

The Piave, unlike the Tagliamento, is a real river, affording means to construct a very real line of defense. Where it crosses the plain the lines to the right of it have a clear field of fire of from 900 to 2,000 yards, even where the river succumbs to the commonest disease of the rivers of these parts, and shows itself largely as a bed of pebbles with a narrow stream of water brawling through the middle of it. We hold it as far north as Pederobba, within the zone of the Fourth Army, while it yet runs among the foothills on the Trentino, and there the Alpini are on duty. In the extreme south the marshes which border the river on either hand from Santa Dona di Piave to the Adriatic are flooded, and therefore for the moment out of action.

The last three nights have witnessed those fireworks, volcanic mines—leaps of flame that made momentarily visible the great silhouette of the sodden landscape and firelit river, accompanied by stunning detonations that died in diminishing echoes, and which betokened the destruction of bridges, as at point after point the last parties of cavalry and infantry of the rearguard came across, putting the river at last between the retiring army and the enemy.

Among them were the Fourth Bersaglieri, who crossed along the main road bridge. These were the men who made the house-to-house fight at Sacile. At Conegliano they fought another street action. They had barricaded the wide main street below the hill from which Castello surveys the plain. They had overturned a house or two across it for barricades and made further barriers with vehicles, furniture and the like. It is a gracious little city, famous for its wine, but costlier stuff than wine was cheap in its streets, when the enemy showed before the barricades and machine guns stammered from the houses in whose frescoed walls loopholes had been cut. The Bersaglieri had never ceased from fighting and marching since they left the Isonzo, but here again they counterattacked with the bayonet.

The cavalry—what was left of it—crossed further south. They, too, had been at work since the retreat. The horses had not lasted as well as the men. There was not a squadron that had not been in action almost every day. They formed a screen across a width of country cultivated as intensively as the Nile Valley. The crops are harvested, but mulberries and vines formed hedges between the fields, hampering the movements of the mounted men and blinding their vision, so that every contract with the enemy's horse had almost the suddenness of an ambush.

The lines upon the Piave are of course not new. They belong to those precautions which Cadorna never failed to take, and of late days many thousands of men have been at work upon them elaborating and adding to them. I saw yesterday the scheme of the means of defense drawn up for a certain sector which lacked nothing of completeness.

The noxious propaganda which enemy agents have been conducting among the Italian soldiers had its effect in this retirement, but it is easy to exaggerate the number of elements in the army which were infected. I fancy life is now pretty hard for the members of those units which broke and let the Germans through to Caporetto. The third and Fourth Armies have never wavered at any point.

A counter propaganda in favor of the Allies has been organized and is being put into effect. Part of it is intrusted to a detachment of men wounded and incapacitated in the war. These broken men are along the Piave, lifting their voices among the comrades with whom they once lifted their arms, and the effect of their work is surprising. All have volunteered for the work and among them are many partially injured men who have done their utmost to be first accepted for more active service.

Venetian Plain Devastated.

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMY, Tuesday, Nov. 13.—Yesterday the enemy, consisting, as far as I can ascertain, of Austrians, crossed the Piave upon flats between two railway bridges, now destroyed, which link Treviso and Oderzo and the Port of Ruaro and Mestres. The village of Zenson stands a couple of hundred yards from the river this side of their crossing place, and their preliminary cannonade has reduced it to ruins.

They have been advancing across the evacuated country at the speed at which the Italian rearguards retired, feeling their way over the roads and halting to make good broken-down bridges and the rest of the ruins which the Italians had prepared in their path.

Upon all that genial land which intervenes between the Isonzo and the Piave the footprint of war has been stamped deep. It was a country powdered with villages and bristling with those tall, slender campaniles which are characteristic of North Italy—the bell towers of churches which are descendants of the old Venetian watchtowers along their pirate-infested coast. Now the villages have spilled their inhabitants westward. Many have been shelled flat lest the retreating army should be using them as observation points. So many churches have suffered ruin in this war that it is probably banal to protest, but the plain of Venice without its campaniles is like a woman without her hair.

Upon the night of Nov. 11 the enemy crossed the Piave at Zenson. The river here makes a bend and shows a channel clear of water from bank to bank. They answered the Italian fire as they approached with a strong barrage, under cover of which they threw their pontoons and came over, forcing the defenders on the west bank to fall back. They took up forthwith positions calculated to enable them to constitute a regular bridgehead; that is, they endeavored to occupy the outskirts of Zenson to inclose an area around their landing post which they could defend while the remainder of their forces crossed in their turn.

It is an object lesson in the real danger of the Piave positions and of the fact that a fordable river in itself is not a real obstacle to a determined enemy. The enemy failed to make good his bridgehead, for the Italian counterattack returned promptly and took him on both flanks of half held positions. Shrapnel fire and a series of determined infantry attacks forced him to fall back to the shore of the river.

WEDGE IMPERILS ARMIES OF ITALY

towns of Primolano, in the Sugana Valley, and Feltre, west of the Upper Piave River, is announced today by Army Headquarters. The communication follows:

> In the Sette Communi our troops took by storm Italian hill positions deeply covered with snow, to the east of Asiago, and the fortified work on Monte Lisser. Primolano and Feltre are in our possession.
>
> There has been artillery firing along the Lower Piave.

Fierce Fighting at Zenson Crossing.

By The Associated Press.

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Nov. 14.—There was severe fighting when the enemy crossed the Piave on pontoons near Zenson with a number of machine guns. The Italians rushed him to a cluster of houses near the west bank of the river, where he was being held at last accounts.

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS IN ITALY, Tuesday, Nov. 13, (delayed.)—The Piave line still holds in the main against heavy and continuous artillery fire from the eastern bank and the efforts of the Austro-Germans to cross the stream. These efforts have not taken the proportions of a general movement, but several battalions crossed the river on pontoons near Zenson. The Italian artillery concentrated its fire on the raiding parties, either destroying them in mid-stream or pushing them back on the river bank. The fighting here was desperate and sanguinary. Men who have returned from the batteries along the Piave say the German fire is extremely heavy, but from middle calibre guns.

Chief attention is now directed toward the eastern sector of the Trentino front, where it runs across the Asiago plateau to the Upper Piave River. The enemy is making demonstrations there which are either a diversion or a prelude to a heavy attack with the evident purpose of getting down into the valley toward Bassano and the plains below, thus separating the Italian Army on the Trentino from that on the Piave.

Reports indicate that the enemy is operating on four main fronts. General Boroevio is on the lower Piave, General von Below is on the upper Piave, General Krobatin is in the eastern Trentino, and General Conrad in the western Trentino. This gives von Below the task of trying to force the centre while Boroevio and Conrad press in the Paive and Trentino wing. The number of troops under the Austro-German commanders is not known.

ITALIAN FRONT'S NEW PERIL.

Significance of Teuton Drive in Northern Mountain Section.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—The vigor with which the Austro-German invaders are pressing their advance against the mountain sectors of the new Italian line of defense is regarded in Washington as constituting a most threatening menace to the retention of the Venetian plains section of the Piave River.

The defense of this mountain sector between Feltre on the Upper Piave and Asiago in the Sette Communi has been stubbornly conducted by the Italian Army operating in that sector. But it has not been strong enough to hold back the advance of the German columns embraced in the great encircling movement from the north. The story of the present week has marked the loss of several important points in this mountain section each day, and the advance of the Germans along four main routes from the Trentino and the Cadore is steadily reaching a line that may soon make the line of the Lower Piave untenable for the Italian forces.

The gains by the Austro-German forces and the resultant withdrawal of Italian forces from part of the Sette Communi region, reported today, means, according to military experts, that before the end of the present week the invaders will have taken possession of half of the pivotal quadrilateral of strategically important territory marked on the map by a string drawn around the points of Feltre-Asiago-Bassano-Vidor.

This southward advance of the Germans through the mountains not only menaces the present Piave line, but puts the invaders within easy striking distance of the left flank of any new line established along the Brenta.

ARMORED CARS HELD BRIDGES.

Then Burned Them When Italian Rear Guards Had Crossed.

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Tuesday, Nov. 13, (Delayed.)—A section of Italian armored motor cars, each of which mounts three quickfirers in the turrets, is just back from one of the most thrilling experiences of the war. The duty to which these cars was assigned was to hold the bridges from the Tagliamento to the Piave River until the cavalry rear guards had passed across, and then to burn the bridges behind them. The commander and a number of his men were seen by The Associated Press correspondent at their camp, where they recounted their experiences as though they were every-day occurrences.

Huge cars resembling tanks stood about at the camp, showing the scars received in the recent ordeal. They have heavily armored bodies. There is a steel door, and for observation purposes two small openings are provided. The two turrets above revolve, the upper one having one quick-firer, the lower two.

The orders were to "hold to the death" the bridges at Sacile, Polcenigo, Santa Lucia, and San Giovanni, until the bersaglieri and cavalry had crossed. That they succeeded is shown by the fact that all the rearguards made their way over the bridges, that all the bridges were burned, and that the section returned, leaving only one damaged machine with the enemy, although eighteen of the forty cars were in such crippled condition that it was necessary to abandon them after the bridges were burned.

The machines were divided, ten being stationed at each of the four bridgeheads. After seeing their own rearguards safely across they awaited the approach of the enemy advance guards, even staying in some cases until the cars were surrounded by hostile patrols, which were then mowed down by the batteries of quick-firers.

At the San Giovanni bridge one car took its station during the night midway across the bridge. Early in the morning it was ordered to surrender by a German car which bore the Imperial crest and carried a German Captain and two Lieutenants. Instead of surrendering, two Italian Captains and four gunners suddenly opened the steel door and sprang out with carbines. The German Captain and one Lieutenant were killed. The other Lieutenant and the German car were captured and brought back.

At the Sacile bridge the cars had orders to hold for three hours, but they held for thirty-two hours. At Santa Lucia the commander ordered one of his machines to advance against an enemy patrol which was dangerously near. The car was rushed forward, sweeping the enemy from its double turrets, but when this mission was accomplished and the car was turned back it was found that the bridge was on fire. The only way was to cross this burning bridge. The car was steered straight over the smoking structure, while the burning planks creaked under its huge weight. It crossed safely, and is one of the cars brought back.

VENICE ALMOST EVACUATED.

Bronze Horses of St. Mark and Other Treasures Taken Away.

VENICE, Nov. 14.—The evacuation of Venice is almost complete, this city having undergone the same treatment as Teviso and Vicenza, with the difference that its art treasurers were so numerous that an army of workmen was required to transport them. The great pictures, carvings, fine glassware, and ivories and similar art treasures were transported easily, being removed at the Beginning of the war.

The present removal of art treasures included the heaviest works, which up to this time had been protected by sandbags or hid in cellars. The most important was the Bartolomeo Colleoni monument, the last work of Andrea Verrocchio, the master of Leonardo da Vinci. It was erected in the fifteenth century, and was considered one of the finest equestrian statues in the world.

The four gilded bronze horses from the Basilica of St. Mark also were removed. This was their fifth journey, as they were taken from Rome to Constantinople and thence, in 1204, to Venice. More than a hundred years ago Napoleon took them to Paris, whence they were returned to Venice. They will probably be housed temporarily in the Museum of the Baths of Diocletian, at Rome.

GOVERNMENTS JOIN TO USE MORE SILVER

America and England Agree to Buy 100,000,000 Ounces Next Year in Installments.

WILL RESULT IN A CORNER

Expected That Price Will Be Fixed —Great Demand the World Over for Silver for Coins.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—An agreement has been entered into by the United States and Great Britain as a war measure to make a larger use of silver coinage. The two Governments will, therefore, buy jointly, in regular monthly installments, bullion to the amount of at least 100,000,000 ounces during the coming fiscal year. Inasmuch as silver has gradually risen in price, and now enjoys a rising market, there is an expectation that when the Government begins to buy the market will stiffen and the necessity will appear for employing the price-fixing law to control the situation that might arise.

It is understood that the two Governments have agreed that of the proposed purchase 60,000,000 ounces shall be for the United States and 40,000,000 for Great Britain.

There is now a comparatively small amount of silver bullion in the United States Treasury. Today's Treasury statement shows that the Government holds a total of 491,868,000 coined silver dollars, and only $7,826,000 worth of bullion.

The arangement contemplates the increase of subsidiary coinage, and will not have any appreciable influence on the financial situation, the transaction having in view mainly convenience in a more available small currency.

The new war taxes have created a demand for an unprecedented quantity of minor coins, and there has been a small-coin famine in some parts of the country. The Government is now coining 3,000,000 one-cent pieces daily, in order to catch up with this new demand. The Philadelphia Mint is running day and night and Sundays.

The complaint is made that the Sub-Treasuries are unable to supply the normal silver needs of the large cities, and it is not unlikely that the present plan to buy silver will be enlarged within a few months in order to meet adequately the increasing demand for small currency. The Sub-Treasuries state that it would help the situation if the large department stores, which are always fearful at this time of year of not having enough small change, would graduate their needs to a daily basis, so that the mints could supply the Sub-Treasuries with a daily quota of coins and the banks get from day to day what would be fairly needed for their customers. Instead of this, there are continually very large demands for amounts to take care of the future, and these prevent a reasonable distribution of silver coins in proportion to daily requirements.

Would Mean a Silver Corner.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—A Government "corner" on all silver produced in the United States within the next year is planned jointly by American and British officials to prevent the competition of purchases by other foreign Governments from raising prices to the point where coinage becomes unprofitable.

Representatives of the two Governments are conferring with leading silver producers on proposed contracts under which the Governments would virtually control the silver market for a year at a price somewhat lower than the prevailing rate of 86 cents an ounce.

This plan does not contemplate the cutting off of supply to jewelers and other users of silver, since the Government would use only part of the metal under contract for coinage, and would release the rest for normal industrial purposes. One of the chief results would be to place restrictions on the acquisition of silver by Oriental countries, where a greatly enlarged demand for silver coins has been caused by commercial activities of the war.

More than 74,000,000 ounces of silver were produced in the United States in 1916, and this year's output promises to be greater. Director of the Mint Baker's report shows that the Government used 13,314,000 ounces for coinage during the year ended June 30, and probably will use 20,000,000 ounces this year. Great Britain needs quantities of silver for coins, particularly in India, where comparatively little currency is circulated.

Reports reached the mint today that an acute shortage of small silver coins existed in the Philippines, and that the Christmas shopping season would make the condition worse. All mints are working twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week, to increase the output of "change," including one-cent pieces, for which war activities and war taxes have caused a strong demand.

More Expected by Dealers.

Local silver merchants said yesterday that the agreement reported between the United States and British Treasury officials in regard to their silver purchases had been expected for several weeks. The visit of Lord Reading to this country was thought to be connected with the arrangement, as the question of supplying India with sufficient silver, as well as the problem afforded by the increased demand for silver coins to pay the troops, was known to have received careful study in London.

The silver dealers in touch with Washington were inclined to believe that the presence of the two Governments as buyers would practically control prices for silver, while the aggregate of their purchases would absorb fully three-quarters of the metal likely to be turned out on this side of the water next year. Production is estimated to be running at the rate of about 130,000,000 ounces a year, including 80,000,000 in the United States, the balance coming from Canada, South America, and Mexico.

It was reported in the silver bullion trade yesterday that the United States Treasury was making preparations to send large quantities of silver to France in order to help the French Government increase the supplies of small coin which the soldiers would need.

The prospect of a silver shortage is expected to stimulate production, especially in Mexico, where numerous mines, once active, have been partly, if not completely, closed down for two years. The American Smelting and Refining Company is the largest single producer in this country, with an output of about 35,000,000 ounces a year, the by-product of copper and lead mining and smelting. Mexico was the largest silver producing country before the political disturbances unsettled the mining industry.

Germans Sell Plant Here?

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 14.—The firm of the Deutsche Waffen and Munitions Fabrik of Berlin, according to the Frankfurter eZitung, has sold its American works at Philadelphia.

The price paid was more than 15,000,000 marks, which, the newspaper says, is largely in excess of the original value of the plant, and includes profit on exchange.

URGE BLASTING RAIDERS' BASES

Allied Officers Propose a Big Campaign Against German Airdromes in Belgium.

NOT KEEN FOR REPRISALS

Prefer the Destruction of "Hornets' Nests" as a Means of Stopping London Attacks.

WANT BIGGER OPERATIONS

Aggressive Policy by Entente Air Fleets Called Best Means of Disconcerting Foe.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 14.—"The best way to prevent German air raids is by 'smoking out the hornets' nests,' that is, by destroying the German airdromes in Belgium," said a Belgian staff officer with whom I was sitting a few days ago in a hotel at a small coast town near Nieuport.

Our conversation had been interrupted by a sudden drone overhead, like the hum of giant bees, quickly drowned by the thunder of guns all around us.

"Gothas going to bomb London, Dunkirk or Calais," said the officer. "At this season they pass over here every fine night. Our anti-aircraft batteries always fire on them, but they fly so fast and so high, seven to ten thousand feet, at least, that it is very rare to bring one down.

"You Americans seem to be paying very great attention to aviation. Don't be misled by any wild talk about reprisals on German towns, which the military authorities will only adopt if compelled by public clamor. If you want to prevent air raids you must concentrate your efforts against the hornets' nests.

Calls Reprisals Unsatisfactory.

The officer's theory sounded reasonable, so I asked for further explanations. His argument was simple.

"Firstly," he said, "reprisals are objectionable from the moral viewpoint of the Allies. If a man throws a stone at your mother, would you defend her by throwing two stones at his mother?

"Secondly, reprisals are in a military sense unsatisfactory. To reach even the nearer German towns, such as Karlsruhe, Cologne or Frankfort, allied planes must pass over a wide belt of German-held territory, French, Belgian or Alsatian, which they are reluctant to bomb. It is just this hundred miles of land that gives Paris immunity from raids as compared with London.

"Overland planes can be observed continually. Their advance can be signaled and preparations made to attack them in the air. To bomb German towns properly would require much larger air forces, both of bombers and of battleplanes to protect them, than the results would warrant. We should be playing the Germans' game. Germany's whole object is to make us distract a big part of our air fleet from the actual battle line.

"Exactly the same thing applies to my third point, that it is wrong to send a strong force of battle planes back to England for London's protection. That is just what Germany is playing for. Fourthly, anti-aircraft batteries are inadequate. No one will dispute that.

"Finally, bombing airdromes from which raiders can start is not only logical, but perfectly feasible. The idea is not to bomb one or two of them here and there from time to time, but to concentrate all our efforts against them and never rest until we have destroyed them utterly."

Airdromes Easy to Photograph.

That sounded good, but I wanted further confirmation. I got it the next day from a flight Captain in charge of the aviation photographic service on the Belgian front, which I was visiting. This officer has a high reputation and wide practical experience in all branches of aviation, as his row of decorations—Belgian, French, and British—bears witness. He said:

"There are two points to be determined. First, can we locate the German airdromes? Second, can we smash them when located? As regards the first, let me tell you, of all the air photographic work, spotting airdromes is the easiest. Here is a photograph showing the characteristic shape of the hangars and the general disposition of a field. Even from a great height, where the risk to the photographer is trifling, no mistake is possible.

"You suggest that the Germans can alter the shape of their airdromes or try camouflage. As an aerial photographer, and the British and French will bear me out, I tell you camouflage cannot deceive us long or sufficiently. Sooner or later the trick becomes obvious.

"By air photography we can locate every airdrome positively. Mind you, all the airdromes from which London is raided, to say nothing of the centres for German planes used on the Flanders battle front, are in Belgium. To force them to move to Germany would increase their difficulties a hundredfold. Moreover, we could follow them there.

"Now, as to the question of destruction, if the Allies concentrated their whole bombing activities on airdromes, one of two things would happen: Either we should destroy the hangars, airplanes, local supplies, rail heads, and crew shelters—the latter point being important, as airmen take a long time to train, and once a pilot's nerve is affected he is useless—or to prevent us the enemy would be compelled to withdraw an undue force of battleplanes from the front for protection. That would be the precise advantage in our favor that the Germans are trying to obtain by raiding London.

Wants Policy of Initiative.

"In both cases we should be imposing our attack on the enemy, not accepting his initiative. There has been too much of that in this war already. If the Allies had followed Napoleon's policy of initiative, things would have been very different today.

"By bombing airdromes you destroy the air raid evn at its source. Reprisals, battleplane defense at home and anti-aircraft batteries are merely palliatives, like treating the symptoms of a malady and neglecting its real causes."

His argument convinced me, but subsequent thought led to the query: "If this plan is so obvious, why have not the allied army authorities adopted it?" I discussed this later with Belgian, French, and British officers in the aviation and other services. Here is the sum total of my conclusions:

First, the army does it, but does not do it enough. The British constantly bomb German airdromes, but only some of them, with limited forces and only from time to time. Second, the army does not always do the obvious and logical thing. Army rulers do not always agree on a policy to be followed. They are hampered by tradition or by political considerations due to popular pressure. The case of Kitchener and explosive shells is an outstanding instance among many.

Third, a General commanding an army or a division, is naturally obsessed by the purely military side of his operations. There is a battery or munition dump he wishes to have blown up, a railhead or junction to be destroyed, a concentration of troops to be attacked and thrown into confusion or stores to be destroyed. He sends bombers out on these jobs in order that the task before him may be facilitated.

Local advantages, no doubt, are thus gained, but railroads can be repaired, men concentrated afresh, stores and munitions resupplied and batteries replaced. Meantime the German bombing planes are doing the same behind his lines and the Gothas are raiding London, the former nullifying his own advantages and the latter bidding fair to force him to divert his air forces, whether he will or not, to reprisals on German towns. He is not bold and up-to-date enough to take a wider view, to realize that if he can destroy the German airplanes he will "put out the enemy's eyes" and his advantages will be multiplied enormously.

Finally, aviation is a new arm in war. Even now the British are only just making an independent air ministry, and by the nature of things the practical aviation leaders are young and consequently of inferior rank. It is difficult for them to impress their views, however, backed by expert knowledge and personal experience, on their less well informed superiors. There are still too many obsolete methods, too much tradition in old Europe.

It has been America's pride to "scrap" what is obsolete in favor of more up-to-date and better things. According to opinion here she must scrap the ideas of reprisals and aerial activities that balance and nullify each other. She must concentrate her effort and use her influence with the Allies to induce them to follow her example, on striking at the enemy's air bases and smoking out the hornets' nests. Thus and thus only can be won the absolute "mastery of the air" with all that it implies.

GERMANS REPULSED AT PASSCHENDAELE

Attempt to Retake the Town From Canadians Results in Severe Check.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The Germans met with a complete defeat at the hands of the British yesterday in Flanders, the War Office reports. An attempt to recapture the ground recently won by the British near Passchendaele was repulsed.

The official bulletin says:

> Following upon the increased activity of their artillery, already noted, the Germans yesterday afternoon attacked the positions held by our troops on the high ground north of Passchendaele. The attack was repulsed completely.
>
> There is nothing further to report.

The official statement issued tonight reads:

> Since the capture of Passchendaele on Nov. 6, great hostile artillery activity has been directed against the village and the portion of the main ridge held by us in its vicinity. After our successful attack on Saturday the hostile shelling steadily increased in intensity on the whole of this important area, culminating in the early morning of Tuesday in a concentrated bombardment of great viloence on our forward positions. Our own artillery replied effectively, but the heavy hostile shelling continued.
>
> At 4:30 P. M. yesterday the enemy's bombardment once more became intense, and the attack reported in this morning's official statement was launched. His infantry attempted to advance along the line of the Westroosbeke road; our artillery again opened fire, and combined with the fire of our infantry, completely broke up his attack. Our line is intact.
>
> The hostile artillery has been active during the day on the battlefront. We improved our line slightly during the night northwest of Passchendaele.

PARIS, Nov. 14.—The War Office announcement tonight reads:

> Artillery actions occurred north of the Aisne, in the region of Vauclerc, and on the right bank of the Meuse, in the sector of Apremont Forest. North of Berry-au-Bac one of our patrols, after an engagement this morning, brought back prisoners and a machine gun. In addition, one of our detachments entered German trenches west of Cornillet, and after having explored the positions, destroyed shelters and captured material, returned intact to its own lines.
>
> An enemy airplane was brought down in aerial combat in the region of Dammarie. The two aviators were made prisoner.

The day report says:

> The artillery was very active last night on the right bank of the Meuse, (Verdun front.)
>
> French detachments made a number of successful raids, particularly southeast of St. Quentin, east of Sapigneul and at Chaume Wood, and brought back ten prisoners.
>
> Everywhere else the night was calm.

BERLIN, Nov. 14, (via London.)—The War Office statement today had this to say of operations on the western front:

> There were no large fighting operations. In Flanders the artillery firing did not again revive until evening, when it reached considerable intensity near Dixmude and north of Passchendaele.

STORM TROOPS CUT TO PIECES.

German Counterattack on Passchendaele Was a Violent Effort.

By PHILIP GIBBS.

Copyright, 1917, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS, Nov. 14.—The enemy made a strong, determined effort yesterday to drive us out of Passchendaele. His troops were massed in the neighborhood of Wesroosebeke, and advanced under the protection of a violent barrage from the cross roads north of Passchendaele.

Our men sent up S O S signals, and our guns at once opened fire upon the enemy's assembly places and tracks with intense and destructive concentration. Our machine gunners also swept the ground of approach with streams of bullets and scythed down the ranks of German storm troops. Their foremost waves seem to have been shattered, and only small bodies were able to approach our trenches, where they were repulsed after violent fighting.

This attack does not come as a surprise. It is clear from what our prisoners have said that the German command was seriously chagrined by the loss of Passchendaele, and by the failure of immediate action to recapture it. The importance of this crest of the ridge, giving observation over the low country beyond, makes the German higher command deeply anxious to regain it, even at a great sacrifice of life.

For some days past the Germans have been shelling all our ground, not only on the ridge itself, but also around Frezenburg and Inverness Copse, and all the roads beyond Ypres with great ferocity. At night, after intense counterbattery firing with high explosives, they have used gas shells against our guns. They have also brought up high level guns, and directed them against Ypres and other places behind our lines.

They have some advantage in artillery over our positions at Passchendaele owing to the distribution of their guns, which can enfilade the crest from two sides, but their infantry cannot make any counterattack without assembling on a narrow neck of ground north of Passchendaele Village, where they are likely to be caught again, as yesterday, by our bombardment. For both sides the place is still a caldron and the firing about it is very fierce.

It is not easy to induce the German soldiers to come out in counterattacks, judging from the words of an officer who is a prisoner. The men are in a mutinous spirit against the continual slaughter in their ranks, and even the officers themselves have in recent battles run back and taken cover in dugouts, leaving their companies to noncommissioned officers. That, however, is the demoralization of men already nerve broken by shelling, and may not be true of the fresh divisions brought up for new attacks.

Forbidden to Tell Civilians of Their Better Rations — Fear of American Air Fleet.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 14.—"The German Army is still well fed, but the civilian population is made to suffer for it. Soldiers at home on leave now are forbidden to tell what they have to eat, but most of them are extremely dissatisfied with civilian fare when at home."

Thus a resident of Berlin has informed your correspondent. There has been considerable dissatisfaction and discussion in the German press over the food question recently, but it must not be supposed that the army is underfed or that there is any talk of civilians starving. The Cologne Volkeszeitung states that grave mistakes have been made over the food question, and that von Waldow may have to resign as food dictator.

A view apparently prevalent in Germany is that the only reason the war continues is England's desire to starve Germany. A young girl just arrived from Germany told your correspondent that she was taught at school that food in England was as scarce as in Germany, that everything was issued in England on cards, that corn had only grown a foot high in England, and that all the churches were shut because the people were so wicked.

Sick children, or those up to the age of 3 years, in Germany are allowed a quarter of a liter of milk a day, the girl said, and children up to the age of 6 years are allowed a quarter of a liter of skim milk, which in towns is little better than water. The butter is commonly known as "soft soap," and tastes absolutely rancid. The weekly allowance of it has just been reduced from fifty to thirty grams, about one ounce. When it was rumored some months ago that the butter allowance would be reduced the authorities at once announced that the total of fatty substances would not be lessened, so the allowance of margarine, which is hardly eatable, has been increased twenty grams weekly.

There has been an increasing demand all over the country that the allowance of potatoes be increased from seven to ten pounds per week, especially in the thickly populated industrial districts, where vegetables are unprocurable. A small cauliflower costs three marks.

Destroyer and Small Monitor Sunk by Submarine—Allenby Drives Turks Five Miles.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—A British destroyer and a small monitor which were operating in conjunction with the British army in Palestine have been sunk by a submarine. A total of 38 men from the two vessels are missing.

An official statement issued tonight says:

> "One of His Majesty's destroyers and a small monitor have been sunk by an enemy submarine whilst co-operating with the army in Palestine. Seven men are missing from the destroyer and twenty-six from the monitor."

Previous to this announcement had been made that the British forces had driven back the Turks five miles. The official statement says:

> Colonel Allenby reports at 11 P. M. yesterday that after stiff fighting on the 12th with Turkish forces which had attempted to take new positions on the Wadi-Supereir, twelve miles north of Ascalan, the enemy were driven on the 13th by a combined attack of our mounted troops and infantry from this position and forced to retire a distance of five miles to the Wadi-Surar, eight miles south of Jaffa. Our troops captured the enemy's strongly intrenched posts at Mesmiyeh, Katrah, and Mughar with magnificent dash, and now hold the line from El Tineh, on the east, through Katrah and Yebnah to the sea.
> Full details of the captures are not yet available, but one mounted division alone reports having taken 1,100 prisoners, 14 machine guns, and 2 guns.

The Turkish forces in Mesopotamia having withdrawan thirty to fifty miles north of Tekrit, the British returned to their original positions, according to the plans made before the Tekrit advance, says an official statement issued by the War Office.

The official statement says:

> Our forces after most successful actions at Tekrit on the 5th and 6th remained at that place until the 8th, the whole of the Turkish forces opposed to them having been withdrawn thirty to fifty miles northward, with the exception of a small detachment at Sharaimje.
>
> The clearance of the battlefield and the removal or destruction of everything of value having been accomplished, our troops returned to their original positions according to plans drawn up prior to their advance.

"The keynote of our operations in the eastern theatre," said General F. B. Maurice today, "is the defeat of von Falkenhayn's preparations for the recapture of Bagdad. General Maude's latest move up the Tigris succeeded in destroying the Turkish stores of ammunition piled up for this enterprise. Having accomplished this, Maude has now fallen back to his old position, as there is no point in prolonging communications to no purpose.

"Meanwhile, General Allenby has been striking a powerful blow on the Palestine front. The forces opposing Allenby have been very roughly handled. They have lost half of their effectives and must be reinforced from the arm which von Falkenhayn has been preparing at Aleppo for the Bagdad attack."

PREDICTS A WANING OF WAR ZEAL HERE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 14.—The semi-official Nieuwe Courant, commenting on the general war situation, says that even American enthusiasm has its limits.

"It would be crazy to imagine ," says the paper, "that the American business world will remain eternally optimistic and self-sacrificing about the war."

The Courant adds that when America declared war there were still hopes for further military deeds from revolutionary Russia, which were not fulfilled. The paper says that America's "delusions" must soon be destroyed.

"Seen in this light," it continues, "Mr. Lansing's declaration to the French journalists about the situation in Russia and Italy is comprehensible. But America is doing her best by sending Colonel House to Europe to discover how to win the war."

The paper remarks that China does not seem overjoyed about the American-Japanese agreement, and that this is understandable, as both powers negotiated about their influence in China without consulting China, and this shows that "trampling on and humiliating the weak are also the weapons of those who declare they are fighting for the rights of the small peoples of the earth." The Courant says China cannot do much against this, and has had to content herself with protests, but that in Japan the people also are not satisfied, and from the Japanese press it may be assumed that they consider too many concessions have been made to America.

NEUTRALS AGREEING TO TERMS FOR SHIPS

Concessions on Both Sides in Their Bargain to Get Supplies From Here.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Under the new agreements between the United States and the Northern European neutrals by which the American export bars are lowered and neutral merchant ships now idle in port return to active service, the neutrals will be supplied with the necessaries of life according to their need. It will be a give-and-take proposition and concessions will be made by both sides.

Holland and the Scandinavian countries undertake so far as possible to curtail their exports to Germany of iron ore, meat, fish, dairy products, and fats, and have agreed that nothing sent by the United States will be re-exported in kind or used in the place of material sent into Germany.

Foodstuffs as well as other commodities in this country owned by the neutrals will be sold to the United States, and the requirements of these countries will be met by apportionment as they show the need. Commodities sent abroad will be carried in the ships of the countries supplied, together with food for the Belgians and in some cases foodstuffs and other materials for allied countries.

The Dutch ships now in harbor on this side of the Atlantic will discharge their cargoes, much of which is grain which has deteriorated almost to the point of decay.

Compact for Scandinavia.

Members of the Swedish Mission and Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, representing the Norwegians, called at the State Department today and reached an understanding which, while far from meeting all of the demands of either side, was acceptable to both. It was agreed that the question of supply should not cover foodstuffs alone, but where the need was shown clothing and materials for manufacture as well.

For some time the European neutrals have felt that they were harshly used by this country through some of its measures, and it is hoped that the new agreements will bring about a better feeling. Strong representations were made showing the desperate position in which some of the people were placed, and the impossibility of shutting off at once all exports to Germany. Denmark's position is extremely difficult owing to her geographical situation, but hardly more so than that of Holland, through whose ports must go all supplies for Belgium.

It has been pointed out that the Rotterdam dock workers would hardly relish unloading ships for Belgian relief while they and their families had not enough to eat. Norway has little to give Germany except fish, as her nickel production has been virtually stopped through the destruction of the mines and machinery by fire.

Details of the task of allotting and shipping the supplies to the neutrals are yet to be worked out. Regular schedules of sailings will have to be made up, the question of priority being arranged with due consideration given to the most urgent needs.

To Get German Commodities.

It is understood that the first shipments to Holland will be in the ratio of one-third for the Dutch and two-thirds for Belgian relief. This will be carried in Dutch bottoms, which will bring back to this country some of the German commodities now held in Rotterdam and Amsterdam for the account of American owners.

Another situation that has been cleared up is the question of examination of cargoes. Under the new arrangement the ships will obtain clearance papers at American ports which will give them an unbroken voyage to their destination. Under an arrangement with the British Government the examination at the port of sailing will be accepted without a call at Halifax, thus saving many days' time and making that much more tonnage available.

The members of the Norwegian mission, except Dr. Nansen, have sailed for home, and the Swiss went a week ago. While Joost van Vollenhoven, head of the Dutch mission, is on his way to Holland, it is said he will return after he has made personal report to his Government. The two other members of the Dutch mission are here, as are the two Swedish Commissioners. They will aid the American officials in putting the agreement into operation.

Names War Insurance Advisers.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Two members of the Advisory Board for the administration of soldiers' and sailors' insurance were appointed today by Secretary McAdoo. They are W. A. Fraser of Omaha, Neb., President of the Woodmen of the World, and Professor James W. Glover of the University of Michigan, an insurance expert. A third member is to be appointed.

REMOVE 9 TEACHERS FROM HIGH SCHOOL

Board of Education Sustains Committee's Action Against De Witt Clinton Instructors.

SUSPEND 3, TRANSFER 6

Heated Argument Over Question of Loyalty Results in 33 Members Voting Against T. W. Churchill.

The meeting of the Board of Education yesterday resulted in a heated argument over the suspension of three teachers of the De Witt Clinton High School on charges of "holding views subversive of good discipline in the schools and which undermine good citizenship" and of the recommendation that six teachers from the same school be transferred to other high schools "for the good of the service." Ex-President Thomas W. Churchill said the charges against the teachers were indefinite and he did not believe the stigma of disloyalty ought to be put on the teachers before the charges were publicly announced. The recommendation to approve the action of the High School Committee was finally passed, after much discussion, by a vote of 33 to 1, Mr. Churchill being the only member to vote against it.

The six teachers and the schools to which they are transferred are as follows: Morris Barash, instructor of mathematics to Commercial High School; Joseph Jablowoner, instructor of mathematics, to New Utrecht High School; Israel Mirsky, instructor of mathematics, to Boys' High School; Cornelia V. Cleaveland, instructor in English, to Bryant High School; Charles Ham, English instructor, to Stuyvesant High School, and Michael Kurz, teacher of French, to Boys' High School.

The teachers suspended last Tuesday were Thomas Mufson, A. Henry Schneer and Samuel Schmalhausen. They were told that charges would be served on them calling for their appearance next Tuesday before the Committee on High Schools of which John Whalen is Chairman.

I. Montefiore Levy, a member of the Board of Education, who was not present at the meeting yesterday, said that while he had not investigated the charges made against the three suspended teachers he believed "inquisitorial" methods should be discouraged. He said it was unfortunate that while the three teachers bear excellent records and have served many years they have been suspended without pay and in a "summary fashion."

Mr. Levy said he understood that one the questions asked the teachers was whether they did not believe that the Prussian system of education, "which after all does achieve efficiency and does teach instinctive obedience," should be instituted in our school system. Mr. Levy said the question was improper, assuming something as a fact that must be proved and in addition, inasmuch as we are at war with Germany a teacher would be inclined to answer the question negatively.

"In today's NEW YORK TIMES the following question, said to have been asked of some of the teachers, appears: 'Don't you believe that the Jewish students, especially the Russians, need to be disciplined out of their individualism?' This assumes a state of facts which should be proved. Of a dozen teachers, six would answer one way and six another. The modern trend of education is to develop individuality. If we wish to create a lot of dummies we might as well use some mechanical method of turning out students, thus standardizing all the pupils and crushing their individuality. What chance would Lincoln have had if he had been disciplined out of his individualistic tendencies?"

The meeting of the board was opened by President Willcox reading a long statement, which said the Teachers' Council, an organization representing all teachers' societies, had, on his suggestion, determined to investigate and report on the question of loyalty in the schools. He also read a resolution passed at a meeting of teachers of the De Witt Clinton High School condemning as "undemocratic, unprofessional in motive, subversive of the proper spirit in the school system, and autocratic," the remarks of Mr. Whalen, in which he declared that if the disturbances of the high school students in protest against the longer school day did not cease he would close the schools.

In the debate on the transfer of the teachers, which followed Mr. Willcox's remarks, John Martin, a member of the board, thought it would be well to restore the suspended teachers till a report was received from the Teachers' Council. This was opposed on the ground that Dr. Tildsley's investigation was sufficient. Mr. Churchill objected to the transfer because the charges were "vague and indefinite," and in reply Dr. Tildsley said he found that one teacher was opposed to the sale of Liberty bonds on the ground that money for the war should be raised by taxing increased profits.

"I also found that a pupil in the De Witt Clinton High School," he added, "had written a letter in the form of a composition in which he attacked President Wilson, and when I asked another teacher what he would do about such a letter he said he would report it to the Principal. We want teachers to be positive in their Americanism, and these teachers are neutral in that regard. There is no personal charge of disloyalty against any of the transferred teachers, but we feel that their viewpoint will be greatly changed and improved by scattering them among different high schools."

Arthur S. Somers said: "Night after night preachment by high school teachers is spreading sedition and conspiracy. The conditions which obtain in some of the schools are plainly shown by the fact that not enough money was collected in them to buy even one fifty-dollar Liberty bond. We shall be remiss in our duty to our children and to the Government if we do not safeguard the coming generation by teaching loyalty and the relations which must exist between citizens and the Government."

Following is a list of some of the questions the teachers say they were asked during the course of the inquiry:

Should not a teacher inculcate instinctive obedience to superiors, no matter what the acts of the superior officers may be?
What is your opinion of the Bolsheviki?
Do you believe in revolution?
Are teachers qualified to criticise superiors?
Do you believe in internationalism?
Do you think a teacher ought to impose his views on pupils?
Is there not a presumption that whatever is is right?
Would you rather have Hillquit or Roosevelt for Mayor?
What would you do if a boy called President Wilson a murderer?
Do you accept Hillquit's treasonable utterances?
Does not the critical attitude in children need suppression?
Would you be willing for the boys in your class to discuss Liberty bonds pro and con?
In the matter of the longer day, should the teachers have been consulted?

The relation of the longer school day to the efficiency of the teachers will be considered at a meeting to be held this afternoon at 4:15 o'clock in the De Witt Clinton High School, Tenth Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street. It is believed that the trouble in the school will be a subject of discussion.

SALE OF CHINESE BROCADES, PORCELAINS, RUGS AND PAINTINGS, (gathered in Peking and Kyoto by Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Peterson,) today, Thursday, November 15, from 10 A. M. to 4 P. M., at 535 Park Ave. Entire profits applied to extending New York City school lunch service, which The Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor desires to enlarge as rapidly as possible.

Under-nourishment and malnutrition are undermining the physical condition of many of the public school children of New York and nullifying the labor of teachers. The Board of Health estimates that last Winter more than 100,000 New York school children suffered from under-feeding. Conditions this Fall, including the increasing cost of food, are far worse than a year ago. The present school lunch system is inadequate.

FIRST DRAFT CLASS TO EXCEED 2,000,000

Congress Likely to Include Men Who Have Become 21 Since Law Was Enacted.

QUESTIONNAIRE GIVEN OUT

Registrants Must Fill in Forms to be Divided Into Five Lots of Those Liable.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Best available estimates indicate that the first of the five classes into which all draft registrants are to be diveded will contain more than 2,000,000 men, subject for duty with the colors before any man in any other class will be called up.

It is regarded as practically certain that Congress will take up the question of extending the draft law to cover men who have attained the age of 21 since it was enacted. Should that be done, and provision made for the registration thereafter of every man as he reached that age, probably 600,000 would be added to Class 1 automatically by next March. In that event no present plans for the army would reach the men in Class 2.

Officials have already considered the possibility that Congress will decide to take in these additional young men. Some fair system by which they may be registered, classified, and assigned to places will be devised. New regulations, to be published shortly, probably will set a way in which this can be done.

New regulations governing passports for registered men become effective Nov. 20. After that date the nearest local board may issue passport permits without reference to district boards as is now required. Passports are not necessary to enter Canada.

As the first step in the new classification of selected men Provost Marshal General Crowder has directed local exemption boards to compile the information contained in their docket sheets and registration cards. The boards will need for this work from five to fifteen assistants, working from three days to two weeks, according to the size of the district.

The assistants must be volunteers trained for this class of work, and a call was sent out today by the Council of National Defense to its State Councils to procure the needed volunteers. High school teachers are suggested as the persons best adapted to meet the emergency.

Five Classes Announced.

The five classes into which 9,000,000 men registered for military duty—and those who are registered hereafter—are divided, and the order in which they will be called for service were officially announced today in the Provost Marshal General's questionnaire, which every registered man must fill out and file.

The order shows some change from the tentative draft published some time ago. Contrary to some published reports it does not exempt married men as a class, but it does place married men with dependent wives and children far down on the list of liables. In fact, the questionnaire indicates that only men of the first class will be called to the colors except in the gravest emergency.

The five official classifications of registrants follow:

CLASS I.

(A) Single man without dependent relatives.

(B) Married man, with or without children, or father of motherless children, who has habitually failed to support his family.

(C) Married man dependent on wife for support.

(D) Married man, with or without children, or father of motherless children; man not usefully engaged, family supported by income independent of his labor.

(E) Unskilled farm laborer.

(F) Unskilled industrial laborer. Registrant by or in respect of whom no deferred classification is claimed or made. Registrant who fails to submit questionnaire and in respect of whom no deferred classification is claimed or made.

All registrants not included in any other division in this schedule.

CLASS II.

(A) Married man with children or father of motherless children, where such wife or children or such motherless children are not mainly dependent upon his labor for support for the reason that there are other reasonably certain sources of adequate support, (excluding earnings or possible earnings from the labor of the wife,) available, and that the removal of the registrant will not deprive such dependents of support.

(B) Married man, without children, whose wife, although the registrant is engaged in a useful occupation, is not mainly dependent upon his labor for support, for the reason that the wife is skilled in some special class of work which she is physically able to perform and in which she is employed, or in which there is an immediate opening for her under conditions that will enable her to support herself decently and without suffering or hardship.

(C) Necessary skilled farm laborer in necessary agricultural enterprise.

(D) Necessary skilled industrial laborer in necessary industrial enterprise.

CLASS III.

(A) Man with dependent children (not his own) but toward whom he stands in relation of parent.

(B) Man with dependent, aged or infirm parents.

(C) Man with dependent, helpless brothers or sisters.

(D) County or municipal officer.

(E) Highly trained fireman or policeman, at least three years in service of municipality.

(F) Necessary Custom House clerk.

(G) Necessary employe of United States in transmission of the mails.

(H) Necessary artificer or workman in United States armory or arsenal.

(I) Necessary employe in service of United States.

(J) Necessary assistant, associate, or hired manager of necessary agricultural enterprise.

(K) Necessary highly specialized technical or mechanical expert of necessary industrial enterprise.

(L) Necessary assistant or associate manager of necessary industrial enterprise.

CLASS IV.

(A) Man whose wife or children are mainly dependent on his labor for support.

(B) Mariner actually employed in sea service of citizen or merchant in the United States.

(C) Necessary sole managing, controlling, or directing head of necessary agricultural enterprise.

(D) Necessary sole managing, controlling, or directing head of necessary industrial enterprise.

CLASS V.

(A) Officers, legislative, executive, or judicial, of the United States or of State, Territory, or District of Columbia.

(B) Regular or duly ordained minister of religion.

(C) Students who on May 18, 1917, was preparing for ministry in recognized school.

(D) Persons in military or naval service of United States.

(E) Alien enemy.

(F) Resident alien (not an enemy) who claims exemption.

(G) Person totally and permanently physically or mentally unfit for military service.

(H) Person morally unfit to be a soldier of the United States.

(I) Licensed pilot actually employed in the pursuit of his vocation.

Member of well recognized religious sect or organization, organized and existing on May 18, 1917, whose then existing creed or principles forbid its members to participate in war in any form, and whose religious convictions are against war or participation therein.

Advisory Boards Organizing.

Legal and medical advisory boards now being organized in every community will aid the registrant in making his answers. He will indicate in what occupations he considers himself expert and from that list it is purposed to create separate groups of men trained in any particular trade or profession should the need arise for them.

The questions on the subject of dependents are framed to meet every possible circumstance and to draw out every bit of information that may be of value to the boards in fixing the class to which a man is to be assigned. No detail of the status of dependents, or of possible or actual outside sources of income, has been overlooked.

Seven days are allowed registrants after receipt of the questionnaire to fill it out and return it to the local board. The registrant, after filling in the inside of his questionnaire, indicates on the front the class to which he believes he should be assigned. If the board agrees, there is no further action necessary by either party until the individual comes due for military service and is called up for physical examination. If the board disagrees and places the registrant in another class, the machinery for appeal to the district board is set in motion automatically.

Judge Chambers declined to state what these results were, but the rumor is that the executives of the labor organizations agreed to the mediation features of the proposal, and it is inferred that the conference with the President which is planned for 2:30 P. M., Thursday, will have reference to the arbitration features of the proposed agreement.

"It is understood that these labor executives are unwilling to commit their organizations unconditionally to arbitration, but that at the White House conference on the 22d the executives will be ready to discuss with the President some plan by which it is hoped an adjustment will be reached which will at least for the duration of the war prevent any interruption of railroad transportation.

"Most Serious Situation."

"Judge Chambers did not feel authorized to say what subjects would be discussed at the conference and declined even to intimate what results were anticipated. He regards the conference as involving a most serious situation, as the transportation problem is perhaps the most important one connected with the successful prosecution of the war measures of the Administration. The Switchmen's Union of North America, it is understood, has agreed to the mediation and arbitration proposals as a whole, and it is believed that that is the attitude also of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers.

"The proposal is to be submitted to the conference committee of managers of the railways, and it is anticipated that the railroad executives will agree to both mediation and arbitration."

The White House conference will consider the arbitration features of an agreement proposed in Cleveland on Thursday by Judge Chambers, who returned here today. It is understood that the labor executives are unwilling to commit their organizations unconditionally to arbitration, but an adjustment is hoped for which at least for the duration of the war will prevent any interruption of railroad transportation. The new demands, the railway managements say, will amount to $109,000,000 a year, and are more serious than the eight-hour demand of a year ago.

Trainmen's Leader Reticent.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 14.—W. G. Lee, President of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, when asked today what position the trainmen would take in reference to agreeing to arbitrate all questions of controversy during the war, declined to discuss this subject until after the meeting with President Wilson, but did intimate strongly that his organization was unqualifiedly opposed to the plan of arbitration provided for in the Newlands law.

Mr Lee confirmed the report that a meeting of the four chief executives of the transportation brotherhoods with President Wilson was to take place on Nov. 22, and also confirmed the statement that the question of mediation and arbitration probably would be made the basis of discussion at the meeting. He stated that many thousand transportation employés of classes represented by his organization received only $2.67 for a day of eight hours, and that it was absolutely impossible for them to maintain the standard of living in effect prior to the war without a substantial increase in pay.

The labor leader insisted the trainmen were just as patriotic as any class of workmen, and that no fewer than 2,000 members of the brotherhood were today in the military or naval service. In order to insure 100 per cent. patriotism of workingmen, he said, they must be paid at rates that would keep them and their families from being hungry.

W. S. Carter, President of the Brotherhood of Firemen and Enginemen, denied that a meeting of the brotherhood would be held here this week to decide whether the firemen would join with the conductors and brakemen in their proposal to submit demands for large wage increases.

The general chairmen of the firemen's brotherhood, eastern association, last week appointed a sub-committee of six to represent the eastern division and take up the wage question with similar sub-committees, if appointed, representing the southeastern and western associations. The southeastern association will meet in Washington about Nov. 27 to consider the matter. The western association probably will meet at a later date.

ROAD MANAGERS TO CONFER.

Expected to Get Companies' Side Before the President.

Several railway officials left New York yesterday for Washington for the resumption today of the hearings before the Interstate Commerce Commission on the freight rate case. An official of the Railway Executives' Advisory Committee said that if the roads got the increases asked for the increased revenues would scarcely pay the new wage increases asked by the conductors and trainmen.

The gathering of railroad managers for the rate hearing will bring a conference in Washington over the new demands of the brotherhoods. The brotherhood leaders are to meet the President on Nov. 22, and the railroad executives desire that he shall not then be unfamiliar with their side of the case. Fairfax Harrison, President of the Southern Railway, is Chairman of the Railroads' War Board, and Daniel Willard, President of the Baltimore & Ohio, is a member of an advisory commission of the Council of National Defense. It is considered not unlikely that they will call to the President's attention the effect of further financial burdens upon the railroads at this time.

Another factor in the situation is that the demands of the train employes on all the roads for more money may hasten an application for higher rates by the Western and Southern railroads. The present rate case involves only the Eastern carriers.

Railroad men here issued a warning against the opinion held in some quarters in Washington that the brotherhoods' heads had promised not to strike while the country was at war. They said the labor leaders only had promised they would submit the question to the United States Board of Mediation and Conciliation.

The railroad managers admit they do not expect a strike or Government operation of the roads. They believe President Wilson will not permit a strike at this time. It was recalled yesterday that one of the methods discussed in 1916 for the prevention of the threatened strike was for the Government to call into the military service all the men operating trains and force them to stay on duty.

MOBILIZATION ORDERS SOON.

Rest of the First Draft Increment to be Called Out.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Mobilization orders for the remainder of the national army men included in the first increment, held up pending completion of the camps and the receipt of a full supply of overcoats, will be issued within the next week or two. Secretary Baker said today that, as thousands of overcoats were being delivered daily, the supply soon would be sufficient for the men yet to be called.

With one or two exceptions the cantonments are nearly complete, and as the plans call for more buildings than are necessary to house the number of men drafted as yet, there will be plenty of room, even before all barracks are finished.

The men at the Northern cantonments were supplied with overcoats immediately on their arrival. At some of the Southern cantonments this was not considered necessary because of milder weather.

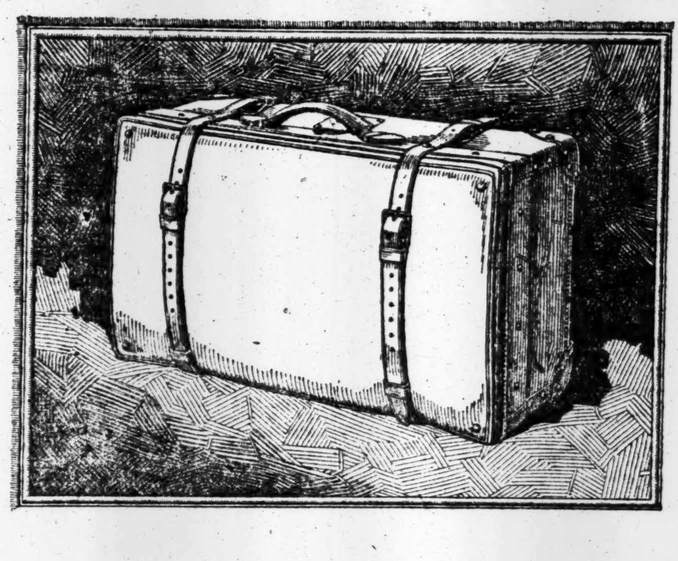
Men's Blanket Robes at $2.95

Remarkably priced. Made of Beacon Blanket Cloth in Indian and Jacquard figured designs, all sizes. None C. O. D., exchanged or on approval.



THIS large Bellows-top Portmanteau will be favored by those who are avoiding the discomforts of railroad war-time trunk service.

The leather is specially selected and extra heavy cow hide. Oak tanned, and free from acid.

The frame is of square steel rods and heavy steel bands, welded, riveted and reinforced with stiff basswood.

The hand stitching is exceedingly close, with unusually heavy pure linen thread, hand waxed. The solid leather corner caps are brass-riveted, through copper washers. The large, easy handle is padded with cow hide. The locks are of solid brass, brass-riveted, and hold the case tightly closed. The handle loops are of solid brass. The straps are 1¼ inches wide, of harness leather.

This case is worthy of bearing the two marks we have placed upon it—our trademark and our name.

M'CARTHY RECALLS 500 ENEMY PERMITS

CAN'T WORK IN DISTRICT

Marshal Goes to Washington to Confer with Attorney General on Registration of Germans.

United States Marshal McCarthy left last night for Washington and today will confer with Attorney General Gregory on the tightening at once of the lines restricting the movement of alien enemies. Before his departure Marshal McCarthy sent out letters to about 500 Germans holding permits to live or work at or near the Manhattan water front below Thirty-third Street, directing them to repor immediaely a his office, so their permits can be amended to deny hem he waterfron privileges. Under the amended permits Germans living on streets paralleling the North and East Rivers or on east and west streets within a block or so of a waterfront must move, and those working in the barred zone will have to seek employment elsewhere.

Marshal McCarthy said that he would try to avoid inflicting hardships by allowing the aliens a reasonable time in which to move or change their places of employment, but all would have to comply with the order within a few days. As soon as the Germans living and working on water fronts below Twenty-third Street have been dealt with the restriction of permits will be extended to other waterfront sections of the city.

The next move contemplated by Marshal McCarthy is the removal of all alien enemies from employment by lighting, heating, transportation, and other public service corporations. Possible deeds of German agents employed in a lighting company forced consideration of this question. A representative of the New York Edison Company called upon Marshal McCarthy yesterday and assured him that his company was willing to coöperate in any plan devised to the extent of discharging Germans now on its payrolls. According to report all of the public service corporations would comply with a request from the Marshal to eliminate German employes.

Whether the companies shall be requested to take this action will be one of the questions discussed by Marshal McCarthy and Attorney General Gregory. Another matter to be considered will be the problem of registering all enemy aliens. Reports that President Wilson might issue a proclamation directing such registration persisted yesterday and Marshal McCarthy, it was learned, is in favor of the plan. If he has charge of registration here it is likely that he will ask the Police Department to provide space in its stations where Government clerks may register alien enemies in each precinct in the city. Those who register will have to report to the police periodically, about every seventy-two hours, for the duration of the war, if the ideas of Federal authorities here are carried out.

While the matter of registration of Germans by the Government is being considered, the American Defense Society is undertaking to register and classify as to nationality and loyalty all residents of the United States through the American Vigilance Corps. Richard M. Hurd, Chairman of the society's Board of Trustees, in making public the society's plans yesterday, said that recent events made it plain that the German method of propaganda which "had been effective in Russia and Italy was now being attempted in this country with an alarming degree of success." He enumerated some of these events and pointed to the need of the local Vigilance Corps by saying that "it is known that in this country alone there are probably several million enemies representing Germany, Austria, Bulgaria, and Turkey and other countries sympathetic with Prussian autocracy." Continuing, Mr. Hurd said:

"If Americans mean to stand by the men at the front, whose lives are already being sacrificed, and to stand by their Government, the opportunity is offered in the additional service they can give to this work of the American Defense Society. The plan of organization undertaken by the society and recommended to loyal Americans provides for the enrollment of a small American Vigilance Corps in every city and town which shall classify all residents under the following terms: Loyal, disloyal, doubtful, and unknown.

"Following the general classification of citizens the committee is urged to make the further designation of the following list: Alien enemy, pro-German, and anti-Government."

Max Mangelsdorf, an employe in an uptown department store, was interned because he talked too much. It was said that he boasted to his fellow employes that Germany would win the war. They reported him to the Federal agents.

Robert Fritchie, twenty years old, a German bartender, was taken in charge by detectives and turned over to the Federal authorities. He was employed in a saloon on Twelfth Avenue, opposite Government piers and those of the Italian Steamship Company. He had a permit to work in the saloon, but, according to the police, he recently made trips to Spartanburg, S. C., and Jacksonville, Fla., without first obtaining the required permission from the Government.

ORDERS RIGID CONTROL ON INCOMING ALIENS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Announcement was made by Secretary Lansing today that a rigid control is now exercised over all persons entering the United States in order to prevent, as far as possible, enemy agents and persons inimical to the United States from coming into the country.

To make this control effective a joint order has been issued by the Secretaries of State and of Labor requiring passports and certain information from aliens who propose to come to the United States from foreign countries. The State Department also requires every American citizen to bear a valid passport. But passports are not required from persons, whether American or alien, who leave Canada, Newfoundland, or Bermuda for the United States.

Americans coming to the United States from Mexico are required to have their passports verified by the American Consul stationed in the district from which they leave for this country. Aliens must have their passports vised by the American Consular officer.

Consular officers are also required to inform prospective immigrants of the provisions of the new immigration act, which prohibits the entrance into the United States of certain classes of persons so that those who would be liable to exclusion on arrival may be informed of that possibility in advance and be saved from the unnecessary journey and the inconveniences and hardships that would follow their exclusion. Consular officers are not, however, authorized to refuse to vise passports of prospective immigrants unless there are other reasons to justify such a refusal other than their liability to exclusion under the immigration act.

SEES CHURCH SPLIT ON WAR REPRISALS

Father McMahon Says Catholic Theologians Hold Opposite Views.

ASKS SUSPENDED JUDGMENT

Cites Pope's Praise of Self-Respect of English in Not Replying to German Raids.

The Rev. Joseph McMahon, one of the best known Catholic priests in America, sometimes referred to as "the mouthpiece of the Catholic Church" and a contributor to various Catholic publications, addressing the members of the Catholic Library Association on the subject of "The Morality of Reprisals" at Delmonico's yesterday afternoon, took the attitude that it would be rash at the present time for any one to pass sentence one way or the other until some higher opinion was pronounced on the subject, and pleaded for a suspension of judgment in the meantime. Father McMahon, however, declared that the subject of war reprisals had divided the Catholic theologians into two schools; the first, which believed in reprisals for cruel acts on the ground that the side that started them was responsible for the condition, and the other, which maintained that reprisals were unlawful.

Father McMahon elucidated the arguments used at the present time in England for the necessity of reprisals and held they were untenable. He said that recently he had been confronted by a statement when reading a theological work on war published in the sixteenth century which said, among other things, "Sometimes where there is grave necessity a commanding General may give over to rapine and loot a whole city." He confessed that he was stupefied on reading such a statement in a book on Catholic theology, but later read that other theologians had said the same thing.

Father McMahon said that Pope Benedict had praised Cardinal Gaskin, the British Cardinal in Rome, for the self-respect of the English people for not replying to the German airplane and Zeppelin raids in kind. The question of reprisals, he said, came down to the question of whether it was lawful to kill noncombatants.

"Is it lawful to drop bombs on open towns where there can be no destruction of military stores, where the only object to be obtained is the death of innocent victims?" he asked. "That involves the fifth commandment, 'Thou shalt not kill,' which forbids the direct killing of any innocent person. In some cases killing is lawful, say the killing of an unjust aggressor or the killing of a criminal by the State, exercising the power of God. But where there is a killing of the innocent, God comes first.

"The moral teaching of the Catholic Church in this regard is the teaching of the civilized world. The President stated the case so clearly when he said that the sinking of the Lusitania and the submarine warfare by the Germans is against the conscience of humanity because it is against natural law.

"We in this country are self-contradictory, for we are behind the President when he protests against the sinking of the Lusitania and we sit by when a physician in Chicago takes the life of an innocent child. Taking life like that is against natural law. How contradictory it is to stand by while an innocent child is put to death while we are at war to defend the rights of humanity. No Catholic moral theologian can be found to justify under any circumstances the direct killing of any innocent person. That is morally unlawful.

"And so in reprisals; the thing aimed at is not destruction of military works, but the killing of innocent persons. Lives and property of noncombatants are sacred and must not be taken. Where property is taken due payment must be made."

Three pleas urged by those who believe in reprisals were then analyzed by Father McMahon. The first was that reprisals were justified on the ground of necessity as the only way that the end of the war could be brought on. Father McMahon said that the enemy of England had not been deterred by reprisals, and instanced the reprisals by Germany for the allied raids on Karlsruhe, in which double the number of airplanes had been used by Germany against France and England. The placing of German prisoners of war on British hospital ships, he maintained, did not cause the German submarines to refrain from sinking the hospital ships, in fact, it seems to him that the destruction of hospital ships increased.

"It has been said that the people of the whole nation, whose airmen have been guilty of such raids, are guilty alike because they applauded the exploits of the airmen," the priest went on to say. "That cannot be urged against the German people, for we must not forget to stand by President Wilson, who said in that supreme document of the world that we must make a careful distinction between the German people and their Government. Many among us may be guilty of setting aside this distinction. We have no means of knowing how much the German people know of these things."

31 MORE PICKETS SENT TO WORKHOUSE

Must Serve Terms of Six Days to Six Months for Demonstrations at White House.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Thirty-one militant suffragists, members of the Woman's Party, were sentenced in the police court today to serve jail terms ranging from six days to six months in the District of Columbia Workhouse at Occoquan, Va., for participating in picketing demonstrations at the White House. Miss Lucy Burns of New York, Vice Chairman of the Woman's Party, whom Judge Mullowney called the "ringleader," received the maximum penalty.

Mrs. Mary A. Nolan of Jacksonville, Fla., who is more than 70 years old, was sentenced to serve six days in jail. Mrs. John Winters Brannan of New York and Mrs. Lawrence Lewis of Philadelphia were sent to the workhouse for sixty days. They had taken part in all three demonstrations this week and last. Miss Hilda Blumberg of New York, Miss Lucy Daniels of Grafton, W. Va., and Miss Matilda Young of Washington were sentenced to serve fifteen days. The others received sentences of thirty days each. They were: posed to have had much to do with the determination to call the conference to discuss woman patronage. There is no doubt that the politicians would like to see all the women turned down, and all the good salary jobs filled with men. But since women are voters, the politicians must be cautious and not offend them, for if they should combine they could outvote the men of either party. So the patronage conference will seek some equitable basis of job distribution between men and women.

MANY STATE JOBS TO GO TO WOMEN

Women who worked for the re-election of Mayor Mitchel as members of the Woman's Municipal League have issued a post mortem analysis of the causes of defeat in pamphlet form. Mrs. Henry Bruère, wife of the former City Chamberlain, is President of the League. According to the pamphlet the voters, while not preferring bungling to clean and honest government, sincerely believed that the defeat of Mayor Mitchel meant a victory for democracy and popular government. "This was partly due to his inexcusable bigotry in claiming during the campaign that his particular brand of patriotism was the only kind and that all who opposed him were miscreants and traitors," the statement declares. "While remarkable social service reforms have been effected in city departments during the last four years, it is undeniably true that Mr. Mitchel's chief concern was in administrative efficiency, rather than in a social program. Clever and unscrupulous as were the Tammany leaders, the fatal stigma which they succeeded in fastening upon Mr. Mitchel of being the rich man's candidate and the tool of the interests could not have persisted had Mr. Mitchel and his associates not been confined in their ideas and sympathies by fatal class limitations and lack of sympathetic understanding of popular feeling and needs. There was too much benevolent autocracy about the method by which reforms were instituted. Mr. Mitchel knew he was right—and in the majority of cases he was—and secure in that conviction he went ahead. But the public will not be served that way.

Urge Women to Demand Publicity.

"The new woman voters will give tremendous service if they will not only keep current day-by-day watch of official acts, but also insist that public officials explain and give widest publicity to new policies to be adopted and their significance in terms of human welfare."

Men and women will labor jointly to bring about better civic conditions and promote good government in the Greater New York Civic League which was formed yesterday at a meeting held at the Hotel Astor. Mrs. Sophia Loebinger was elected President, with a Vice President for each borough as follows: Manhattan, Miss Erna M. Broonen; Brooklyn, John D. Rosenbrock; Bronx, Mrs. Josephine Wolf; Richmond, Joseph McInerny; Queens, Mrs. Elizabeth O'Connor. Charles T. Rozelle was elected Secretary and Mrs. Amos T. Helms Treasurer.

Judge Hylan said yesterday that he was not as yet giving any serious consideration to appointments. It was learned that Arthur J. O'Keeffe, who was a Deputy Police Commissioner under Commissioner Bingham, and Douglas I. McKay, also a Deputy during the Bingham régime, both were candidates for Police Commissioner. Assistant District Attorney William Harmon Black is a candidate for Corporation Counsel and Michael F. Loughman for Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas, and Electricity.

OFFICE FOR MRS. YAWGER.

Head of Women's Republican Committee Joins Probation Commission.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 14.—Plans are rapidly being perfected for the Women's Republican State Committee, which Mrs. John Francis Yawger, President of the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs, is to form in every county in the State, under the guidance of George A. Glynn, Chairman of the Republican State Committee.

Mrs. Yawger is also to be named a member of the State Probation Commission, and her commission is all ready for the signature of Governor Whitman when he returns to Albany tomorrow. For several days, during the annual meeting of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs, she has been the guest of Governor and Mrs. Whitman at the Executive Mansion. It was while she was there yesterday that she informed the Governor that she would accept the appointment he had tendered her, and also work with Mr. Glynn in forming the Republican State Committee, which will have not only county organizations, but will eventually go into every election district in the State.

Women who are attending the State Federation of Women's Clubs are jubilant over the appointment and are praising the Governor for his action in recognizing the new status of women in this way.

Chairman Glynn of the Republican State Committee said tonight that Mrs. Yawger would look the ground over and make a detailed report to the Republican State Committee. Then the men's committee will examine the report and determine what is best to be done.

"This State Committee is not only for the women who favored suffrage," said Mr. Glynn tonight, "but it is for all women of the State who wish to be identified with the Republican Party. We cannot expect perfection at first, but eventually there will be a superb organization of the women of the State.

"We assume that all women in the State will want to vote, now that the right of suffrage has been extended to them. We welcome this, and we want them all to come in and exercise their right and privilege.

"Mrs. Yawger is a level-headed woman who knows how to organize," declared Mr. Glynn. "She has a large acquaintance in the State, and this will stand her in good stead when she goes into any county and plans for the organization."

CALL SUFFRAGE CONVENTION.

Annual Meeting of State Party Will Be Held Here Next Week.

A call for the forty-ninth annual convention of the New York State Woman Suffrage Party to meet at the Ritz-Carlton from Nov. 20 to Nov. 22 was issued by Mrs. Normal De R. Whitehouse yesterday. The call reads:

> The forty-ninth annual convention will not only celebrate the victory but will consider how to make it most useful to the State, to the women still unenfranchised in other States, and to the country at large.
>
> The New York State Woman Suffrage Party invites every man and woman who believes in democracy and who wants to help prove its worth to come to its forty-ninth annual convention.

Mrs. Whitehouse will be the guest of honor at the Wednesday evening banquet at the Biltmore on Nov. 21. With the banquet as the high water mark of human enthusiasm, the executive session on Thursday morning comes to decide the question of certain important amendments to the constitution of the State suffrage party necessitated by the new status of members as voters.

The President of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, gives a final convention address on Thursday afternoon, Nov. 22.

Chairmen of committees are as follows: Local Arrangements, Mrs. E. R. Strange; Decorations, Miss Edith Morgan; Seating and Ushers, Miss Hilda Hirsche; Pages, Miss Charlotte Delafield; Information, Mrs. Frederick Greene; Literature and Supplies, Mrs. F. E. Ferguson. The General Convention Committees are: Credentials, Miss Fanny Lawson; Elections, Mrs. Joseph Deane; Special Finance, Mrs. George Pratt; Jrogram, L. Tiffany.

"The Plant Department started work Saturday noon, and worked Sunday. By Monday noon they had two circuits run and instruments mounted in soap boxes on a tree.

"The Plant people beat the contractors to the job and had service ready for them when they arrived.

"75,652 feet of wire were required."

From a report by one of our Local Managers on preliminary work done at a mobilization camp.

THIS report is typical of a great many of the smaller installations made at the training camps in order that the Government might have the necessary telephone service ready to proceed with the work of camp building.

In some cases complete telephone systems with cable, central offices, switchboards, public telephones and sufficient equipment to serve the requirements of camps to contain 40,000 men, have been provided in record time and before the actual construction of the camp has been completed.

In spite of difficult conditions due to shortage of raw materials necessary in the telephone business, this company is sparing neither effort nor expense to provide any necessary service.

It certainly is the thing for skin-troubles

The speed with which Resinol usually stops irritation and burning and heals skin ailments is a revelation to sufferers. They are used to long, tedious treatments, and they find that the first application of this soothing ointment usually ends the discomfort and makes the skin look clearer and healthier.

If you really want to get rid of that tormenting skin-trouble, why don't you give Resinol a try-out, anyhow?

Resinol

Doctors have prescribed Resinol for many years, so it is by no means an experiment. It contains nothing that could irritate the tenderest skin. Resinol is also excellent for cuts, burns, scalds, chafings, and a dozen other things for which a gentle, healing dressing is needed. Comes in two sizes (50c and $1)—the larger is the more economical. Sold by all druggists.

LABOR AUTOCRATIC PRESIDENT IS TOLD

Steel Founders Telegraph to Mr. Wilson That Demands May Nullify War Efforts.

STRIKES HANDICAP WORK

Manufacturers' Executive Declares Government "Is Sanctifying an Industrial Status of Disastrous Socialism."

In a telegram adopted by a unanimous vote, and sent to President Wilson, the National Founders' Association, at its twenty-first annual convention, held at the Hotel Astor yesterday, while pledging the loyalty and resources of the members to the nation, asserted that their efforts in supplying the essentials for military equipment would be without avail "unless the present autocratic demands of some branches of labor for purely selfish advantage are dissipated."

The telegram to the President was prepared at the close of a day devoted by the 450 members of the association in attendance to consideration of many problems brought by the war, chief of which was the labor problem. The convention, coming so closely upon President Wilson's appearance before the American Federation of Labor at Buffalo, has the effect of focusing the attention of manufacturers in many other lines throughout the country on the deliberations of the founders, who employ tens of thousands of workmen in industries absolutely essential for the speedy winning of the war.

The message sent to President Wilson not only defined the views of the association as such, but would, it was believed by its senders, reflect accurately the attitude of American manufacturers as a whole in the present war crisis. While making it plain that the processes of labor should not be interfered with, the telegram insisted that the founders' organization was a unit with the declaration of the National Council of Defense that industrial and labor conditions as existing before the war should continue for the duration of hostilities.

Message Sent to the President.

The telegram to President Wilson was as follows:

The President, White House, Washington, D. C.:

The National Founders' Association, composed of nearly six hundred manufacturers operating iron and steel foundries, and employing scores of thousands of workmen, in annual convention assembled, unanimously pledges to you and our country the unswerving loyalty of its members and the resources of its industrial plants.

To gain that measure of efficiency requisite for the proper equipment of our army and navy, we stand squarely on the platform that the processes of labor shall not be interfered with, and trust employes throughout the various industries of the nation may quickly be brought to a realization of the fact that autocracy of labor is fully as disturbing to the welfare of mankind as is the autocracy of government.

With full and complete support of their employes the manufacturers of our country will back the boys in the trenches to the limit without thought of emolument, but they will be powerless unless the present autocratic demands of some branches of labor for purely selfish advantage are dissipated.

We are unqualifiedly in accord with the declaration of the Council of National Defense that industrial and labor conditions as existing prior to the war should continue for the duration of the war. Any action to the contrary, whether of industry shirking its duty or labor interposing restrictions of production and attempting to change existing conditions, should be regarded as treason and punished as such.

We realize that there must be absolutely loyal co-operation between employer and employe until this war is won; that patriotism must be unsullied and uninfluenced by personal gains and selfish consideration; that the mutual pledges of representatives of the workingmen and directors of industries must be kept inviolate until a righteous peace is re-established on the earth.

THE NATIONAL FOUNDERS' ASSOCIATION.

William H. Barr of Buffalo, President of the Founders' Association, made the opening address to the convention. He said that the times demanded prompt and effective action on the part of the manufacturers. Turning to the labor situation, President Barr said that the members of the Founders' Association had faced more aggravated, intense labor demands than ever before in the history of the industry.

"Contributing as we will do to the uttermost," he said, "we believe that our country does not possess citizens more deeply concerned, more soberly, earnestly or industriously patriotic than the members of our association. In defense of our common rights in this time of national peril we stand as a unit, and we owe a debt of sincere gratitude to those members of our association who, supporting these rights, and at no small cost in moral and financial effort, have faced more aggravated, intense labor demands than ever before in our history, either as an association or a nation."

President Barr went on to say that certain labor leaders were at first fearful that national necessities would compel them to make concessions to the Government. Accordingly, he said a convention was held in Washington behind closed doors and a program adopted. At this point, President Barr made the following reference:

"A figurehead was selected to draw to himself all the vapor of enthusiasm which the American Federation of Labor could manufacture, under cover of which the international unions, acting like submarines, attacked American industry. Fortunately, the public is beginning to understand that such action is consistent and true to union ethics."

Calls Situation Serious.

Continuing, Mr. Barr said:

"The real situation is a serious one, which is apparently not at all comprehended. If we realized that since our own declaration of war there have been called nearly 2,000 strikes, and if we understood all conditions accompanying these demands, we would know that our Government after only six months of hostilities is sanctifying an industrial status of disastrous socialism similar to that from which England emerged only with a supreme effort after two years."

W. H. Dervoort, President of the Metal Trades Association, made an address on Government contracts under eight-hour restriction, and pointed out many of the difficulties complained of by manufacturers. At the afternoon session there were addresses and discussions on topics bearing upon the war and its relation to Government contracts, industrial undertakings, the railway situation, and the position of the farmer in the present crisis.

Governor Whitman was the chief speaker at a dinner last night of the Founders' Association at the Hotel Astor. He said that a few days ago President Wilson told him that we had a large force on foreign soil, and the Governor felt confident that a similar number could be mustered in with as little friction as the first force.

"Distinction between those who have money and those who have not, lines of demarkation between race and color, have been wiped out, and I believe that the people of America are stronger for the war than they were when Germany first threw down the gauntlet," he said.

The convention plans to close its sessions this afternoon. Topics of trade interest will be taken up, and at their conclusion a report will be submitted by the Resolutions Committee. This report is expected to contain pronouncements regarding the policy to be pursued by the National Founders' Association in coping with the labor situation. Adjournment will be reached following the election of officers.

GOVERNMENT WILL ENROLL STRIKERS

Those at Watertown Arsenal to be Employed Under Civil Service Laws.

OVER CONTRACTORS' HEADS

Bay State Strikers Vote to Stay Out, but Federation Heads Believe They Will Capitulate.

BOSTON, Nov. 14.—Further delay in construction work at the Watertown Arsenal, due to strikes of union workmen employed by private contractors, is to be obviated by hiring mechanics and laborers as Government employes, according to an announcement tonight by Lieut. Col. T. C. Dickson, in command of the arsenal. The announcement says the employment office has been made ready to take in immediately structural ironworkers, hoisting engineers, electricians, plumbers, and steamfitters, who will be employed in the manner described by civil service laws and regulations.

"Several days ago," says the statement, "the War Department directed the commanding officer of the arsenal to employ as Government employes such numbers of the building trades that had struck as might be necessary to vigorously prosecute the completion of buildings that are so urgently needed."

Action on this order was delayed by the commandant "with the expectation that the general building trades of Boston and Quincy would follow the advice of officials of the American Federation of Labor." The action taken today by the local building trades in reasserting the intention to stand for the closed shop principle, left the Arsenal authorities no alternative but to carry out the instructions of the War Department, says the statement.

It is announced that members of the building trades will have union pay, union hours, and union overtime rates, and that there will be no change in this respect, as all contractors doing work at the arsenal have had the same rate and hour schedule. The statement suggests that, as the contractors' employes who struck are familiar with the work, their return would enable operations to be resumed promptly, and they "could therefore render excellent service to their country by applying immediately to the Civil Service Board."

The fact that the Federal laws make it a misdemeanor, punishable by fine and imprisonment, for any one to interfere with an arsenal employe is also pointed out in the statement.

Strikes of union mechanics on Government work in this city, Chelsea, and Watertown will be continued "until open shop conditions are eliminated," according to a vote of the joint councils of the building trades unions here today. After the meeting a statement was issued denying a report that officers of the American Federation of Labor had ordered the men to return to work. The statement says:

"Our committee, which represented us at the Buffalo conference of the general Presidents of the national building department of the American Federation of Labor, reported to us that no settlement of the local strikes had been ordered at that conference. It simply named the various general Presidents and our own local representatives as a committee to confer with President Wilson at a date in the near future and lay the entire dispute before him for judgment.

"In view of this report it was voted to reaffirm our former actions, whereby we voted to remain off all Government work until the open shop conditions prevailing at the Watertown Arsenal and at Squantum are eliminated, inasmuch as the conditions are even worse now than at the time the men were removed.

"If President Wilson does not eliminate the open shop conditions in our midst the men are determined to stay out. They will not work with alien and non-citizen labor, many of whom have refused to take out their first papers. They are willing to waive this providing union citizen labor cannot be had."

The strikes of mechanics at the Boston Navy Yard, the Watertown Arsenal, the Squantum shipbuilding plant, the Chelsea Naval Hospital, and the Federal Appraisers Stores here will be extended, it is said, to mechanics employed at the Government airplane station at Chatham, the joint council today having voted to call out 200 mechanics at the latter place.

LABOR HEADS SAY STRIKERS WILL OBEY

Orders to Bay State Men to Return to Work Were Delayed, They Explain.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 14.—Delegates to the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor tonight attended a dinner with vaudeville accessories, the first of the social functions of the gathering, in something like a festive spirit; for what threatened to be a serious obstacle to the carrying out of the patriotic decisions of the leaders of the federation seemed to have been removed this afternoon. It appeared by that time that the refusal of members of the building trades employed on Government construction work in the Boston district to go back to work pending adjustment of differences, as directed to do yesterday by a conference of Presidents of the trades, was based on a misunderstanding, and the heads of the organizations here expressed confidence this evening that the 1,500 strikers in the Boston district would follow the example of those at Newark and elsewhere and refrain from hampering Government work while their leaders were in conference with Federal authorities to settle the difficulties.

The decision of the building trades presidents to send everybody back to work and to attempt to arrange thereafter a settlement of the questions of closed shop and wage schedules, which had caused the strikes, was the first big evidence of organized labor's response to President Wilson's appeal on the first day of the convention for the setting aside of industrial conflicts in order to win the war. It received prompt response from most quarters. At the session of the convention this morning a message was received from the United Board of Building Trades of New York City indorsing the President's message and the action of the building trades presidents; and this afternoon Henry Hilfer, organizer for the Newark district, wired that the strikers in that section had returned to work.

Hitch Over Boston Orders.

But the 1,500 men out at Boston, Watertown and Quincy, Mass., whose strike was threatening serious delay in the construction of destroyer plants and other Government work, did not respond to the instructions. Boston dispatches said that the business agents had decided to keep the men out till the delegates came back from Buffalo with full reports. As a result, labor leaders from the Boston district and heads of the trades affected were in an uncomfortable position today. It appeared that they had been defied, and there was considerable uncertainty as to what to do about it.

Some talked gloomily of the apparent necessity of some sort of Government interference; others intimated that the offending locals might have their charters withdrawn, but there was considerable doubt whether this would have practical effect in bringing them to time. The President of one of the international organizations held that the responsibility for the refusal was to be laid at the door of the business agents and expressed confidence that when the body of membership of the locals affected heard all the evidence they would go back to work.

J. C. McDonald, Secretary of the Boston building trades, read a message from Boston late this afternoon that no instructions from the Presidents had been received as yet. Where the hitch came had not been established then, but immediate measures were taken to remedy it. John H. Donlin, President of the Building Trades Department of the Federation, had already gone to Washington for the conference, but the Presidents of the various internationals sent the required instructions at once, and an informal conference of the various leaders from the Boston district indorsed their action. Everyone was expecting tonight that opposition in Boston would disappear very shortly and that before long all the men out would be back to work.

Gompers to Employers.

In a speech before employers of labor at a luncheon given by the Greater Buffalo Club and the Executives' Club today Samuel Gompers, President of the federation, expressed the opinion that the differences between labor and capital would be an eternal problem.

"All that can be done," he said, "is to solve problems confronting us from day to day so that, day by day, we may be better prepared to reach a solution, if solution be possible, of what has been a riddle for ages.

"We can allay all disputes during this great war in which we are now engaged by you gentlemen bearing in mind that all the virtues are not on your side and all the vices on ours. It is not fair to take the derelict and hold him up as a type of labor, any more than it is fair to hold up the gradgrind as a type of employer.

"Neither side can claim all the patriotism, but it is possible to obtain a better understanding, so that the standards of American life shall not be lowered, and to the end that our boys at the front may be supplied with all that is needful not only for fighting but for their comfort when they are not fighting.

"To me this war has quite another significance than the mere winning of battles. It is to bring a rejuvenation of the democratic peoples of the nations of all the world."

Speaking of President Wilson and the problems that faced him, Mr. Gompers said he was proud to serve under the leadership of "that great man who is now voicing the aspirations of the whole civilized world."

"What we aim to do," said Mr. Gompers, "is to advise with employers of labor to bear in mind that, in recasting our industrial conditions, old ideas must be thrown on the scrap heap and a new conception reached of the rights of others.

"Some ground must be reached on which the industries of our country may be speeded up, so that the war may be speedily won. Of its result I have not the slightest mental reservation. It is written into the stars of freedom above us."

He said that "the man who talks now of pacifism has had the blood drained from his manhood. The man who would not fight to restore Belgium is not a pacifist but a coward and poltroon."

One of the telegrams read this morning was from Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, thanking the federation for its support of woman suffrage and bespeaking its efforts in favor of the Federal amendment.

WANTS LABOR TO SPEED UP.

Bank Here Sees Need of Increasing Production.

The American Exchange National Bank, of which Lewis L. Clarke is President, yesterday sent to bankers and business men in all the centres of industry in the United States a letter asking for opinions as to whether labor should not reorganize its working basis for the period of the war, in order to increase needed production. The bank takes the stand that while it is true that there should not be war profiteering by capital, it is equally as true that there should not be war profiteering by labor.

"The relation of labor to prices is the economic problem of the hour," the letter said. "Minimum cost of production is obviously dependent upon established wage cost, since the element of labor represents an average major item of cost on the creation of a finished product.

"Is it possible to fix the price of raw material, as is being done, and leave unfixed the factor of labor which transmutes it into finished product, and avoid a commercial cataclysm? There is an impending need not only for intensification of industrial activities, but there exists a like and compelling occasion for intensified activity in all branches of food production. Will labor that does not contribute significantly to the tax levy voluntarily rearrange its working basis for the period of the war, and by increasing industrial production release men for food production?

"Will an effective mobilization of industrial man power for service (wherever service may be needed) be secured by voluntary co-operation or Federal direction?

"If the ultimate terms of our war financing must be what money will buy rather than money itself, is it not fundamental that there shall be no priority of either capital or labor, but that the same measure of expediency shall be applied to all alike? Capital has thus far done its share in voluntarily adjusting its views to meet those of the Government. Will labor do likewise?"

Plea for Poor New York Children.

The New York Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, 297 Fourth Avenue, issued an appeal yesterday for donations of clothing for the children for whom it cares. The appeal said: "It is appreciated that the sufferings in Europe have taxed to the utmost the resources available, but in the emergency we must not overlook the needs of the children of our own community. The situation is a serious one, and it is hoped that this appeal will meet with a generous response immediately."

A Clear Skin is Not Always a Sign of Healthy Blood

Don't be deceived by a clear skin. An absence of pimples or skin eruptions is no sign that all is well with the blood.

Thin, watery blood, poor in iron and red cells, is evidenced by a falling off of the general health. Pallor—loss of weight and of appetite—listlessness—nervousness—uncertain temper—loss of interest in work and in play—these are some of the symptoms of blood poverty.

Gude's Pepto-Mangan

"The Red Blood Builder"

A true tonic and general health builder. It paves the way for the return of vigor, appetite and weight. It charges the blood with iron. And it creates thousands of strong, new red cells in the blood.

Blood that is rich in iron and red cells scours out poisons and waste tissue. It rejuvenates every organ of the body.

If you are run down or anemic, if any member of your family—young or old—is in need of a general tonic, try a course of Pepto-Mangan. An improvement will soon be noticed unless the patient has a serious organic disease.

Pepto-Mangan is pleasant to the taste, and it does not disturb digestion; it cannot injure the teeth. For sale at all drug stores.

Friendly Warning:—Gude's is the only true Pepto-Mangan. It is sold only as pictured here. For your own safety reject substitutes.

MRS. STIASSNY HAD NO CAUSE TO WORRY

Assistant District Attorney Dooling Finds No Evidence to Support Suicide.

After several persons were questioned at the District Attorney's office yesterday in the investigation of the death of Mrs. Sarah M. Stiassny, who died of two bullet wounds on Nov. 7, while in bed in her apartment at 215 West Ninety-eighth Street, Assistant District Attorney Dooling said no convincing evidence had been obtained in support of the theory that she had committed suicide. It has been learned by the District Attorney that Mrs. Stiassny, instead of being a chronic sufferer from ill-health, was unusually active and enjoyed much outdoor life. On the night before her death she went with a woman friend on a long automobile ride and returned at 11 o'clock.

In the supposed "suicide note" left by Mrs. Stiassny, which is now under the scrutiny of handwriting experts, she wrote that she could not sleep and feared that she was becoming insane. Mr. Dooling says the information thus far gathered, together with photographs of Mrs. Stiassny, show that she was seemingly in good health and of robust physique. Mr. Dooling said he had not found anything to confirm the reports that Mrs. Stiassny had suffered from a nervous disorder recently, or that she was a chronic sufferer from sleeplessness, according to the statement of the maid, Dora Watts. Mr. Dooling says the investigation thus far shows that the financial and business affairs of Mrs. Stiassny were in good condition and that she had no grounds for worry concerning her investments.

Charles Willner, a dentist of 115th Street and Fifth Avenue, yesterday told of an agreement made between himself and Richard Epstein, cousin of Mrs. Stiassny, to enter into a manufacturing business. At the time of the discovery of Mrs. Stiassny's body, and when the suicide theory was accepted, it was reported that she had been worried over the prospect of losing the services of her cousin, Epstein, because of the draft law, and that this probably had something to do with her taking her life. Mr. Dooling intimated that the fact that Epstein had made arrangements to go in business here must have been known to his cousin and would have furnished no grounds for her to believe that he would go to war. Other persons examined yesterday were Dr. Feldman, the family physician, and George Berry and Walter Jones, elevator operators in the apartment house.

The new will of Mrs. Stiassny, which was found in a bureau in her room an hour after her death, was filed yesterday for probate by Isidore Hershfield, an attorney of 99 Nassau Street. The will, which is dated July 10, bequeaths to her cousin, Richard or Isaac Epstein, five pieces of improved real estate, the larger part of the household effects, twelve shares of a building and loan association and 40 per cent. of the residuary estate. Other relatives are given bequests from $2,000 to $20. Epstein and Hershfield are named executors.

HIDDEN FOOD HERE MAY BE DISTRIBUTED

Hoover Ready to Act if It Is Shown Attempt Has Been Made to Profit by War Demand.

NO MERCY TO SPECULATORS

Holders of Food Will Have Short Shrift Unless They Voluntarily Put Products on Market.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—All of the foodstuffs which agents of the Secret Service have found in warehouses in New York City will be taken over and distributed where such action is warranted, according to a statement today by Herbert C. Hoover, Food Administrator. Action will be taken as soon as the foods can be classified and the various legal problems involved straightened out. It is probable that something will be done regarding the huge supplies of concentrated cattle fodders before the end of the week.

There will be no unnecessary delay and no quarter will be shown to the food hoarders, if it is found that any have attempted to profit by the war demands. If possible within a reasonable time the Food Administration hopes to have the foodstuffs put on the market for distribution voluntarily. After a short period of grace, however, the power conferred by the food control law and other legislation will be invoked where it seems justified. Here is the statement issued by the Food Administration today:

"With regard to the reports of the Secret Service on food stored in New York and other points, Herbert Hoover said today that the Secret Service was co-operating with the Food Administration, at its request, and had entered upon an examination of the food supplies in seaboard warehouses; that reports have been received by them from time to time and that investigation has been made as to conditions surrounding the storage of these products. The various foodstuffs in seaboard warehouses fall into three catergories:

"First.—Those which have accumulated as a result of the embargo act. In these cases the foodstuffs consigned to seaboard have been held up by the War Trade Board, at the recommendation of the Food Administration, and are still awaiting decision as to disposal. Where the War Trade Board has given a definite decision that the goods will not be allowed to be exported the Food Administration has, in all cases, represented to the consignors the importance of resale into domestic trade. In certain cases goods of this character have already been requisitioned and they are being sold in domestic trade or shipped to France. A number of complicated problems arise in connection with the disposal of these goods because of the export character of packing and manufacture, many of the goods held up having been manufactured for special destinations and not being adaptable to domestic trade. Therefore the Food Administration is endeavoring to secure their absorption by the Allies.

"Second—Another class of seaboard goods are the property of neutral Governments, where decision as to their ultimate destination has not yet been made by the authorities in Washington. In the number of these cases the owners have consented to their resale into domestic trade, and in fact these sales are proceeding at a number of points at the present time.

"Third—The third class of goods includes goods stored in the large cities vitally necessary to maintain the daily necessities of the consuming public. Certain foodstuffs must be stored seasonally to carry them over from the period of scant to no production. Some of these goods may be held for speculative purposes, and the Food Administration is determining the absolute facts in regard to the ownership and purpose of holding the different commodities in storage.

"It is therefore vitally necessary in all of these complexities of goods held under the embargo, of goods held by neutral Governments, of goods held for seasonal storage, for those held for normal distributing purposes, to proceed with great care and at the same time with vigor against speculative and improper holding.

"In connection with the holding of food products the problem of the Food Administration is to determine what goods are held, with the exact ownership in all its ramifications, both domestic and diplomatic. It is also necessary to determine between speculative hoarding as distinguished from proper trade requirements. The last is of special importance to the great cities of the country because hasty action easily drives the legitimate merchants of the city to withhold shipment of supplies that are vitally necessary for the sustenance of the consumer through fear of unjust prosecution."

Reports by the Food Administration from hotels and restaurants show that many tons of foods are being saved by the adoption of "meatless Tuesday" and "wheatless Wednesday." The movement has become nation wide, and advices from all parts of the country are to the effect that it is being observed in the large majority of public eating places. The Food Administration again emphasizes today the fact that the foods thus saved were needed badly for shipment to the American soldiers at the front and to the Allies.

A large New York hotel sends the following comparison of the consumption of wheat flour during October of this year and of last.

Persons served	115,486	122,494
Barrels wheat flour consumed	165	151
Average consumption per person	*4.48	*3.93

*Ounces.

Reports from the Childs' restaurants throughout the country show that on each meatless Tuesday the saving amounts to about seven tons.

USE SUGAR AS BAIT TO SELL THEIR FOOD

Wholesalers Condemn Jobbers, Charging They Try to Force Immediate Sales.

Many middlemen and jobbers in sugar and other foodstuff lines have been forcing the sale of their commodities upon retail dealers and upon the public, according to evidence received yesterday by Dr. Henry Moskowitz, City Commissioner of Markets.

"Complaint has reached me that certain grocery jobbers, connected either directly or indirectly with the city's food supply, are forcing the sale of other groceries with the sale of what little sugar they have," Dr. Moskowitz said, after a conference of several hours with sugar refiners, wholesalers, and members of the jobbing interests. "This artificial pressure to make sales has caused the retailers to pass the pressure along to the public. This needless effort at making immediate sales encourages hoarding. It will also result in an increase in prices. Representatives of the organized wholesalers and jobbers have submitted to me a letter which they are sending to all their members condemning this procedure as an evasion of the law which may lead to the revocation of the license of those doing more than $100,000 business a year and to cutting off the source of supply of smaller dealers by the Federal Administration."

At a protracted conference yesterday afternoon in the offices of the Sugar War Trade Commission the equitable distribution of the available sugar supply was discussed. Sugar for trade distribution is to be divided between chain stores, retailers who deal with refiners, and jobbing customers of refiners.

Leading fish dealers of this city are co-operating with Arthur Williams, Federal Food Administrator for New York City, to sell fish at reasonable prices and thus release meats for our army and armies of the Allies. The committee of local fish dealers which will co-operate with Mr. Williams includes George T. Moon, Chairman; Walter Ashcroft, William Winant, Amos G. Chesebro, Miller Longbotham, and William H. Cornell, representing the salt water fish industry, and Alois W. Pini and P. J. Begloff, representing the fresh water. A campaign of public education regarding the inexpensiveness and high food qualities of fish is to be understaken.

TELLS HOTEL MEN HOW TO AID HOOVER

Bowman Says National Association Members Can Help Win the War.

SIMPLE MENU FOR DINNER

Food Controller's Assistant Says It Is as Important to Save Meat as to Buy Bonds or Munitions.

John McE. Bowman, Chairman of the Department of Hotels and Restaurants of the United States Food Administration and general manager of several of the city's largest hotels, told 1,000 hotel proprietors assembled for a week's convention from all parts of the United States at a dinner at the Waldorf last night that the policy which the hotel and restaurant men of this country adopt regarding the conservation of food would be one of the most important determining factors in the winning or losing of the war.

On each meatless Tuesday the hotel men of America can, from now on, save 10,000,000 pounds of meat, if they are patriotic enough to do so, Mr. Bowman told the hotel proprietors. The 100,000 hotels of 100 rooms in this country can each save 200 pounds of meat a day if they want to, he declared, and a 1,000-room hotel can save one ton of meat a day. A saving of 25,000,000 tons of meat means a three-months' food supply for an army of 1,000,000 men, Mr. Bowman asserted.

Mr. Bowman began his speech by saying that the hotel men of the country could do more effective educational work with the general public in the food conservation campaign than all the newspapers of the nation.

"This war is going to be decided by famine," Mr. Bowman declared impressively. "Germany today is hungry. She is living on the smallest percentage of fat that any nation ever lived on. She is able to continue to do this because her people are absolutely united.

"You men are facing the most serious national situation of the last two generations. In the face of this situation, don't say you can't have a meatless day in your hotel because the man next door won't have one. If a man comes into your hotel and asks for meat on a meatless day, I advise you in the name of patriotism and self-preservation to put him out unless he has his food-card signed.

"If we hotel men stand together in a policy of economy during this war we shall be a wonderful factor in helping to win it. It is already to our credit that, very soon after the meatless and wheatless days were fixed by the Government, 50 per cent. of this nation's hotel men took up the plan. Every one of you men can carry out the plan. If any of you won't take the trouble to do it he is not a patriotic citizen. It is just as important to save meat as it is to buy a Liberty bond or to make munitions.

"Twenty-five million tons of food were burned by incendiaries recently in two weeks, according to a newspaper report. This would have been a three-months' food supply for an army of 1,000,000 men. Soon we will be shooting men who do these things. By neglecting to save meat, you hotel men are not actually burning it. But if you don't save all the meat you can in your kitchens, you are doing something that is almost as bad. Don't think, either, that you are merely saving this meat for the French, Belgians or Russians. You are saving it for your own sons. The new army of 9,000,000 men must be fed. If we all don't save food, God help us."

The dinner served before Mr. Bowman spoke was not only meatless but wheatless. The only flesh served was chicken. The bread was made of cornmeal and rice flour. The cake was made of rye and raisins.

John McGlynn, retiring President of the New York State Hotel Men's Association; Sheriff-elect David H. Knott, owner of several New York hotels; Secretary of State F. M. Hugo, Edward M. Tierney, and George A. Farnham, the association's new President, were the other speakers.

THE CALL STILL IN MAILS.

The decision of the Postmaster General denying second class mailing privileges to The New York Call will not restrict the circulation of the paper as far as it is affected by the sending out of copies to subscribers, it was said yesterday in The Call office. A copy of The Call will be sent to every out-of-town subscriber in a stamped wrapper, according to the announcement, which added that this practice had been instituted on Tuesday night, when the first issue affected by the Postmaster General's decision came out. The editors of The Call do not expect the distribution of the paper in the city to be curtailed as a result of the decision.

An Order From The United States Fuel Administrator

Instructions have been issued by the United States Fuel Administrator restricting the use of electric signs and outside display lighting effective on and after November 15th, 1917, until further notice.

This order provides that no electric sign or display advertising shall be illuminated before the hour of 7:45 P.M. or after the hour of 11 P.M.

Certain exceptions are provided for, in the cases of theatres, retail stores, places of public assembly, etc.

The approval of the Public Service Commission for the First District has been obtained so that existing contracts and rate schedules are modified in accordance with this order.

The United Company has issued a special notice to its commercial customers setting forth the contents of the order in complete detail.

ORANGE, N.J., U.S.A.

Take the Cylinder for Instance

You will discard the old shorthand notebook that wastes hours of your stenographer's and your time every day. You will dictate to the Edison to save time, to make money, to get "Better Letters." A wax cylinder will then hold your dictation instead of a notebook.

This cylinder must be made durable and safe to meet any emergency. Mr. Edison invented the "Safetae" cylinder for this very purpose. There is nothing like it. No substitute provides the same safeguard for your dictation under all conditions and insures you against the possibility of having to do your work twice.

EDISON Dictating Machine

Made by Edison—Installed by Barnes

Saves hours of your time every day. Saves the stenographer the time of taking dictation and enables her to write more and "Better Letters." The many patented exclusive features of the Edison will improve your correspondence and enable YOU to write "Better Letters." HUNTERS AND HACKNEYS HOLD SWAY ON HORSE SHOW TAN-BARK AT MADISON SQUARE GARDEN

RED-COATED RIDERS IN RING AT GARDEN

Sir Adam Beck's Fine Trio of Hunters Bedecked with Winners' Laurels.

GREER HAS A BAD TUMBLE

Comes a Cropper in Jumping Trials, but Is Not Hurt — Great Crowd Is in Attendance.

The tanbark show ring at the National Horse Show at Madison Square Garden last night took on all the life and color of a hunt club when representatives of the best known hunts in the East were competing for honors in the feature class for qualified hunters. The riders were in the proper uniform with their flashy red coats and the arena was an animated picture which brought delight to the throng that filled the boxes and tiers.

The crowd lingered until after midnight to see the high jumping contest for the William H. Moore Cup. The event teemed with thrills, as some of the jumpers were high-spirited and raised havoc in galloping into the barrier. S. S. Norton's Confidence, last year's winner, was dethroned in the event when this great jumper failed to clear the bar when it was raised to six feet nine inches. This occasioned much surprise, as Confidence has a leap of over eight feet to his credit.

Robin Hood, exhibited by the Meadows Stables, cleared the timber in a beautiful leap of six feet nine inches. The winner was loudly cheered as his rider, Jack Hamilton, guided him over the top rail.

Strathclair, the Crow & Murray entry, dropped out of the competition by missing the jump at six feet six inches. On the third trial, the jumper balked at the fence, reared and pushed his legs through the bars. The rider saved himself by cleverly jumping to the high fence at one side of the jump. Hercules, Mrs. J. J. McDonald's jumper, failed a six feet six inches, the high-spirited horse breaking down the barrier. Skyscraper, C. L. Whitney's jumper, while attempting to clear the fence at this height, threw his rider twice, but he escaped serious injury.

Among the clubs which sent their best hunters after the blue ribbons were the Radmore Hunt of Philadelphia, Glen Arden Hunt, Glen Riddle Hunt, Meadowbrook Club, Hartford County Hunt, London, Ont., Hunt, Mr. Hitchcock Hounds, and Fairfield County Hounds, of Aiden, S. C. There were 24 hunters in the ring and the competition was keen and spirited.

The trials over the jumps were enlivened by a bad spill, which brought the crowd to its feet. George M. Greer, Jr., riding Becky, owned by Charles D. Lanier of the Fairfield County Hounds, came a cropper while taking the third fence of the course. When Becky went down horse and rider turned a complete sommersault, and the spectators gasped as Mr. Greer was pinned under his falling mount. The horse rolled over, leaving the rider free, and he was on his feet in an instant. Amid the cheers of the crowd Mr. Greer remounted Becky and completed his journey over the course.

Sir Adam Beck Is Victor.

The event was won by Sir Adam Beck's handsome trio of hunters from the London (Ontario) Hunt. While the rules of the event called for all riders to wear hunt uniforms, an exception was made for Sir Adam Beck, who wore his military uniform. He rode Sir Edward, while Melrose was ridden by Tom Smith and Sir Thomas by Robert Emory. The second prize was won by the hunters from the Glen Riddle Hunt, with Clinker, ridden by Martin Buckley; Willow King, with G. Leiper up, and Bally Heather, ridden by C. Utz. The Radnor Hunt team of Philadelphia was third, and the Glen Arden Hunt fourth.

The attendance last evening was the largest of the week and the receipts for the Red Cross grow steadily. Society rallied to the cause and all the boxes were filled with fashionably gowned women. Around the arena rail the spectators were banked four or five deep, watching the competition in the show ring.

Yesterday was hackney day at the show and the championship for hackney stallions was won by Wynnwood of the Delchester Farms. With the victory went the challenge cup, which must be won two years in succession for permanent possession. Wynnwood won the cup two years ago but was defeated for the honor last season by Romping Flash. The hackneys held the ring during most of the day and close competition marked every event. Hamilton Model, from James Cox Brady's Hamilton Farm, and Judge Moore's Bountiful were among the winners, while hackney breeders from all over the country were represented.

Judge Moore in the Lead.

The most successful blue ribbon winners of the show thus far are Judge Moore, James Cox Brady's Hamilton Farm, and Walter J. Hanley of Providence. Judge Moore has been the big winner in several shows, but he will be hard pressed for the honor this season.

The Horse Show Association announced last evening that on Friday soldiers and sailors in uniform would be admitted to the show free. Many of the exhibitors have generously offered to contribute all their winnings to the Red Cross fund. There was a distinct military flavor to the big gathering last evening with officers of many nations joining the crowd on the promenade about the ring.

The Sir James Challenge Cup, presented by the late Alfred G. Vanderbilt for the best horse suitable for a gig, was won by Judge William H. Moore's Micah, with John L. Bushnell's The Governor winning the reserve. The cup last year was won by Mrs. M. Maurice Dimond's Flash.

The Biltmore Cup for the best saddle horse was won by Driftwood Blaze, which was ridden by Mrs. Walter H. Hanley, while Mrs. Herbert L. Camp's Donna Cona was awarded the reserve.

The wonderful team of twelve Belgian horses owned by Walter J. Hanley made their first appearance at an evening session of the show toward the end of last night's session, and, as the driver, Bill Wells, sent the massive horses around the ring in a battlefield hitch, wheeling the heavy steeds about in all sorts of intricate manoeuvres, the performance was greeted with the greatest outburst of applause which has yet greeted any of the exhibitions.

Another varied program was presented for the entertainment of the crowd that gathered in the Garden at all three sessions, the only touch of monotony being noticeable in the morning, when the fancy-gaited hackneys monopolized the attention of the judges. Though the events were confined to breeding classes, they served to show the influence the hackney has had on the show ring, as many of the winners are noted for victories obtained while competing against horses of other types.

Notable instances were the winning of the champion cup for fillies and mares by William H. Moore's Medea, a three-year-old that is likely to score in any company, and the success of the same owner's Bountiful, in the class for mares over 14.2 hands. Bountiful captured the Canadian Hackney Horse Society medal from Miss Constance Vauclain's The Whip, so that two Garden champions came together in this semi-international competition.

Hackneys also were prominent at the afternoon and night sessions, and the quality of this breed was high throughout. It was not entirely a hackney day, however, for hunters took a large part in the proceedings, which were further enlivened by keen competition in which gig horses, saddlers, and high jumpers were in the limelight.

Judge Moore and the Hamilton Farm's entries of James Cox Brady garnered nearly all the ribbons in the hackney breeding classes, the incursion which the former owner has made into this breed being instanced by the placings in the class for hackney stallions, shown with three of their get. For this Judge Moore sent Marlboro into the ring, and the worth of this splendid specimen was evident as he was accompanied by Bountiful and Medea, both of which had won blues in the preceding classes.

Hamilton Model Wins Again.

Hamilton Farm's most signal success of the morning was credited to Hamilton Model, which won the Canada medal for the best hackney stallion, 14.2 hands or under, for the third year in succession. In the class for stallions over 14.2 neither Judge Moore nor Hamilton Farm was able to put anything into the ring to match the power and grace displayed by Victor, a 15.2 four-year-old, owned by the Red Hill Farm of Mamaroneck. Other successful hackneys to vary the Moore and Hamilton victories were D. R. Hanna's Brier Boy and Halcyon Farm's Mighty Mite.

The hunters of Glen Riddle Farm, which are owned by Samuel D. Riddle, the Pennsylvania sportsman, cut a big figure in the afternoon, as they have on previous days. A notable victory stamping the all-round quality of the Glen Riddle jumpers was gained in the opening event of the afternoon, which called for teams of three, the property of one exhibitor. Glen Riddle carried off the honors with Bally Heather, Willow King, and Clinker, while Isaac H. Clothier, Jr., another exhibitor from the Quaker district, had the honor of finishing second, which entailed the defeat of formidable teams entered by the Westminster Stable of Canada and Miss Lida L. Fleitmann.

Glen Riddle Farm also was all-powerful in a new class, modeled on the saddle horse plan, in which pairs of hunters with a woman and a man riding were required to take the jumps abreast. When the veterans, Captain Thomas Hitchcock and Mrs. Hitchcock put Cavalier and Coniston over the jumps in clever style it looked as though they had set a standard that would be hard to surpass. Only once did this pair get out of alignment, but when the first of the Glen Riddle pairs was sent over the course it was evident to the spectators that the Long Islanders were outclassed. Miss Kitty Smith, a young daughter of R. Penn Smith, riding Nancy Pansy, and C. Utz on Willow King, gave the spectators a thrill by keeping in perfect unison and rivaling in their manner of execution the perfection only hitherto attained by Army officers.

Repeat Their Performance.

That the feat was no flash in the pan was proved when the same riders mounted Bally Heather and Clinker and repeated in a manner that lacked only a degree of the first perfect effort. Both the Glen Riddle pairs were placed above the Hitchcock entry, while Miss Lida L. Fleitmann and Mr. Thorne were forced into fourth place.

The Canadian Challenge cup, the original of which was lost when the war broke out and only recently recovered, provided another interesting competition over the jumps. The cup, which has to be won three times by the same regiment, was captured last year by Pete, of the Second United States Cavalry. Pete was in to try again for the cup, but after making one perfect round he blundered badly on the second. The day was saved for the Second Regiment, however, when Major Charles B. Amory, Jr., rode The Black A., another of the regimental mounts. The Black A. had been a bad actor on Monday, but he behaved and jumped beautifully yesterday and gained the second leg on the cup with The Weaver, another from the Second Regiment, second, Pete third and Captain A. G. Thurman's Datto of West Point, fourth.

Four-in-Hand Contest Keen.

The first real competition of four-in-hands was forthcoming for the Prescott Lawrence prizes in which Judge Moore's four was opposed by fours of Hamilton Farms and A. W. Atkinson. The teams were well matched with the Moore outfit excelling in substance and conformation. Judge Moore held the ribbons on his coach and though he drove well there was more than a fair share of applause for the clever work of the Hamilton Farm quartet, which stepped together all the time and equally divided the task of drawing the coach.

Judge Moore's team was composed of Lord and Lady Seaton, Micah and Bountiful, and the undoubted quality of these grand animals earned the blue for them over the Hamilton Farms entry. Previous to this the old champions, Lord and Lady Seaton, had gained an easy victory in the class for pairs shown to broughams or victorias, with the Buttonwood Farm pair, Belle and Lass, placed second.

Walter H. Hanley showed what an all-round stable he has by sending in Minnie Allerton for the roadster class. The class was a keen one, with E. T. Stotesbury's Ebony King, already a dual victor, the general favorite. Ebony King did not have quite as much dash as John R. Thompson's Britton Forbes, which showed much better than on Tuesday, but his conformation and level manner of going earned the blue. Britton Forbes took an upward step by taking second and turning the tables on Vernon Holt, which beat him in a previous class. Vernon Holt was placed fourth, with Minnie Allerton third.

The class for saddle ponies under 14.2 brought out some fine entries, the leaders rivalling in quality the large saddlers. The competition was keen, but at the end of many tests Mrs. Louis Lee Haggin's Anne Rose was decorated with the blue, while Walter H. Hanley's Powder Puff was placed second.

SOCIETY IS OUT IN FORCE.

Crowd in Boxes and on Promenade Includes Well-Known Persons.

The social side of the Horse Show yesterday almost rivaled in interest and brilliancy the events in the ring. The largest crowd of the week was in attendance at both the afternoon and evening sessions, and last night the throng on the promenade was reminiscent of bygone days.

In the afternoon many of the women were knitting, in the arena seats as well as in the boxes. Last night the group of girls selling catalogues was considerably augmented, and about $500 was realized by the sales. A girl who has friends in the boxes frequently receives five or ten dollars for an official catalogue.

A patriotic note was struck last night during the judging of the ten hunt teams when the national air was played, while the entire assemblage rose and cheered.

Lieut. Col. John Eustace Jameson of Dublin, who has commanded the 24th Reserve Battalion, the London Regiment, for several years and is here with a British commission, was in Box 77, the guest of Mrs. Henry L. Burnett. Father Delany and Robert W. Andrews were also of the party.

In the next box, No. 79, Prince and Princess Vlora attracted much attention, as this is the first appearance at a public assembly of the widow of Ralph H. Thomas and the former wife of Frank J. Gould, since she married the Albanian Prince, on Nov. 5. The Princess wore a smart black gown and pearls.

The Duchess de Chaulnes was a visitor last evening, coming with her mother, Mrs. T. P. Shonts. Mrs. Edmund L. Baylies was with Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury in Box 46. Mrs. Oliver Harriman was with Mrs. William Goadby Loew. Mrs. F. O. Beach, Mrs. Peter Cooper Hewitt, Mrs. Ernest Iselin, Mrs. Burke Roche, Magistrate Daniel E. Murphy and Mrs. Murphy, the latter formerly Mrs. Sheldon Fuller; Mr. and Mrs. McDougall Hawkes, Mrs. Austin Flint, Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Milbank, Captain and Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, Reginald Vanderbilt, and Miss Lota Robinson were among others in the boxes last night.

O'DOWD IS CROWNED MIDDLEWEIGHT KING

St. Paul Boxer Knocks Out Al McCoy in Sixth Round of Bout at Clermont S. C.

Mike O'Dowd, St. Paul's sturdy middleweight, is now the world's middleweight champion. He won the honor by knocking out Al McCoy of Brooklyn in the sixth round of their scheduled ten-round bout last night at the Clermont S. C. of Brooklyn. The result of the bout, coming as a bolt out of the blue to the majority of those who witnessed it, caused a demonstration that has seldom been duplicated in local boxing clubs.

The fallen middleweight champion, though he was chided while he held the title for his inability to box up to the standard of previous titleholders, fought gamely and was floored four times before the final knockdown came. Then his seconds, supervised by his aged father, hurled a towel into the ring just as Referee McAvoy reached the count of seven.

A title has seldom changed hands under more impressive conditions, for the moment the towel landed in the ring almost over the prostrate form of McCoy, it was as if a signal had been given, and there was one great rush from all sides of the house, with the ring as the general objective. The enthusiastic and overjoyed friends of O'Dowd boosted him upon their shoulders before he had time to cross the ring to give the customary hand-shake to a defeated foe, and for many minutes the din threatened to lift the roof off the building.

The spectators had their first premonition of what might happen in the fourth round when McCoy was floored on four separate occasions. This, however, was not entirely clear to the friends of the St. Paul lad, for he was himself on the canvas twice. Neither boxer took a count on these knockdowns.

Then in the sixth round the inevitable happened. Shortly after the bell O'Dowd floored the Brooklynite with his heavy right to the jaw, but McCoy regained his feet without taking a count. Another right, almost before he had entirely straightened out in boxing poise, floored McCoy again, but again he disdained the benefits of a count. Then O'Dowd went furiously at McCoy, seeing a vision of the world's title in his grasp, and soon had floored the Brooklyn boxer again. This time McCoy took a count of nine to clear his befuddled brain, and when he regained his feet he was still groggy.

A fourth time McCoy was sent down with O'Dowd's heavy right to the jaw, and the falling middleweight champion took a count of three. Hardly had McCoy a chance to get erect after climbing to his feet than he was floored with a right to the jaw, which landed solidly and resounded throughout the building. The Brooklynite's body stiffened out as he hit the canvas, and when Referee McAvoy had tolled off seven in his count of ten seconds one of McCoy's handlers, with tears in his eyes, tossed in the towel. O'Dowd entered the ring at 157 pounds, one pound below the standard middleweight limit, while McCoy's weight was announced as 167.

The bout furnished a fitting climax to the end of the Frawley law in this State and was witnessed by a bigger crowd than has ever before found its way into the Clermont S. C. The crowd was not entirely an orderly one, however, for there were several fights between the spectators, and one of these, coming in the fourth round, after McCoy's seconds had thrown water on their man as he lay on the ring floor, threatened to result in a wild free-for-all.

McCoy jumped from obscurity into sudden pugilistic fame on the night of April 7, 1914, when, in the ring of the Broadway Sporting Club, he knocked out George Chip of Newcastle, Penn., then recognized as world's middleweight champion. McCoy failed to show anything of championship calibre, but contented himself with boxing in ten-round bouts, over which distance, up to last night, nobody had been successful in knocking him out, Chip being included in the boxers whom McCoy has faced in ten-round bouts since gaining the title.

LOCAL BOXERS WIN BOUTS.

Inter-City Amateur Tourney a Victory for New York Entries.

Boxers of the metropolitan district triumphed over their visiting rivals from Boston and Pittsburgh last night in the inter-city amateur boxing tournament at the Crescent Athletic Club of Brooklyn. The exhibitions were held in two special classes at 125 and 135 pounds, and in both divisions the local element ruled. In the 125-pound class was witnessed the best competition when Frank Carroll, Galveston A. C. of Pittsburgh, went down in defeat at the hands of Anton Enz, Paulist A. C., New York, after four rounds, judges' decision. The judges disagreed at the conclusion of the customary three rounds, and this necessitated an extra session.

Carroll had scored over A. Schick, a local boxer, in his semi-final bout, the referee giving him the award in three rounds after the judges had disagreed. Enz defeated W. Corbett of Boston, New England A. A. U. champion, in three rounds, referee's decision, the judges again failing to agree on a winner in this bout.

In the 135-pound class, final bout, A. Algren, Norwegian Turn A. C., was declared the winner over Joseph Mellensen, Fitton A. C. of Boston, in two rounds, when the Boston lad was disqualified for his holding tactics.

The winners in the local classes were: 108-pound class, D. Horn, Rutgers Gymnasium; 115-pound class, Archie Walker, Irish-American A. C.

Columbia Practice for Wesleyan Held Under Handicap.

Five Blue and White regulars could not report to Coach Metcalf yesterday on account of injuries. Captain Dal Cochran does not expect to play any more football this year. Parnes, an end from the second eleven, will take Cochran's place. Rosen, who is out with an infected foot, will don his uniform next Monday and will play in the New York University game next week. Farrell and Campbell, the tackles, both got water on the knee in the Hobart contest, but the former will play this Saturday against Wesleyan, while the latter cannot play until Monday. Houlahan, full back, has had a slight touch of malaria, but Gus Peterson, the Columbia team's trainer, declares that he will play Saturday.

The Blue and White 'Varsity, with Sam Weinstein at quarter, scrimmaged with teams from Yonkers and Clinton High Schools yesterday. The college eleven went through the high school boys easily, and, after thirty minutes of heavy work, went to one side to practice signals. Don Memmott, who scored three touchdowns and a field goal against Hobart, took Houlahan's place in the back field. The second eleven lined up with Yonkers High for a forty-minute scrimmage game and could not hold Mitchell, the speedy Yonkers quarter back.

Yesterday the freshmen lined up for signals and later for a scrimmage with Clinton. The yearlings played on the defensive and held their opponents for downs time after time. The freshmen will have only a light practice today in preparation for the game with the Wesleyan freshmen tomorrow.

Palmer Heads Camp Devens Team.

AYER, Mass., Nov. 14.—Palmer, a halfback, was elected Captain of the Camp Devens football team today. He played on the Massachusetts Agricultural College team last year. Daniel (Porky) Flynn, heavyweight boxer of Boston, and Jack Savage, a Brockton middleweight, were released from military service today because of dependents.

BROWN BUMPS ENGINEERS.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 14.—Brown had no trouble in defeating the 301st Engineers today at Andrews Field, pushing over a 40-to-0 victory with practically a second string team. Coach Robinson stuck to his intentions of giving his 'Varsity men an easy time of it, and used almost entirely his sub players. These seconds showed a surprising strength, Herriott at right half back especially getting away to long and consistent gains.

Two touchdowns were made by the Brunonians in every period but the second, when they uncorked a power which augurs well for the coming two games on the schedule. Samson, a new man at quarter, also showed up well, while Armstrong, the only regular man in the back field, played his usual stellar defensive game and got off some long runs.

Most of Brown's six touchdowns came as the result of straight-line plunging, coupled with a few long gains. One came after Brooks's twenty-seven-yard run off tackle, and another came from an intercepted forward when Kittredge at fullback gathered up the ball and took it over the goal line.

The line-up:

Brown (40.)	Positions.	Engineers, (0.)
Albright	L. E.	Yundt
Edson	L. T.	Lyons
Bowman	L. G.	Bingham
Black	C.	Barry
Lanpher	R. G.	Croft
Murphy	R. T.	Lowe
Brisk	R. E.	O'Connell
Samson	Q. B.	Merrill
Pieri	L. H. B.	Crandall
Herriott	R. H. B.	Gerry
Armstrong	F. B.	Sheehy

Touchdowns—Samson, (2,) Brooks, Armstrong, Herriott, Kittredge. Goals from touchdown—Albright. (4.) Substitutions—Brown: Coulter for Samson, Hoving for Black, Brooks for Pieri, Grabb for Lanpher, Nichols for Murphy, Samson for Coulter, Pieri for Brooks, Black for Hoving, Kittredge for Armstrong, Huggins for Samson; Engineers: Samuels for Croft, Strait for Lowe, McHugh for Samson, Samson for Gerry, Mitchell for Bingham.

Referee—Halloran, Boston. Umpire—Marshall, Harvard. Linesman—Bergin, Princeton. Time of periods—12 minutes each.

TIGERS PREPARE QUIETLY.

Princeton Will Probably Close Season on Saturday.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 14.—Princeton's football season will probably be brought to a close this Saturday when the Tigers will meet an eleven from the Wissahickon Barracks, Cape May, N. J., in the stadium. Very little is known of the strength of the visiting team, but the Princeton players are preparing quietly under the direction of Coach Rush and should be prepared for a good contest.

Princeton will probably use all undergraduates on the team, with the possible exception of Bamman, a substitute end on the 1915 eleven, who played in the Camp Dix game. There are plenty of Alumni who are anxious to don gridiron togs for an informal game any time, but Speedy Rush apparently desires to give the men who have been reporting for practice the preference in the contest. The workouts of the squad are still easy and no Tiger football squad has probably ever enjoyed the periods of preparation for contests as this year's. Players have played this year for the pleasure which they derive without the usual hard routine drill.

Strubing will probably direct the play of the Tigers from quarter back, and Trimble, McIlwain, and Winn will probably round out the rest of the backfield. Alford and Lamarchne may be at the wings, Callahan, Keck, Bryan, Taylor, and Sinclair will probably be the linemen. No definite lineup will be decided upon until Friday afternoon.

The game will probably complete one of the briefest schedules a Tiger team has ever had. The only other game of the season has been that with the 307th Field Artillery of Camp Dix.

Yale's Annual Regatta Today.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 14.—Yale's annual Fall regatta will be held at the harbor tomorrow afternoon. There will be four races, two for the university and two for the Freshman crews.

THIRD LEAGUE STIR NEARS SETTLEMENT

American Association Dispute Heals as Redistricting of Minor Leagues Fails.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 14.—Settlement of the factional dispute which threatened to disrupt the American Association and pave the way for the formation of a new league appeared to be assured tonight. The rival factions were brought together after the National Association of Baseball Leagues voted down, 11 to 2, a resolution at its convention today to redistrict the minor leagues of the country.

Club owners of the American Association tentatively decided to open their season about May 1—three weeks later than the opening date of a year ago—and discussed the feasibility of reducing the player limit.

President Hickey said a meeting would be held in Chicago on Dec. 17, to decide on plans for next season. Edward Barrow, President of the International League, brought the fight to redistrict all leagues to the floor of the convention today. He offered an amendment to a resolution which provided for the redistricting of only the smaller leagues. The proposal was received with a storm of protests and half a dozen league Presidents attacked it in bitter terms.

M. H. Sexton, President of the National Association, declared there could be no withdrawel of the Louisville, Indianapolis, and Toledo clubs from the American Association, nor the formation of a new league without the unanimous consent of all of the clubs in the two organizations.

President Barrow of the International League was unwilling tonight to make any prediction as to whether his organization would take the field next season. The club owners will meet in New York on Dec. 10 to take whatever steps necessary.

August Herrmann, Chairman of the National Baseball Commission, appeared before the minor leagues this afternoon and pledged the support of the major leagues to any cause that will be of assistance to the small organizations. He declared that baseball in general was facing a critical situation.

"The next season will be a serious one both in the major and minor leagues," Herrmann said. "There will have to be retrenchment everywhere if we hope to exist. The minor leagues need the majors and the major leagues need the minors. It is to our mutual interest that we should extend aid. I can say with all frankness that the National League is seriously considering a policy of retrenchment which includes the reduction of a player limit."

Club owners of the Western and Central Leagues met tonight to consider plans for the coming season. President Dickerson of the Western League stated positively that his organization would start, but Harry Stahlhefer President of the Central League, declined to make any prediction in regard to his circuit. He was unofficially informed in a telegram from Bert Noblett, half owner of the Grand Rapids (Mich.) Club that Grand Rapids would be out of baseball next season. It is regarded as likely that the Central League will be among the leagues that will decide to suspend until the end of the war.

Janowski and Jaffe in Draw.

D. Janowski of Paris and Charles Jaffe of this city met in the second game of their chess match, of ten games up at the rooms of the New York City Chess Club, yesterday, and the result, as in the first game, was a draw, after 53 moves had been recorded. Janowski had the white pieces and played the four knights opening. Jaffe established two connected passed pawns in the centre of the board. Janowski, however, cleverly sacrificed a piece for these pawns and forced the draw.

SAILORS DOWN SOLDIERS.

Naval Eleven Victor Over Fort Jay by a Score of 24 to 0.

The football eleven of the Naval Reserves of City Island caused a bit of a surprise yesterday by triumphing over the Fort Jay eleven, in the New York Athletic Club's military football league, by a score of 24 to 0. The contest was held at Governor's Island. The Naval Reserves, showing unexpected strength and ability, kept their opponents from Fort Jay on the defensive for the greater part of the game. Millar, Peacock and Hull made touchdowns, and Peacock also kicked three goals from touchdown. O'Boyle gave the victorious eleven its remaining points with a field goal from the twenty-five yard line. The Fort Jay eleven several times attempted field goals, but all went wide of the mark.

At Fort Slocum, the football eleven engaged the representatives of Fort Wadsworth in an interesting struggle, which ended in a Fort Slocum victory by 9 to 0. All of Fort Slocum's scoring was accomplished in the opening quarter. Charles made a touchdown after the Fort Slocum eleven had rushed the ball back from its own thirty-five yard line. Pastoria kicked the goal. Near the close of the first quarter a safety gave the Fort Slocum eleven two more points.

FORDHAM VARIES ATTACK.

Maroon Strenuously Preparing for Game with Cornell.

The Fordham warriors had a long offensive drill yesterday afternoon for the Cornell game on Saturday. Coach McCaffery ordered only a short scrimmage, but the players were kept busy rehearsing the formations to be used against the Ithacans. The 'Varsity line-up was changed frequently and all of the scrubs were tried out on the first team. The Maroon attack as practiced yesterday will be a spectacular and varied one, with forward passes and rapid thrusts the features.

Brennan tried placement kicking and touchdown goals from various angles yesterday and Galligan joined him in a punting duel. Yesterday's scrimmage was a ten-minute affair with the scrubs and served only to demonstrate a few of the plays that were worked on in the signal drill. It had originally been planned to have a tussle with a battleship team, but this was abandoned, as Coach McCaffery did not want to risk injury to his players on the eve of the Cornell game. The eleven from the battleship Texas will come to Fordham next week.

The first game of the interclass football series will be played this afternoon when the seniors and freshmen clash.

Coach McCaffery will put the team through its final drill this afternoon, as the squad will leave for Ithaca tomorrow morning.

N. Y. U. DRILL IS STRENUOUS

Faculty Excuses Players from Late Hours to Facilitate Practice.

The New York University football squad had a long workout yesterday. At a meeting of the Faculty Committee the men were excused from late hours until the close of the season to insure the requisite practice for the Stevens and Columbia games, and this will facilitate practice hereafter. Early in the afternoon both freshmen and 'Varsity teams were put through a signal drill. Then the teams were lined against each other and the scrimmage started.

At the first the freshmen had the ball. Their line played well but the backs could do nothing in the way of gaining ground. Coach Wall then played in the freshman back field for a part of the time to help balance the 1921 aggregation. Saunders of the freshman secured two forward passes thrown by Coach Wall and gained several yards on each. Then the 'Varsity received the ball and for the first time in several weeks the whole regular lineup faced the scrubs in a practice scrimmage.

Egan stayed out part of the time to help coach the backs. His place was taken by Buckley, who has been handling the quarter back position for several days. Johnson, Christopher, and Ebenfeld completed the back field. This combination worked as a compact unit and managed to pierce the cub line very effectively. Yesterday was Christopher's first day of practice since the Trinity game.

COCHRAN'S LEAD GROWS.

Registers Total of 1,200 to 922 for Howison in Three Nights.

Welker Cochran advanced to a commanding position in his 18.2 billiard match of 2,000 points against Leonard Howison last night when he reached the mark of 1,200 points for three nights' play, while Howison was struggling along not very confidently at 922 when hostilities for the evening ceased. On the play of last evening alone, Cochran led his rival by 400 to 202, which is the most decisive victory which he has scored in any 400-point block of the present event. Cochran averaged 21 1-19, while the average for Howison was 11 4-18.

As an exhibition of the art of 18.2 billiards, last evening's contest started with some brilliant clusters on the part of Cochran, lagged perceptibly in the middle game and descended to the lower strata of billiards in the final innings. Cochran was flighty in his play and Howison could never get started, so that the element of contest was lacking as well as the display of high-class billiard technique.

For a player who has been studying the close nurse game, Cochran was something of a mystery. Never at any time did he approximate the skill of which he is capable. Whether the ivories were perverse or whether it was simply that he was not in stroke the fact remains that he showed decided tendencies toward fighting the balls and the result was an open table type of game that failed utterly to give an indication of the power of his game.

He could not gather the ivories with sure touch and when he did have them under control they were not held for any length of time. At the start there were several runs put together which gave hope for real billiards such as he played the opening night, but this was soon blasted by the erratic later play in which there was a suggestion of carelessness.

The score:

Cochran—60 27 76 18 5 9 2 1 30 20 0 3 43 14 48 15 0 6 23. Total—400. Average—21 1-19. High run—76. Total for three nights' play—1,200.

Howison—0 9 6 4 24 6 17 0 4 67 0 19 24 1 0 1 0 10. Total—202. Average—11 4-18. High run—67. Total for three nights' play—922.

Referee—Albert G. Cutler.

HARVARD CUBS IN TRIM.

Practice with Informals in Preparation for Yale Freshmen.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 14.—The Harvard freshman eleven, which will play its final game of the season Saturday in the Stadium against the Yale freshmen, worked for an hour today against the 'Varsity informals, who will close their campaign Sunday with Cupid Black's Naval Reserve all-stars at Newport.

Coach Waterbury of the freshmen was assisted today by Leo Leary, the former 'Varsity field coach; Mal Logan, the 1914 quarter back, and Freddy Bradlee, one of the best defensive backfield men Harvard ever had. There was no scoring, the work being mainly dummy drill, but both teams had more individual coaching this afternoon, particularly on the rush line, than they have had all year

The freshmen are in good physical trim after last week's game with the Princeton freshmen, and, although they will be outweighed on Saturday, expect to meet the Yale youngsters on even terms.

GRACE GEORGE IN A FRENCH WAR PLAY

"L'Elevation," by Henri Bernstein, Her Second Bill at the Playhouse.

A Conventional Triangle Play That Catches Some Measure of the Heroic Mood.

L'ELEVATION, a drama in three acts by Henri Bernstein. At the Playhouse.

Professor Andre Cordelier	Holbrook Blinn
Professor Courtin	Howard Kyle
Louis de Genois	Lionel Atwill
Jules	Charles Pitt
Jacques Courtin	Vinton Friedley
Richard	E. John Kennedy
Suzanne Cordelier	Grace George
Mme. Cordelier	Kate Blancke

"To the Heights" might be the English title of this war play from Paris, for it traces the progress of its main characters out of the spiritual lethargy in which the German onslaught found them to a more commanding view of the dignity and worth of individual living. And it accomplishes its survey by the familiar method of triangulation. Wife, husband, and lover are there.

For two acts, indeed, the play has little to differentiate it from our once multitudinous but now decreasing dramatic import from France. Suzanne is young and temperamental, and has married Professor Cartier in obedience to the deathbed request of her father. De Genois is a dashing and romantic explorer, a decidedly bad lot morally, who has entangled her in what is to him a mere passing affair, though to her it is much more serious. When the war comes he elects the post of utmost honor and danger, but she hangs upon him and pleads almost hysterically that he shall take a proffered position behind the front.

Her concern for their private happiness is so great, in fact, that her husband suspects the cause. In a moment of strength, born of her suffering, she declares the truth. He in turn takes the saner and braver view of the situation. They will live on as before to all outward view, and devote themselves to war work. In the second act comes the news that the lover is wounded. Cartier has discovered abundant evidence of the levity and heartlessness of de Genois's conduct toward her, and by telling Suzanne could wreck her faith in him and in the world; but he decides that the wiser and more generous way is to let her find her own salvation, and she departs for the hospital.

The third act passes by de Genois's bedside as he is dying. To him, too, the war has brought regeneration. In the hardship of trench life, and the solitude of night watches, he has come to recognize her love as the one real and ennobling thing in his previous life. To the distant accompaniment of the songs of a company of convalescent wounded, who are returning to the front, he exhorts her to go back to her husband, and with him fight on for France and victory.

Morals have long been called a matter of geography. Granting that in France they are also a matter of trigonometry, with the triangle as the inevitable base of operations, Bernstein's treatment of his theme is dignified and on the whole convincing. As is usual in these plays, the evening is mainly devoted to conversation about what has happened elsewhere and about the inner motives of those present, with periodic scenes of emotional conflict leading up to the curtains. But the last act, which is in reality a duet, strikes a note which is true and strong, if a trifle obvious, and the effect of the off-stage singing is stirringly theatric.

Miss George is not at her best in emotional acting; but she is intelligent and craftsmanlike always, and she sustained her rôle without break. She was most effective in moments of repression, which her very silence and dumbness made eloquent.

Holbrook Blinn was dignified and vigorous as Cartier, and Lionel Atwill lifted the hospital scene to a high plane of patriotic fervor. Kate Blancke and Alison Skipworth were admirable in minor parts.

Poincare Receives Congressmen.

PARIS, Nov. 14.—The American Congressional delegation which is visiting France was received this morning by President Poincaré in the Palace of the Elysée. The Americans were presented by Henry Franklin-Bouillon, Minister of Missions Abroad.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Elisabeth Marbury, in association with the Shuberts, has put into rehearsal a musical comedy called "Girl o' Mine," the work of Philip Bartholomae and Frank Tours. The cast will include Walter Catlett, Marie Nordstrom, Frank Pollock, Edna Wallace Hopper, Carleton Macy, and Dorothy Dickson.

"Flo-Flo," a musical comedy by Fred de Gresac and Silvio Hein, will be produced at the Cort Theatre next month. Louise Beaudet and Leon Leonard will be among those in the company.

Sidonia Espero, at present in "Kitty Darlin'," has been engaged for a role in "The Star Gazer," coming to the Plymouth next Wednesday.

The first production of the season by the Neighborhood Players will be made at the Neighborhood Playhouse on Saturday night, when Browning's "Pippa Passes" will be presented.

Molly Pearson will make her first screen appearance in support of Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back." Miss Pearson played here in the piece during its run at the Maxine Elliott several years ago.

"The Very Idea" will be presented at the Plattsburg training camp next Sunday night.

A. H. Woods has purchased a play entitled "Two Streets," by Koby Kohn, and will produce it in New York early in the new year.

Plans are being made by Charles Dillingham to produce "Jack o' Lantern" in Paris and London after the war. Fred Stone and the entire present cast will make the trip.

Announcement is made by Joseph Riter that his retirement from the theatrical producing field is only temporary. Mr. Riter is at present engaged in war work, and will resume producing when he believes conditions to be more propitious.

Two hundred soldiers from the 302d Regiment of Engineers, located at Camp Upton, attended last night's performance of "Leave It to Jane" at the Longacre.

Next Monday will be Dramatic Day at the headquarters of the Professional Woman's League, when a program including George F. Perkins, Frederick Truesdell and Mrs. Maud Allen will be presented.

Hedwig Reicher will begin a special engagement on Wednesday of next week at the Irving Place Theatre, appearing in a German translation of Shaw's play, "The Doctor's Dilemma." Miss Reicher's engagement will be limited to one week.

Four hundred members of the 302d Engineers Corps, stationed at Camp Upton, attended the Winter Garden last night and went upon the stage to participate in the patriotic finale, "The Landing of the American Troops in France."

The first performance of "Going Up," the musical play made by Louis Hirsch and Otto Harbach from James Montgomery's farce, "The Aviator," will be given in Atlantic City tonight. Frank Craven is at the head of the cast.

"Antelove," an operetta by Jean Gilbert, will have its first American performance at the German Yorkville Theatre on Thursday night, Nov. 22.

'BORIS GODUNOFF' IS SECOND OPERA LURE

ITS FOLK SPIRIT ENDURES

Didur an Imposing Figure in Title Role and Mme. Matzenauer a Heroic Marina.

BORIS GODUNOFF, opera in three acts and eight scenes, (in Italian.) Music by Modeste Petrovich Moussorgsky. At the Metropolitan Opera House.

Boris	Adamo Didur
Teodoro	Sophie Braslau
Xenia	Lenora Sparkes
The Nurse	Kathleen Howard
Schouisky	Angelo Bada
Tchelkaloff	Vincenzo Reschiglian
Brother Pimenn	Leon Rothier
Dimitri	Paul Althouse
Marina	Margarete Matzenauer
Varlaam	Andrea de Segurola
Missail	Pietro Audisio
The Innkeeper	Marie Mattfeld
The Simpleton	Albert Reiss
A Police Official	Giulio Rossi
Tcerniakowsky	Carl Schlegel

Conductor—Gennaro Papi.

There might be various deductions made and inferences drawn from the fact that Moussorgsky's Russian opera, "Boris Godunoff," reappeared in the repertory of the Metropolitan Opera House on the second night of the season. The most obvious one is that "Boris Godunoff" has proved to be one of the most vital and lasting of any of the new works produced in the last few seasons at the Metropolitan, where many have been tried and found wanting.

Moussorgsky's opera is an embodiment of the ancient Russia, untouched by the modern ideas that are causing the old foundations to crumble. The work is racy of the soil as few musical works are, and the skill with which the composer has caught the folk-spirit and wrought it into the texture and substance of his music gives it a perennial strength.

The performance last evening differed little from many performances of "Boris Godunoff" that have been given in recent seasons. There is not all the old vigor and power that were in the performances under Mr. Toscanini, but the standard of Mr. Toscanini departed with him. Mr. Papi conducted with skill and conscience, but the drastic accent, the power, as well as certain finer details, were missing. Where, for instance, was the wonderful effect that there used to be in the simple orchestral figure in the introduction of the third scene of the first act—an effect marvelously suggestive, but not imitative, of great cathedral bells?

Mme. Matzenauer was the Marina, a heroic one in the grand style, who appears only in the scene in the castle garden, and with this exception the cast was such as has been heard before, though other changes have been made since the first seasons. She sang in excellent voice. Mr. Didur's powerful and dramatic impersonation of Boris, sometimes a little too powerful and too dramatic, is the most imposing single feature among the individual singers. The chorus is the real centre of interest in "Boris Godunoff." Mr. Althouse's voice sounded better than ever, and his singing was of beautiful quality.

WOMAN HEADS HIGH SCHOOL

Miss Turner First Woman So Honored in This City.

Miss Kate E. Turner, Vice Principal of Erasmus Hall High School, was yesterday appointed, by unanimous vote of the Board of Education, Principal of the Bay Ridge High School, succeeding Harry A. Potter, who has been transferred to the New Utrecht High School. The Board of Examiners, which had previously refused to grant her a license, changed its mind and granted one to her.

Miss Turner has the distinction of being the first woman Principal of a high school in this city. She was graduated from the Training School for Teachers when she was 19 years of age. Dr. Walter B. Gunnison, then Principal of Public School 10, made her head of department. When he became Principal of Erasmus Hall High School he had her transferred there. She was Acting Principal of Erasmus during Dr. Gunnison's illness, and after his death was a candidate to succeed him. The Bay Ridge High School is for girls. The Faculty of Erasmus will give a dinner to her in the school on Saturday evening.

SEA FIGHT OFF FLANDERS.

Berlin Reports British Destroyer Hit, But London Denies It.

BERLIN, Nov. 14, (via London.) (British Admiralty, per Wireless Press.)—"On the afternoon of Monday," says an official statement, "a short artillery engagement took place off the Flanders coast between German torpedo boats and British advanced patrol forces, as a result of which one enemy destroyer was hit. The German boats returned to port undamaged."

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The British Admiralty comments as follows on the German report of an engagement off Flanders:

"On Monday some German torpedo boat destroyers came out from under the protection of their shore batteries and fired a few rounds at our patrol vessels, none of which were hit. The fire was promptly returned and the Germans immediately retired under the protection of their shore batteries and our patrol was resumed.

"Incidents of this nature occur daily and in no way interfere with the maintenance and efficacy of our patrol, and they are therefore not reported."

WEST POINT CANDIDATES.

War Department Designates New Yorkers to Take the Examination.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14. — The War Department announced today that the following New Yorkers are among the additional candidates for the West Point entrance examination to be held next March have been designated:

Thomas J. Battle, Jr., first alternate, 1519 Roselle Street, New York City.

Raymond T. Tompkins, 5 Rockledge Place, Yonkers.

Paschal E. Lockhart, first alternate, 64 Elliot Avenue, Yonkers.

Edward M. Cadigan, second alternate, Summit Avenue, Mt. Vernon.

Alice Sovereign's Recital.

Alice Sovereign, who has sung in Aeolian Hall before, gave a recital there yesterday afternoon, postponed from a fortnight ago. Her voice is a contralto of real contralto quality, that is especially good in its lower tones. Mrs. Sovereign's singing has taste and musical feeling; it is not marked by a great display of temperament or of interpretative gift. Her program yesterday composed songs in German by Schubert and Strauss, and Italian and a French group, and songs by Americans in English, including two Indian songs arranged by Harvey Worthington Loomis, and a new arrangement by H. T. Burleigh of "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot." Mrs. Sovereign unfortunately sang flat a good deal.

Edge Calls on State to Give Thanks.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 14.—Abundant crops, financial resources, patriotic enthusiasm, and other factors which, he says, enables the State to battle shoulder to shoulder with nations in the cause of democracy, are cited by Governor Edge as reasons for the people of New Jersey entering whole-heartedly into the spirit of Thanksgiving in his annual Thanksgiving proclamation issued today.

SOLDIER SHOOTS WOMAN.

Wounds a Cabaret Singer and Then Kills Himself.

John Becker, a private in the national army, whose home is in Bridgeport, Conn., shot Mrs. Freda Clayton, a cabaret singer, last night in her rooms at 342 Eighth Avenue, and then fired three bullets into his own body. He died in an ambulance on the way to the New York Hospital. The singer is badly hurt.

Mrs. Clayton told the police that Becker had been attentive to her and that she thought jealousy was the reason for his act. She said she had known Becker for several weeks. He was drafted last September. The police could not ascertain last night at what camp he was stationed.

Cornell Drops Vacations.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 14.—Cornell's latest response to the nation's call for war measures was passed by the Faculty today, practically abolishing vacations and resulting in the college year ending one month earlier, May 22. This will result in giving graduates a chance to place themselves in the service of the country that much earlier.

MORE TROUBLES FOR THE RAILWAYS.

Yesterday was not a good day for the railroads. Their trainmen are proposing to ask $109,000,000 increase of wages for those voting upon the subject, with demands from others sure to follow their success. This is announced on the same day that railways earning gross nearly three billion dollars report a decrease of net of $46,000,000 for nine months of what some call unprecedented prosperity. At Washington shippers of several leading commodities presented to the Interstate Commission their objections to allowing the railways any increase of income at their expense. Such an accumulation of woes can only signify one of two things—either the railways must be kept strong or they will drift into weakness inconsistent with national interests. There is no doubt where the general interest lies. Weak railways are a threat to all private profit, and a sure reduction of the national efficiency in the war. But there is no sign that individual interests are willing to subordinate themselves to the general good. The general preference is to take a chance of the railways surviving sufficiently to sustain trade, the saving from preventing any increase of railway charges being a sort of insurance premium against loss by the deterioration of railway service.

This indifference to the general welfare is not consistent with the sentiments so well expressed by the President to the American Federation of Labor at Buffalo, and applicable equally to shippers and strikers. Said the President:

> Let us show ourselves Americans by showing that we do not want to go off in separate camps or groups by ourselves, but that we want to co-operate with all other classes and all other groups in a common enterprise, which is to release the spirits of the world from bondage.

Words could not more aptly fit the occasion. Whoever refuses to "stand together" with all others elects to "interrupt the processes of our energy" and to reduce the maximum of our productivity. It is no excuse for any that all do it, or nearly all. The more who stand apart, the greater the reason for all standing together. There can be no argument for dissipating our energies in domestic wrangles for profit when there is danger for all profits, and the only surety for any profit is in co-operation by all. The case is rapidly calling for action by Government instead of for appeal. The interest of Government is the greatest of all, and Government can be served by the railways only by action which will advantage others than Government. The longer the railway question is allowed to drift, the worse it gets. When British railways needed more income, passenger fares were raised by half. The other day our railways humbly asked for about 10 per cent. increase, and it is doubtful whether they will be allowed to get it.

This nettle must be grasped with a firm hand. It would bring the shippers to their senses if the Government were to give them notice that they would have to ask for a license to ship anything until after the Government's needs were served. It would help bring the strikers to their senses if they were told that any increase of pay must be accompanied by an increase of efficiency. It would help the Interstate Commerce Commission to reach a decision in the public interest if it were plainly told what the public interest is. Congress neglected this plain duty when the railways were ordered to raise wages and shorten hours, with results now visible to all. The only official who does not shirk his duty, and who receives applause in proportion that he speaks so that he is understanded of all, is the President. He was applauded when he laid aside authority and pleaded for "common counsel." He will be equally applauded when he assumes authority and gives sailing directions to some of his appointees. A nod would be as good as a command to them. They are in urgent need of some way of saving their faces while they do what they have put on the record they ought to do. The Commission would be glad if the President would help it out of the hole into which it thrust itself by too long adherence to theories against conditions.

The letter of the President to Federal Mediator CHAMBERS is in the same moderate appealing tone as his address to the Federation, but with a snapper. He contemplates the possibility that an amicable adjustment cannot be reached, although it is inconceivable to him how patriots can permit a strike to occur, and he proceeds to say that he would regret the necessity of operating the railways by "any unusual measure." The words are mild, but their use shows that something less mild was in the President's mind as a possibility. The President remembers how stubbornly labor has refused arbitration. In August it rejected the proposal of an Adjustment Commission as proposed by the Council of National Defense, although proposed by the body upon which labor had full representation under the leadership of Mr. GOMPERS. Also it is necessary to remember how difficult has been procedure under the Newlands act, to which recourse is now necessary. Mediator CHAMBERS said yesterday that the trainmen had declined arbitration, but that they were willing to meet the President in conference on the 22d. No Americans can do less than that, and the trainmen may do much more. They would be prudent not to be too stiff against arbitration in war times. It is better to have the President on their side. He is a stubborn man, and has a temper for all that he so seldom loses it.

PAY AS YOU GO.

The Controller-elect announces his intention to move for the repeal of the law embodying the "pay-as-you-go" policy of the Fusion administration. He may remain of the same mind after he assumes the responsibility of his office. Or he may change his mind upon discovering that if he does not change it it will be necessary for him to finance the city's bills of that sort out of his personal pocket, as DANIEL WEBSTER offered to pay the national debt himself. It might be possible to repeal the law, but it will be more difficult after the repeal to get money. The pay-as-you-go policy is more a necessity now than when adopted. The city's debt limit is in the near offing on the horizon, and the pockets of those who have money are buttoned now more closely than then.

That will be particularly true if the law they approve should be repealed. That would be plain notice to them that the debt limit is something to be hurdled, in the opinion of the spenders of their money. The Fusion administration adopted the pay-as-you-go policy as a self-denying ordinance for itself. The city will regard it as more necessary for the successors of that administration. And if the city should waver in that faith the bankers who put checks on the city's credit surely will not renew it in the interest of profligacy at a time of worldwide scarcity of funds. The way for the next administration to get money to spend is to save it, and one of the best ways of fostering frugality is to adhere to the policy which the Controller-elect wishes to scrap, as his first official act.

FALL OF THE PAINLEVE CABINET.

In its two months of tottering life the Painlevé Cabinet has been always on the edge of falling, and it resigned a little more than three weeks ago. Mr. RIBOT was thrown to the Socialist lions, but the dissatisfaction of the Socialists has never been appeased. The Socialists and Radicals obstructed. The Unified Socialists abstained from voting. The scandals of the pro-German intrigues and press, the accusations which forced the retirement of Mr. MALVY from the Ministry of Interior in the Ribot Cabinet, the prosecution of Mr. LEON DAUDET, the alleged "Royalist plot," a fine mess of dirty linen, personal jealousies and ambitions, hunger for office, the cry for younger men, the usual complaint about the progress of the war, causes known and unknown, obvious or suspected, can be found for the weakness and fall of the Painlevé Government. The attitude and behavior of the Socialists is the causa causans.

After a vote of confidence in the military and diplomatic policy of the Government, it had to resign on the question, made a question of confidence, of taking up immediately, or postponing until after the close of the Interallied Conference, discussion of the great recent and current crop of scandals and suspicions. The Extreme Right joined with the Extreme Left in overthrowing the Government. The responsibility from the first has been with the Socialists. They refused to accept it until last Tuesday. They would not allow the reconstruction of the Ribot Cabinet. They have now beaten its successor.

Mr. PAINLEVE has more than once denounced the political "groups" that squabble and manoeuvre and waste time. The only Cabinet he was able to form, and it was his second attempt, was made up of seven Radical Republicans, two members of the Republican Union of the Senate, one Republican of the Left, three of the Radical Left, three Socialist Radicals, one Socialist Republican. The Unified Socialists would have none of it. They were especially opposed to Mr. RIBOT, Minister of Foreign Affairs, but their main ground of opposition was lack of confidence in the energy of the Cabinet. Mr. ALBERT THOMAS, the vigorous Minister of Munitions in the Ribot Cabinet, and a steadfast advocate of war until victory, said in defense of his party, the Unified Socialists, who were compared by their adversaries in the Paris press to the Petrograd Soviet, that they were not destroying but promoting national unity. A real and fruitful unity could only come from national comprehension of the real situation. The country needed "energetic and resolute leaders." The Cabinet, as a whole, did not impress him as composed of such leaders, and he objected especially to the War Council, made up of old or elderly men, lacking in "youth, vigor, and power."

It is the misfortune of a Socialist politician to be bound, in and out of office, by his party, and Mr. THOMAS would not have been permitted to enter the Painlevé Cabinet, even if he had wished. Since, however, he is for a fight to the finish, and since most of the French Unified Socialists, unlike the French Minority Socialists, who with the mass of Socialists everywhere long for a German peace, have been French and patriotic, we may accept Mr. THOMAS's opinion, whatever our sympathy for the brilliant talent and achievement of Mr. PAINLEVE. His Cabinet has been but a stopgap. In spite of votes of confidence, it has always been weak in the Chamber. By a curious combination of extremes it has met the fate foreseen for it from the first.

The attempted penetration of France by pro-Germanism, "Boloism," a hundred channels of German intrigue, financial, political, social, press, a Deputy caught in the act of taking German money, the strange intimacy between ALMEREYDA, editor of Le Bonnet Rouge, one of a brood of pacifist, internationalist, covertly German papers established in France, with Mr. MALVY, Minister of Interior in the Ribot Cabinet, the suspicions with which the notorious and ever-sinister CAILLAUX has been long surrounded, a whole host of crooked or doubtful proceedings has been going on in France. It would be better for France to know all that can be known of the domestic enemies and the foreign intriguers that have been seeking, always vainly, to undermine her patriotic resolution. It is too much to hope, perhaps, that that inveterate and implacable Ishmael, Mr. CLEMENCEAU, should be made Prime Minister. He stands alone, and he has passed a good deal of his life in raising enemies. But he is as brave as he is bitter. He has resistless energy. It would be a satisfaction and a joy to see him flay CAILLAUX and the rest of the friends of Germany in France.

SHIPS FROM THE NEUTRALS AND JAPAN.

At last the northern European neutral Governments and the owners of more than one hundred ships lying idle at our ports have been convinced that they must yield to the War Trade Board. The eighty-four Dutch vessels and those from Norway, Sweden, and Denmark will be unloaded, and all of them, it is understood, will go into service for the benefit of the United States and our allies. Some are to take the places of American ships in trade along our coast or with South America, thus releasing vessels for the transatlantic route. Others will bring sugar from Java and wheat from Australia and Argentina. Flour milled from this grain we shall export to England and France. The agreement was foreshadowed a few days ago, when one Dutch ship sailed with a cargo of corn for the Belgian Relief Commission, and another with coal for South America. While our fleet for war work has thus been enlarged by amicable agreement, at the same time provision for further additions has been made by negotiations with Japan. The ship steel problem has been solved. Japan will sell or charter to our Government 300,000 tons of ships in exchange for 100,000 tons of the steel plates needed by her shipbuilders. Some of the vessels will work on the Atlantic, but a majority are to carry supplies across the Pacific to Russia.

The Dutch ships and others have been held here four months because our Government would not release cargoes of wheat and fodder grain which might directly or indirectly increase the food supply of Germany. In what way does the agreement affect such exports? We and our allies need the ships, but the original decision concerning what they have on board should not be changed. The neutrals have been assured, it is said, that they "will receive enough foodstuffs to meet their necessary requirements," and exports may be permitted before the end of the year. But they must not go to take the place of similar products sent to Germany. Norway and Sweden are ready to obey such a rule, but Holland has not yet consented to discontinue her exports of dairy products to our enemies. She seeks American fodder for her cows. Our Government insists, however, that no fodder shall go to Holland from this country so long as she sends butter, cheese, and milk to the Germans. Surrender of the Dutch ships probably indicates that Germany will lose this source of supply.

We are confident that when all the terms of the agreement are made known it will be seen that the wise and just policy of the War Trade Board has not been modified. The neutrals need wheat and fodder, but Holland and Denmark are still sending food to Germany, although their own people need all they produce. Our Government wants the ships, but it cannot be induced to pay for them in exports that will help the Germans who are killing American soldiers.

THE QUESTIONNAIRE.

Of Mr. GLADSTONE it was said that he could make even a budget interesting. The man who can make the selective draft quiz lucid and inviting to the 9,000,000 or more of his fellow citizens who are listed for war service will be doing his bit. Officially it is known as the Questionnaire. President WILSON has called upon "all citizens" to assist the local and district boards, and he has singled out the lawyers and doctors as the most useful.

The Questionnaire prepares the way for a thorough organization of the man power of the United States for service in the war. That does not necessarily mean military duty of any kind. The drafted (originally about 10,000,000) are divided into five classes. When the answers to Form 1001 have been filed the boards will proceed to determine to which class registrants belong, and in their respective classes they are supposed to remain until the end of the war. Evasion and errors will, of course, compel changes. In Class I. will be included the first to be called out for the national army: Single men without dependent relatives; married men, with or without children, who have habitually failed to support their families; married men supported by their wives; married men whose children are making their own living; unskilled farm and industrial laborers, and registrants who refuse or fail to answer the questions. But it should be noted that appeal will be for cause against inclusion. Class V. will not be called out at all. It contains, among others, certain officials, ministers, alien enemies, resident aliens who claim exemption, licensed pilots, and the physically or mentally unfit. In the three intervening classes are collected those who are, according to their occupations, economic condition, and family relations, progressively removed from the call to military duty. To quote from the rules governing "the answering and filing" of the Questionnaire:

> The effect of classification in Class II. is to grant a temporary discharge from draft, effective until Class I. in the jurisdiction of the local board is exhausted. The effect of classification in Class III. is to grant a temporary discharge from draft, effective until Classes I. and II. in the jurisdiction of the local board are exhausted; and, similarly, Class IV. becomes liable only when Classes I., II., and III. are exhausted.

There are twelve "series" of questions, and the answers must be sworn to. All the "General Questions" of Series I., which relates to occupation, earnings, hours of labor, and education, must be answered; also all the questions of Series II., "Physical Fitness." Then follow several pages of questions designed to bring out information about the registrant's connection, if any, with public office, the ministry, the Federal and military services, and the mercantile marine. Also his citizenship and association with any religious sect that forbids participation in war are subjects of inquiry. Of particular importance is the matter of the dependency of others upon the registrant, and here the examination is searching. Hardly less important is the quiz about the registrant's affairs if he is engaged in an industrial or an agricultural occupation. But with regard to every set of questions after "Series II., Physical Fitness," the citizen who receives Form 1001 in the mails will be relieved to read after the first question of many: "If your answer is 'No,' do "not answer any other questions and "do not sign your name." For many of the registrants it will be like climbing up the first two flights of steps in the Washington Monument and being then carried up to the top in the elevator.

The registrant's last act is to turn to the first page and under oath claim (if he can and desires to) exemption, or "deferred classification," which is inclusive in Classes II., III., IV., or V.; but he must have a "supporting affidavit." There will be cries for help as soon as the Questionnaires are distributed, but Legal Advisory Boards will be ready to elucidate all problems, and these boards will be supplemented by legions of volunteers. The quiz will soon lose its terrors, except for the illiterate and men of alien tongue. These will have to be lifted over the stile. The grand result will be a classification, after sixty days of effort, (President WILSON's estimate,) that should last through the wear and tear of the war and be an incalculable saving in routine and red tape. The Crowder selective draft system is fair and democratic; clear enough also to the painstaking.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Germans Then Like Germans Now.

So large has become, in the last three years, the public's knowledge of the utter barbarity as well as the ruthless greed with which German armies wage war that no very appreciable addition to it will be made by publication yesterday of a bit of history relating to what the Kaiser's representative and his soldiers did in China just after the Boxer rebellion. What the War Department accomplishes by permitting disclosure now of the facts as to the looting of the ancient Peking observatory is not the revelation that Germans go to war for the same reasons that have moved savages in all ages, but that at a time when even they could not allege the excuse of "military necessity" or imperiled national existence they conducted themselves exactly as they have in Belgium and northeastern France when they could, or at any rate did, make such allegations.

Of course the taking of a few old astronomical instruments—things of greater value than so much metal only to archæologists—was about the least of the crimes committed by WALDERSEE and his men in China. They killed the helpless Chinamen as energetically as they robbed them, and, as the published correspondence between WALDERSEE and CHAFFEE shows, they were almost as much astonished as they were offended when the American commander—himself no carpet soldier and not noted for delicate sensibilities—protested against pillage and murder. For it was not only with the former that CHAFFEE found fault so sharply, and with the indignation to be expected from an honest and decent man. If the archives of the War Department are subjected to further search there will be discovered in them stories about the joint expedition into China that are far more interesting than the one dealing with the relics in the old observatory. Another, long known in our military circles, has to do with the slaying of an American sentry who had ventured to do his duty, to the offending of a German officer, and with the subsequent proceedings that considerably more than evened up the score. That tale it has been deemed wise, hitherto, to suppress, but there seems to be no reason, now, to keep it and several others like it under the departmental lock and key.

Indecision Is Not a Virtue.

Rome, according to the special correspondent of THE TIMES, is just now more than well supplied with residents who proudly boast the possession of "well balanced" minds. Presumably they also offer as a claim to superiority over their neighbors that they "are able to see both sides of a question."

We have such gentry in this country, too, and more than enough. One of them, out in Indiana, a college professor, has recently been forced to resign his position because his Faculty colleagues resented his public defense of German atrocities. He said that they were only the things done by every army. Another, in Pennsylvania, has lost the secretaryship of a corporation because he does not think that "in this war or any other war the right is all on one side," and on that ground had done what he could to stop the sale of Liberty bonds.

It is a curious fact that these exponents of what—quite falsely—is so often called "the judicial temperament" invariably show a tender consideration for the sensibilities of the enemies of their country, and none at all for those of its friends and defenders. Of necessity, not being for their country, they are against it to the extent of their ability, which in most cases, fortunately, though not in all, is small.

The fact is that these people have minds as far as possible from the judicial, and, instead of being "well balanced," they are in a state of permanent rest in a single position—a state into which no weighing machine of any kind ever gets until after it is so rusted or worn as to be incapable of the decisive motions on which the value of a weighing machine wholly depends. What sort of a Judge would he be who, because there was something to be said on both sides of every case that came before him, should go on forever listening to arguments from the opposing counsel and never reach the conclusion that, in comparison with one of the arguments made, the other would have to be treated as nonexistent?

The preservation, in the face of preponderating evidence, of an impartial mind is indicative, at best, of mental laziness, at next best, of disinclination to accept and act on the obligations which a decision would impose, and, at worst, of out-and-out treason to one side or the other.

It Would Awaken Resentment.

Is it "hoarding," and is it really harmful, for a householder to have succeeded in getting into his cellar as much coal as it has been his custom to lay in to carry him through the Winter? Not many people in this city or its vicinity, have been able to do that, but a considerable number have managed, by using much exertion and paying big prices, to obtain enough fuel to enable them to view at least the first months of Winter without the apprehension of freezing in their homes, and these fortunate ones are now threatened by the local administrator of the coal supply with deprivation of all except a minute fraction of their scanty store.

He will be justified, of course, in carrying out this plan if the situation is, or should it become, really desperate—if, that is, suffering from cold will be the portion of many within a few days or weeks unless an immediate division of the available stock on hand is made. To make such a division, however, would be a difficult and expensive process, and it would constitute a penalizing of foresight highly incongruous with our established notions and therefore sure to be resented by those on whom the penalty fell.

It is safe to say that nobody has felt himself put out of the category of good citizens because he bought, if he could, enough coal to keep his family warm till Spring. This the good citizen has always done without a thought that he was "hoarding," and though that in itself is not a decisive reason why he should do it now, it somehow does keep his conscience quiet, unless it is a particularly sensitive one.

Waldersee's Loot at Potsdam.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It might be interesting to readers of THE TIMES to know that the Chinese astronomical instruments spoken of in yesterday's TIMES as stolen from Peking by Count von Waldersee during the Boxer rebellion, were taken to Potsdam and erected in a plaza or park near the Sans Souci Palace, built by Frederick the Great. There were several large pieces in the lot, one of them a globe showing the geography of the earth. Every Sunday thousands of sightseers visited this spot, and, I doubt not, among them members of the "Potsdam gang." It is quite conceivable that objects with such a history would furnish a stimulating incentive to greater things of like nature, especially at this time.

MARCHING MEN.

I hear them tramping by my door,
The marching soldiers' feet;
As, crouching on the shadowed floor,
I peer into the street.

No men are marching there, you say;
The night is dark and still.
I cannot keep the sound away
That beats across my sill.

For I have heard the marching men,
And watched the brave hosts go;
And I have prayed they come again,
Triumphant o'er the foe.

And till they come you need not say:
"Good Mother, watch no more."
For I shall hear them night and day,
Go tramping by my door.

And till they come I still shall peer
Into the street to see
If 'tis but marching men I hear
Or One returned to me!

INDORSES MRS. BLATCH.

Woman Suffrage a Small Matter in the Face of the German Menace.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I would like to add my humble little note to the splendid battle cry of Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch in yesterday's issue of THE TIMES. I had wondered what had become of Mrs. Blatch in the suffrage movement, and am glad indeed to know she is one who has had the grasp and acumen to know a supreme issue when she saw it and to bend her energies to it and it alone. It is the single-track mind that gets an issue and never can see anything else, no matter how circumstances change. The utter and absolute and unconditional defeat of Germany is the supreme issue before the whole world today, and until that is settled once for all, all else should, I believe, be absolutely subordinated to it. Women who are not suffragists see this, but most suffragists seem to be unable to remove their minds from the little narrow-gauge track on which they have been running for some years.

I must say I never felt so little interest in woman suffrage as I do today and so little confidence in the advisability of it. Life, as most of us who have passed our early youth know, consists largely in meeting situations. Hence, what was crucial yesterday is not today. That is, while woman suffrage may have been the most important thing for the women of the United States to work for four years ago, today, with this life and death struggle on our hands, it is surely a very, very minor issue. That women have clung to it so tenaciously, (at least, many of them,) with their own or other women's sons and husbands and brothers offering their lives in the country's terrible ordeal, seems to me to argue simply an obsession of mind rather than sane, clear thinking. And to make themselves nuisances and obstructionists at this time, when every ounce of the Government's time and energy should be concentrated on war measures, seems to me not only hysterical and stupid, but despicable. I thank Mrs. Blatch for her womanly stand.

The Bulgarian "Hymn of Hate."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read in your paper a dispatch dated Washington, Nov. 10, saying that the Bulgarian "Hymn of Hate," teeming with excitement to cruelty and atrocities, had aroused officials and diplomats here. The Bulgarian Minister, Stephen Panaretoff, says the author, Ivan Arnaudoff, described as "the Bulgarian Pindar," is not of a standing to bespeak the national sentiment of Bulgaria. But the Minister of the Kultured Bulgarians at Washington says of the bard:

> "He is connected with the Bulgarian Department of Education, and writes occasionally."

Of course he writes occasionally. That means that he writes only when the Bulgarians are able to show their Kultur, as now in Rumania and four years ago in Turkey.

As a man who knows this civilized people who, with all the atrocities of which the Germans are convicted, can still be their teachers, I find myself obliged to take up emphatically the defense of this Bulgarian national poet against the accusation of his dignified Minister, who denies him the real genius of his country, and I say that he expresses the only real and true sentiment of the Bulgarians in this wonderful poem. And to prove that Mr. Arnaudoff is the national poet, and has taken his inspiration from reality, I have two photographs illustrating his hymn. These are not drawings, but taken from life, and show Rumanian men, women, and children as they were slain by the Bulgarian invaders.

ART NOTES.

At the Modern Gallery is an exhibition of paintings and drawings by André Derain, a "modernist" painter who has followed in the footsteps of Cézanne with so scrupulous a devotion as almost to obliterate his personal characteristics. In his landscapes and still life subjects, which are full in color and dominated by the strong outlines of his school, he is chiefly a disciple, but in the gray and brown studies of more compact draftsmanship and more direct vision one sees what he had in mind to express. A very beautiful little still life in pale violets, greens, and yellows is a charming and simple performance, and his head of a woman in a gray hood, which was shown at the exhibition of the Independents, has dignity and a greater degree of plasticity than exists in most of the neighboring canvases.

At the Daniel Gallery are paintings of Provincetown by Bror Nordfeldt, who has escaped from the limitations of the colored print to this wider and freer field. The work is less knowing than Derain's and in a certain sense less interesting, showing fewer evidences of exceptional ability to construct with color. There is a refreshing freedom from schematic pattern, however; each picture bears the mark of personal observation and a sense of humor plays invigoratingly through the record of things seen. The "Winter" is a distinguished bit of seeing and feeling, and "The Warehouse," gray and gaunt, with expressive windows, has the beauty of restraint. Restraint is not the note of the "Barbados Negroes" or "The Periwinkle Feast," and the exuberance of characterization in these brilliant studies is a part of their clear appeal to the unsophisticated mind. The exhibition lasts until Nov. 20.

The Ohio Society of New York is showing the work of Ohio painters at its rooms in the Waldorf-Astoria. The list of names is a long one, with many notable in the art world. It includes Kenyon Cox, Robert Henri, Ernest Blumenschein, Cullen Yates, Eli Harvey, Louis D. Vaillant, Bryson Burroughs, Karl Anderson, Howard Chandler Christy, George Bellows, and others of similar significance.

At the Macbeth Galleries portraits by Louis Betts will be shown until Nov. 17. Most of them were painted in New York, where Mr. Betts is now making his home. The extreme vivacity and alertness of the style gives an air of animation to the exhibition that just misses artificiality. It is the kind of galvanic gayety that we have learned to associate with the stage through the tendency of the average player to smile a moment too long for the effect of nature. But with this hint of the defect of the theatre there is more than a hint of its greater quality, the stressing of essentials of character. None of the sitters in these portraits are nonentities, each one has a definite part to play and is fitted for the rôle. Even in the portraits of children the painter has kept this in mind and communicated it.

An exhibition of fifty French war posters collected by Mrs. Armstrong Whitney will be held at the MacDowell Club Galleries on Nov. 14 and 15. The posters, showing the French spirit, are for the purposes of loans and patriotic effort of all kinds. They are of special interest to teachers and students of art.

The Little Gallery is holding an exhibition of portraits of children by William M. Chase, Maxwell Armfield, Louise Cox, C. C. Curran, Edward Dufner, Charles Hopkinson, Richard Maynard, Ivan Olinsky, Helen M. Turner, and William J. Whittemore. A number have been seen in other exhibitions, but Mr. Armfield's "Justina with a Bird" is among the newer examples and is a charming modern primitive with much to ally it technically with the Italian fifteenth century now so brilliantly to the fore in New York.

CONDEMN BARNARD STATUE.

National Council Declares It Unsuited for Gift to Allies.

The Council of the National Academy of Design has added its protest against allowing replicas of the Barnard statue of Lincoln to go to France and England. At its meeting last Monday the Council adopted a resolution setting forth that it did not regard the portrayal as adequate, and that the body of the academy had not approved it. The resolution read:

"Whereas, The impression prevails that the replicas offered to France and England of a statue of Lincoln by George Gray Barnard in Cincinnati are being offered as gifts from the people of America, presumably with the approval of the artists and art organizations of this country, therefore

"Resolved, That the Council of the National Academy of Design hereby asserts that there has been no approval of this statue on the part of the National Academy as a body, and, further, that the members of this Council as here assembled do not consider that the statue adequately portrays Lincoln. In a work of this kind all must agree that character and likeness are essentials. But to us this presentation does not convey the recognized characteristics of Lincoln. In it we are unable to discern evidence of his genius or humor or any of those lofty qualities which are invariably associated with his great name."

The action of the Council was unanimous. These eight of the eleven members were present: Howard Russell Butler, Harry W. Watrous, Charles C. Curran, Francis C. Jones, Elliott Daingerfield, Colin Campbell Cooper, Douglas Volk, E. Irving Couse.

Mr. Watrous, Corresponding Secretary of the Academy, and member of the Council, said last night that he believed Herbert Adams, President of the Council, who was absent, already had recorded his disapproval.

Though the action of the Council does not require ratification, Mr. Watrous said it was not unlikely that the subject would be brought before the Academy at its meeting in December. If so, he said he felt sure from his knowledge of the sentiment of the members that the sculpture would be condemned overwhelmingly by the painters, sculptors, and architects who comprise its membership. "A very great majority of them," he said, "disapprove the work most heartily. To me the thing is abominable. It suggests nothing so much as man suffering the agony of intestinal pain and nursing his abdomen in consequence."

URGES CHANGE IN WAR TAX.

Trade Board Member Against Law's Salary Provision.

Radical amendment of the new war revenue Federal income tax law, mailing business letters early in the day to prevent Post Office congestion, increasing railroad rates, investigation of high cost of milk, and the use of the New York State Barge Canal terminals for storing the Government's war exports were among reforms urged at the monthly meeting yesterday of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation, at 203 Broadway.

J. Frederick Talcott advised the board to go on record as favoring that the excess profits provision of the Federal war revenue tax law should not apply to salaries.

"The increased cost of living is variously estimated to approximate 50 per cent. since the war," Mr. Talcott said. "Salaries which have been increased 50 per cent. or more as compared with the pre-war period might be reasonably taxed upon the excess over a 50 per cent. increase, but not on the basis provided in the law for the taxation of excess or war profits. The tax on such increase of salaries should be a flat tax definitely stated.

"The tax on corporations where small capital is involved and where the profits are largely or wholly the result of personal labor, whether of hand or of brain, should be in the same category; that is, the tax should be a flat tax upon profits without regard to capital. The war revenue tax law at present may cause very unequal taxation. Under the existing provision a small corporation with $20,000 capital, exercising great skill, energy, and judgment, would be taxed $27,360, whereas a corporation with a capital of $100,000 making $50,000 would pay only $17,400."

The board referred the war revenue law to a special committee for a detailed report and recommendations.

Frank Brainard, a member of the board, has prepared a detailed memorandum of the way in which the barge canal terminals near deep water could be used for the storing and shipping of United States Government war supplies abroad.

The board adopted resolutions urging all business firms to help the Post Office by mailing their letters early, and urging the Interstate Commerce Commission to increase railroad rates.

TRAFFIC LEAGUE TO MEET.

Convention Opens Here Today to Consider Car Demurrage.

Car demurrage and storage will form the chief subjects for discussion at the annual meeting of the National Industrial Traffic League, which begins this morning at the Waldorf-Astoria and extends over tomorrow. Other questions, national in scope affecting shippers at large, will be taken up. D. F. Hurd, Chairman of the Executive Committee, presided yesterday at a meeting called to discuss the subjects to be brought before the convention today.

An official of the association said last night that it could not be stated in advance of the general meeting whether the organization would take any action, for or against, the pending application of the railroads before the Interstate Commerce Commission, for an increase in rates. "We generally let the commission decide what is equitable in rate advances for the roads," he said.

JENKINS LEAVES $3,720,676.

Federal Transfer Tax on Manufacturer's Estate $220,877.

Alfred Blunt Jenkins of Jenkins Brothers, manufacturers of valve packing, who died on Dec. 29 last at his home, West Orange, N. J., left an estate appraised yesterday at $3,720,676, of which only $36,081 consisting of realty and personal property in the Adirondacks was taxable in New York. His wife, Annie G. Jenkins, got $10,000 in cash and an annuity of $12,000, and the residuary estate went to his daughter, Harriet J. Yardley. His son-in-law, Farnham Yardley, head of Jenkins Brothers, got $100,000.

Mr. Jenkins gave $25,000 to the Orange Free Library and $5,000 each to the Orange Orphan Society, House of the Good Shepherd, in Orange, the Orange Bureau of Associated Charities, Orange Fresh Air Works, and St. Stephen's College, Annandale, N. Y. He gave $2,500 to each of nine friends. The Federal transfer tax on his estate is $220,877.

Edgar B. Bronson Left $99,343.

The estate of Edgar Beecher Bronson, hunter, author and aeronaut, who was a cousin of Henry Ward Beecher, was appraised yesterday at $99,343, which is divided equally between his son, Edgar B. Bronson, his daughter, Elizabeth V. B. Tweedy of London and Elizabeth V. Bronson, daughter of his deceased son, Slidell. The bulk of the estate consisted of $88,700 in stocks and bonds. His personal estate included a valuable collection of animal heads and skins of animals killed by the decedent in South Africa, and royalties on his books, "Vanguard," "Reminiscences of a Ranchman," and "Red-Blooded." Mr. Bronson died last February.

UP TO LABOR HERE TO DEFEAT GERMANY

Full Co-operation of Workers Essential to Success, Says Sir Stephenson Kent.

SHIPS FIRST GREAT NEED

British Munitions Mission Tells of Some Errors Abroad in Reaching Maximum Efficiency.

Victory or defeat for America, and that means victory or defeat for the allied cause, depends, in the opinion of Sir Stephenson Kent, head of the British Special Munitions Mission, at present in this country, on the correct solution of the nation's labor problems. Wholehearted co-operation of labor and capital and the Government is absolutely essential to the success of the armies, according to Sir Stephenson.

The British Munitions Mission, which came over at the request of the American Government to tell how Great Britain met and surmounted her labor difficulties where they bore upon the manufacture of munitions, has been in New York for ten days conferring with employers and members of various labor organizations. The conferences have been executive at the request of President Wilson, who will receive a full report after the mission goes back to England, but yesterday, their conferences here being ended, Sir Stephenson and G. H. Baillie, the electrical engineer with the mission, consented to discuss some aspects of the situation as the Britishers saw them.

Sir Stephenson emphasized that the mission came over at the invitation of our Government. It did not come to suggest or advise, but merely to give employers and workingmen in the United States the benefit of the experiences of Great Britain in trying to reach maximum efficiency in supplying her armies with everything needful and maintaining those armies at maximum fighting strength.

"First of all," said Sir Stephenson, "I want to thank the Americans with whom we have conferred for the cordial way in which they have received our history of events at home. It is not necessary to say that we have been hospitably entertained, but I can't help but remark on the interest, the intelligent interest, with which our audiences listened to what we had to say. And let me say that I believe America is going to grapple with her problems.

"Conditions here are naturally different from those in England. We of the mission do not for a moment anticipate that the courses which England followed in dealing with her labor problem will of necessity be sound when applied in this country. But we are hopeful that our visit has obviated the trial of certain of our experiments which proved unsuccessful.

"On the solution of your labor problem—the correct solution, I mean—more than perhaps any of us can see, hangs, in my view, victory or defeat. Without the wholehearted co-operation of labor and capital with the Government we cannot hope for a successful issue.

"While I am on this point, let me say a word about what we found in regard to labor in this country. In all the centres we visited and among all labor leaders whom we met, we found nothing but the most loyal willingness to serve your country and your Government. I might say that here in New York we have found relations between capital and labor even happier than elsewhere in the country."

Sir Stephenson then described how England had met her labor troubles, referring to the Treasury agreement, which was entered into between the Government and labor and capital early in 1915.

"The agreement was perhaps the turning point in the prosecution of the war in our country," he said.

Sir Stephenson declined, for obvious reasons, to deal with specific instances of what this country must do to meet her difficulties. He agreed, however, to say a word about one industry, the most important of all, in his opinion.

"Whether the submarines are successful or not,'" he declared, "your country will want every ton of shipping which can be put on the sea. We are in for a long, long war, and I believe one of the principal means for winning it lies in the success of your shipbuilding program. The sooner the ships are in the water the nearer we will be to the peace we all long for.'"

Commissioner Baillie, as the technical expert of the mission, took up the question of American efficiency.

"While I have not had sufficient time to go through your factories and munition plants as thoroughly as I should wish," he said, "I may say, judging from what I did see, that I was struck with the efficiency of your machine shops. It has been very encouraging indeed. America is far better equipped than any other country to get out ammunition quickly."

The Commissioner also had a few words about the success in England of putting women in the munition plants.

"In England," he said, "we began to employ women because we had come to the end of our man power. Here you have not yet reached the point where you are compelled to turn to women to get munitions. Our experiment with women has been a complete surprise to every one who had anything to do with it. Our women have shown the most remarkable capacity for acquiring skill after very brief training and have been willing to undertake work far removed from their ordinary vocations. They entered our explosives factories, where they faced danger as gallantly as our men who have gone 'over the top.' And we have had explosions in munition plants, too, one very bad one, and these have brought home to the women the risks they were taking. But we have found no diminution in the willingness of women to go on with the work, even after such explosions."

The Commissioner was asked if he did not think American women would show a spirit equal to that displayed by Englishwomen.

"I have seen the enormous work your women have undertaken and carried out in caring for the wounded in France, even before you entered the war," was his answer.

The mission held its final conference yesterday morning in the rooms of the Merchants' Association. The matters discussed had reference to the effect of Government work on transportation and similar lines.

Sir Stephenson said yesterday afternoon that he did not know how soon the mission would sail for home. They were going to Washington at once, he said, and their future plans would depend on their talks with President Wilson and Secretary of War Baker.

FETE TO AID SOLDIERS.

Fund Will Provide Clubs and Lodgings for Allied Fighters.

Under the auspices of the National Emergency Relief Society for the Army and Navy an entertainment called the "Fete des Allies" will be held tomorrow afternoon and evening at the Waldorf-Astoria to raise a fund to provide clubs and lodgings for the soldiers and sailors of the allied armies, including men in United States service, when in this city. It has been observed that the soldiers of the allied armies and sailors from visiting ships when strangers here have found it difficult to get suitable quarters.

The National Emergency Relief Society for the Army and Navy is a new patriotic society organized by a committee of women, including Mrs. William Cummings Story, Mrs. Simon Baruch, Mrs. Rolf E. Bolling, Mrs. Clifford Tabor McAllister, Mrs. Theodore Pettigrew and Mrs. Charles L. Goldsborough. The committee was formed when it was learned that more than four hundred enlisted men of the Army slept in Grand Central Station last week when on leave here.

Governor Whitman and Mayor Mitchel have promised to attend and the bill of the entertainment will include Raymond Hitchcock, Grace La Rue, Anna Wheaton, Florence Reed, members of the Winter Garden company, and as a special feature, Mlle. Desiré Lubowska will perform "The Ceremony of Mourning and The Ancient Rite of Egypt." Many other prominent players have promised to appear.

MISS JANE MORGAN WED TO GEO. NICHOLS

MARGUERITE SHONTS WEDS

The Bride of Rutherfurd Bingham In St. Thomas's—Nuptials of Miss Johns and L. S. Kirtland.

Several fashionable weddings took place yesterday, early in the opening of the Winter social season.

The wedding of Miss Jane N. Morgan, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Pierpont Morgan, and George Nichols, son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. T. Nichols of this city and Oyster Bay, was a quiet country affair, the ceremony being performed at noon in the quaint little church of St. John's, in Lattingtown, near Locust Valley, L. I. The interior of the church was massed with yellow chrysanthemums.

Owing to the war the nuptials were very simple, and only the immediate relatives of the two families and a few intimate friends were present. The seating capacity of the church is limited to about a hundred, and it was comfortably filled, many of the guests arriving on a special train of five cars from New York. Others motored from their nearby estates.

The same privacy that marked the wedding of the bride's sister, Miss Frances T. Morgan, and Paul G. Pennoyer, last June, was observed, and only those holding cards were admitted to the church and to Matinecock Point, the country home of the bride's parents, where a bridal breakfast and reception were held after the ceremony.

Bride Walks with Her Father.

The bride had no attendants, and walked with her father, who gave her in marriage. She was gowned simply in cream-colored satin and rare old lace. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. W. T. Hinton, rector of the church. Two rings were used in the ceremony.

John T. Nichols acted as best man for his brother, and the ushers were Lieutenant Nathaniel F. Ayer, U. S. N., of Boston; Lieutenant C. Sherman Hoyt, U. S. N., of this city; Browning Baker of Carmichael, Md.; Henry S. Morgan, brother of the bride, and William B. Nichols, a brother of the bridegroom.

The only member of the Morgan family absent was Junius S. Morgan, Jr., a brother of the bride, who is somewhere in service on a United States destroyer.

After the reception at the Morgan country residence the bridal pair left on a short honeymoon trip, and they will probably reside on the Nichols estate, "The Kettles," Cove Neck, Oyster Bay, on their return.

The engagement of the young couple was announced last June. The bride is a granddaughter of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, and has been active in Red Cross work, and was for a time engaged in hospital work abroad. Mr. Nichols is a Harvard man, and a member of the same firm as his father, Minot, Hooper & Co., dealers in cotton goods. His parents have been neighbors in the country of the Morgans for several years.

Bingham—Shonts.

The marriage of Rutherfurd Bingham of the Diplomatic Service and son of General Theodore A. Bingham and Mrs. Bingham of this city, and Miss Marguerite Shonts, the elder daughter of Theodore P. Shonts, President of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company and the New York Railways Company, and of Mrs. Shonts of 15 West Fifty-fifth Street, was celebrated yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the chantry of St. Thomas's Church, Fifth Avenue and Fifty-third Street. The decorations were chrysanthemums, and the Rev. Dr. E. M. Stires, rector of the church, performed the ceremony.

The bride walked with her father to the chancel, and he gave her in marriage. She wore a draped one-piece walking gown of tête de neighe velvet, draped in a slight bustle effect at the back, and having the round neck finished with a bib collar of white net and lace. Her mushroom hat of velvet, matching the gown, had two large bird of paradise clusters spreading each side of the centre front, and her brown satin boots matched her frock. She carried a round nosegay of orange buds and blossoms, with scarf ends of old point lace, and wore a single string of pearls.

She was attended as matron of honor by her sister, Theodora, the Duchess de Chaulnes, wearing a narrow-fitted black velvet robe, clearing the instep in front and forming a narrow round train at the back. It was cut low in the front, and a single short string of huge pearls was her only decoration. A small cluster of purplish red roses was fastened low on her corsage, and from the top of her royal black velvet turban rose innumerable short white ostrich tips. She wore a silver fox neck piece, and carried a muff to match. Following the Duchess and immediately preceding the bride was the little Duke de Chaulnes, 9 years old.

Mr. Bingham's best man was Glenn Stewart, also of the Diplomatic Service, and the ushers were Allan G. Wellman, Captain Constant Cordier, Frederick M. Deering, and Walter G. Charg. There was no reception. Mr. Bingham has been appointed First Secretary of the American Legation at Copenhagen, Denmark, and he and his bride will shortly leave for that post. Mr. Bingham was graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. In 1911 he entered the Diplomatic Service and served as Secretary of the Legation at Quito. Later he was assigned to the Latin-American division of the State Department, and after that was sent to Vienna. He is a member of the St. Nicholas Society and also of the Metropolitan Club of Washington. His father was at one time Commissioner of Police of this city.

Among those at the ceremony were E. J. Berwind, Frederic H. Penfield, ex-Ambassador to Austria, and Mrs. Penfield; Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont, Miss Mabel Gerry, Mrs. F. B. Hoffman, Mrs. Frederic Pearson, and Miss Reeve Merritt.

Miss Aileen Sedgwick Weds.

The marriage of James Blackstone Taylor, Jr., the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Blackstone Taylor of 903 Park Avenue, and Miss Aileen Beales Sedgwick, younger daughter of Mrs. Harry Sedgwick of New York, was quietly solemnized yesterday at the residence of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. J. Rich Steers, 37 East Sixty-seventh Street. The house was decorated with chrysanthemums and roses, and the ceremony was performed at a temporary prie dieu by the Rev. Father William Martin of St. Patrick's Cathedral.

The bride walked with her uncle, J. Rich Steers, who gave her in marriage. Her white satin gown was draped with old rose point lace and her veil was tulle combined with rose point and held with orange blossoms. She wore a string of pearls, the gift of the bridegroom, and carried lilies of the valley and white orchids. Her only attendant was Miss Priscilla Thorne Taylor, a sister of the bridegroom, who wore a pale blue panne velvet gown topped by a gold lace picture hat trimmed with pink and blue flowers, and her flowers were pink roses.

Mr. Taylor, who is in the naval aviation school at Bay Shore, L. I., had his cousin, William R. K. Taylor, Jr., as his best man, and the ushers were John H. French, Eric Enos, Kenneth Noble, and Anson W. H. Taylor, another cousin. A small reception for about two hundred followed the ceremony.

Mrs. Taylor, with her sister, Miss Adelaide Sedgwick, made her début in the Winter of 1915. Both were members of the Junior League.

Lieut. Commander Dowell Marries.

The wedding of Miss Marie Elsie Viertel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard G. Viertel of Middletown, N. Y., and this city, and Lieutenant Commander Jonathan Stuart Dowell, Jr., U. S. N., son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Dowell of McKinney, Texas, was celebrated yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in the college hall of the Hotel Astor, the Rev. Harold D. Willis officiating.

The bride was gowned in white satin and chiffon, and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and variegated pansies.

Miss Rhea Ashley was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were the Misses Evelyn Viertel and Rita Ashley.

Melville D. Chapman was best man, and the ushers were Lieutenant Commander Arthur L. Bristol, U. S. N.; Paymaster Graham M. Adee, U. S. N., and Paymaster A. T. Taylor, U. S. N. The bridegroom and his attendants were in their service uniforms.

After their honeymoon the couple will live in Newport News, Va., where Lieutenant Commander Dowell is in charge of the construction of a new ship. He is a graduate of Annapolis, and was formerly Naval Attaché of the United States Embassy in Berlin.

Among the guests were Rear Admiral Carey T. Grayson, U. S. N., aid to the President; Lieutenant Commander Chauncey Shackford, U. S. N., and Mrs. Shackford; Commander Cyrus Miller, U. S. N.; Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Chapman, and Colonel and Mrs. Nelson S. Groome.

Bride of L. S. Kirtland.

The marriage of Miss Helen Warner Johns, daughter of Mrs. Henry Ward Johns of Lawrence Park, Bronxville, and Lucian Swift Kirtland of this city and Minneapolis, Minn., was solemnized yesterday in Christ Church, Bronxville. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Willson, rector of the church, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Robinson.

The bride wore a gown of white satin and old point lace. Her sister, Miss Mabel Johns, was maid of honor, and appeared in a frock of orchid-colored satin and net. The bridesmaids, the Misses Julia Warner, Emily Poucher, Janet Hayward, and Vivian Maxwell, wore pastel shades of green and sand. Albert Strong was best man. A reception followed at the home of the bride's mother.

Mr. Kirtland is a Yale graduate, class of '03, and he and his bride will spend the Winter in France.

Miss Finn Weds Ignace Panzer.

Miss Katherine Stafford Finn, daughter of Mrs. Anna M. Finn of 110 Park Avenue and the late Dr. James A. Finn of Boston, was married last evening to Ignace Panzer at the Hotel St. Regis. The Rev. Dr. William F. Finn of Chicago, Ill., a brother of the bride, performed the ceremony in the Louis XVI. room.

The bride, who wore a gown of white satin and a tulle veil edged with old point lace, was attended by her sister, Miss Mary M. Finn. Emmanuel F. Rosenbaum of Chicago was best man. The couple will live in this city after a honeymoon trip in the South.

Walters—Dauer.

The marriage of Miss Elisabeth Dauer, daughter of Mrs. Lucy Dauer of 3,140 Broadway, and Theodore Paul Walters, son of Theodore Walters, a retired artist of 252 West 120th Street, took place last evening at 8:30 o'clock in the Evangelical Lutheran Church of the Epiphany in East 128th Street, the Rev. M. Luther Canup officiating. The bride was attended by Miss Emily Lawson, and Frank Walters was his brother's best man.

Lieutenant Gillespie Weds Miss Burne.

The marriage of Lieutenant George Gillespie, United States Navy, a son of Mr. and Mrs. George Gillespie of Michigan, and Miss Caroline Stimson Burne, a daughter of Mrs. Richard Cotton Burne of New York and Huntington, L. I., was celebrated yesterday in St. John's Episcopal Church, Huntington, by the Rev. Charles E. Cragg, and the wedding breakfast was served at Hillhome. The bride's sister, Miss Elisabeth Burne, was her maid of honor, and the best man was Lieutenant Edward F. Stone, U. S. N., and John Clendening Burne, a brother of the bride and in the United States Naval Reserve, and Arnold Furman Sammis were the ushers.

Lieutenant Gillespie was graduated from Annapolis in 1912 and was for a time connected with the American Legation in Paris. He is with the Aviation Corps at Rockaway Park.

Franklin—Kenyon.

The marriage of Benjamin Franklin, Jr., a Lieutenant in the United States Reserves and son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Franklin of Philadelphia, and Miss Adrienne Kenyon, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alan Douglas Kenyon, took place quietly yesterday in the presence of the immediate families at the home of the bride's parents, 322 West 100th Street, the Rev. Dr. Harry Pierce Nichols performing the ceremony. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Frieda Kenyon, as maid of honor, and Lieut. Franklin had Douglas Kenyon, a brother of the bride and a member of the United States section of the Royal Flying Corps, as his best man.

Lieutenant Kenyon was at the first Plattsburg camp this year and then went to Camp Oglethorpe, Ga., where he received his commission.

Mrs. Aphie James Weds.

Mrs. Aphie James, actress and widow of Louis James, and Henry C. Tuxbury, cashier of the Waldorf-Astoria, were married at 11:30 o'clock yesterday at the Church of the Transfiguration. The bride had Miss Marie Louise Rochester as her attendant, and Charles W. Ray was best man.

The bride was formerly Miss Aphie Hendricks, under which name she first appeared with "Frederick Warde and Louis James, in 1892, in "The Lion's Mouth." She was married to Mr. James that same year, and, after retiring from the stage for a few years, appeared as his leading woman until his death seven years ago.

Swan—Pells.

Miss Mae Dewitt Pells, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Pells of Oakwood Heights, Mount Vernon, N. Y., was married last night to Raymond Swan of Brooklyn in the Oak Room of the Hotel Martinique by the Rev. C. H. Tyndall, pastor of the Reformed Church of Mount Vernon.

The bride is a relative of the late William C. Dewitt, at one time Corporation Counsel of Brooklyn. Mr. Swan is a son of Edward P. Swan of Brooklyn.

County Clerk Schneider Marries.

William F. Schneider, County Clerk of New York County, and Miss Louise D. Burkhardt were married yesterday at noon at the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, Yonkers, by the Rev. Dr. W. E. Bourquin, pastor of the Bethlehem German Evangelical Church of Brooklyn. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Emma Burkhardt. L. J. O'Reilly, private secretary to William R. Hearst, was best man. A reception was held at the bride's home after which the couple left for a honeymoon trip in the South. Upon their return they will make their home at The Holley, Washington Square.

New Assemblies to Aid Charity.

The New Assemblies will hold a dance for charity on Dec. 7 at Delmonico's for the benefit of the army and navy. The series of dances for the Winter were abandoned on account of the war, but one large dance has been decided upon. The proceeds will be divided equally between the Navy Relief Society and the Military Entertainment Committee of the army. Mrs. Wendell C. Phillips of 40 West Forty-seventh Street is receiving applications for tickets.

Rainbow Workers in Pulitzer Home.

Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer of 7 East Seventy-third Street has donated a room in her residence for the use of the Rainbow Division Workers' Committee, which is an auxiliary of the New York Chapter of the American Red Cross. The committee supplies knitted articles for the army. Mrs. George R. Dyer is Chairman, Mrs. Nelson B. Burr Secretary, and Mrs. Herbert Harriman, Mrs. Winthrop Ames, and Mrs. Mortimer L. Schiff are among the other members.

Y. M. C. A. FUND NOW REACHES $11,500,000

BAKER INDORSES CAMPAIGN

Chicago District Reports $4,952,685, and New York Is Second with $4,151,561.

Reports received from all over the country at the headquarters of the National War Work Council of the Young Men's Christian Association, at 118 East Twenty-eighth Street, showed last night that approximately $11,500,000 had already been collected toward the $35,000,000 fund which the association is endeavoring to raise for the extension of its work among the soldiers and sailors of the United States and its allies. This total included two individual gifts of $500,000 each, which were made yesterday by Arthur Curtiss James and Cleveland H. Dodge. In announcing his $500,000 gift at a meeting of the New York City Workers at the Bankers Club, Mr. Dodge said:

"I feel that this war fund is so important that the time has come when it is necessary that people should cut into their principal to support such vital work as the Young Men's Christian Association is doing. This is a national crisis. We cannot hide behind increased taxes and fail to give."

On compiling the statistics for the country, the Young Men's Christian Association War Council found that the central department with headquarters at Chicago led with a total of $4,952,685. The Eastern Department ran a close second with $4,151,561 to its credit. This sum, however, did not include that portion of the Rockefeller gift, amounting to 10 per cent. of the total, which is contingent on the raising of the entire $35,000,000.

The other departments of the country reported the following totals: Northeastern Department, headquarters Boston, $1,256,230; Southeastern Department, headquarters Atlanta, $250,528; Southwestern Department, headquarters, Dallas, $356,900, and Western Department, headquarters, San Francisco, $450,000. The grand total amounted to $11,426,904.

Urges Increased Activities.

Following the announcement of these results, A. H. Whitford, campaign director, sent the following telegram to the forty-eight State campaign directors:

"The reports for the first two days are encouraging to the extent that they average $5,000,000, the daily average necessary to aggregate the amount so much desired. It is possible, however, that the reports of the first two days are inflated by carrying large initial subscriptions secured in advance of the opening of the campaign. Increased effort is necessary to insure success. The American people never had a better opportunity to mobilize dollars that will be expended by the Young Men's Christian Association to strengthen the nation's defense by safeguarding the best interests of the men in military and naval service and thus strengthen the morale of the troops at home and overseas."

At the Bankers Club meeting, which was attended by the heads of many of the large corporations, the following resolution was passed:

Resolved that we recommend to the corporations who have not already subscribed that they contribute liberally to the $35,000,000 Y. M. C. A. war fund to be applied, so far as practicable, for the promotion of the welfare of their employes now or heretofore in the service of the corporation and to be apportioned where the plant or plants is or are located.

Among the additional corporation gifts received yesterday were the following:

Standard Oil Co. of N. Y.	$100,000
Standard Oil Co. of Indiana	50,000
American Sugar Refining Co.	50,000
P. Lorillard & Co.	10,000
American Smelting & Refining Co.	100,000
General Electric Co.	75,000
E. W. Bliss Co.	5,000
Railway Steel Spring Co.	20,000
Title Guarantee and Trust Co.	10,000
Cuban-American Sugar Co.	25,000
W. & J. Sloane	50,000
Home Insurance Co.	25,000
J. H. Lane & Co.	5,000
	$525,000

Secretary Baker's Indorsement.

A letter received yesterday by the War Council from Secretary of War Baker in reference to the fund read as follows:

"On every battle front and behind every battle line the Young Men's Christian Association operates to the comfort, convenience, and happiness of the soldier. General Pershing has cabled me that the service rendered is invaluable. The relations between the association and the army are intimate and cordial, and all of the agencies which the Government has undertaken to install to surround our soldiers in camps in this country and abroad are supplemented by the helpful work of the Young Men's Christian Association.

"The need for this fund has been carefully estimated by you and those working with you, and while the sum seems large, it is in fact small, when one remembers that its benefits extend over the great eastern and western fronts, and while primarily for the service of the American soldiers, they are to a large extent helpful to our French, English, Russian, and Italian comrades in arms.

"We speak of our allies in this great war for liberty, and in our thought we include the soldiers of the other nations on our side in the contest. The Young Men's Christian Association is our ally, as are the other great religious and social agencies which strengthen and ennoble the purpose of our soldiers and surround their service with care and comfort while they are separated from the wholesome influences of home."

WOMEN ENLIST TO AID RED CROSS CAMPAIGN

Pledge Co-operation in Membership Drive After Mayor Tells of War's Responsibilities.

With the great responsibilities of the war pointed out to them by Mayor Mitchel and prominent Red Cross officials, more than three hundred knitting women at the conference of the Atlantic Division of the American Red Cross at the Waldorf-Astor yesterday pledged themselves to engage in a campaign that would increase the enrollment of the Red Cross over the country from 5,000,000 to 15,000,000 members. The women represented the chapters of the States of New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut. They had convened to receive advice and guidance in matters relating to the increased efficiency of the organization.

In his address of welcome Mayor Mitchel said in part:

"The full meaning of the war has not sunk yet into the consciousness of the people here at home. The first news of the casualties resulted only in jarring our complacency. But as we come to realize how large an army we are sending abroad we begin to appreciate the significance of the situation. Behind those heroes must stand the united cooperative resources of America. One of those great resources is the womanhood, which has been enlisted in Red Cross work as it has never been before. Its work cannot be overestimated. We cannot tell what the future will bring forth, but it seems to me that it is not at all unlikely that eventually we will have an army of 5,000,000 men in Europe."

Mayor Mitchel congratulated the Red Cross of the Atlantic Division, and expressed the hope that the Christmas membership drive would add at least 10,000,000 members to the present enrollment of 5,000,000.

Leo Arnstein, Chairman of the Military Relief Committee of the New York Chapter, called the conference to order. The principal speaker of the morning session was Dr. Allan MacRossie, who was a member of the Red Cross Commission that spent several months on the French front and in the hospitals of the battlefield.

"The problem of the United States," he said, "is now a problem of building, rebuilding, and upbuilding throughout the whole of France. We must help keep up the morale of France as well as the morale of our own boys who are now fighting side by side with the French soldiers.

"The people of this country are not awakened to the nature of the task which confronts our Government. With Russia and Italy demoralized, our responsibilities have increased to such enormous proportions, and the job before us has become so big, that no conception of it would be great enough to exceed the actual facts. We might as well face the facts. We are on the verge of great and trying sacrifices."

At the afternoon session of the conference it was announced that the great Christmas drive for membership in the Red Cross would begin on Dec. 17 and continue until Christmas eve, by which time the Red Cross officials hope to have enrolled 10,000,000 additional members throughout the war.

SENATOR McNICHOL DIES.

Republican "Boss" of Philadelphia Made Millions as a Contractor.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 14.—James P. McNichol, State Senator and Republican leader, dropped dead today at the home of his son, where he had been ill for several weeks. He was born fifty-three years ago in the Tenth Ward, which has always been noted for its share in the practical politics of the city. After going through High School he entered the firm of Daniel J. McNichol & Co., which had been founded by his uncle. His father was also a contractor, but did not make any large sums of money until his son got the city contracts later.

Directly he started in business young McNichol entered politics and soon became a power in the Tenth Ward and persevered in a relentless manner until he ousted Israel W. Durham from his place as the boss of Philadelphia and occupied it himself. He succeeded so well that with the aid of profitable city contracts at the age of forty he was a millionaire and the undisputed boss on the Republican side.

In six years McNichol put through contracts totaling $20,000,000, on which the profits were enormous.

He was at the zenith of his power in 1909 and had with him the Vare brothers, who were also contractors, and he had up to that time received contracts from the city amounting to $33,000,000. Afterward McNichol split with the Vare brothers and joined forces with their enemy, Penrose, who became leader of the State in 1910.

The funeral services of State Senator McNichol will be held at 9 o'clock on Saturday in the Roman Catholic Cathedral and will be attended by the Senate in a body.

W. RATHBONE BACON DEAD.

Retired Capitalist Dies Suddenly in His Fifth Avenue Home.

Walter Rathbone Bacon, a retired capitalist, who organized a system of tramways in the cities of Europe in the latter part of the last century, died suddenly yesterday at his home, 247 Fifth Avenue. He was the son of David R. and Elisabeth Rathbone Bacon and married Miss Virginia Purdy Barker, the youngest granddaughter of Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt, in Bordeaux, France.

Up till the commencement of the war Mr. Bacon had spent the greater part of his time abroad and generally came to New York for two months in the Winter. He was an enthusiastic sportsman. At the time of his death he was the President of the Knickerbocker Apartment Company.

Mr. Bacon was a member of the Tennis, Racquet, and Union Clubs in New York and the Reform Club in London, where he had a house, and also an estate in Scotland. He is survived by his wife.

ROLAND B. HARVEY.

Secretary of American Embassy at Buenos Aires Dies in Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 14.—Roland B. Harvey, who was Second Secretary of the American Embassy at Berlin under Ambassador James W. Gerard in 1914 and 1915 and last year named Secretary of the American Embassy at Buenos Aires, died at his home here tonight. He had been in ill-health for several months as the result of a fall, when he broke his hip.

His first diplomatic appointment was to the Secretaryship of the legation to Rumania and Serbia in 1909, and later he was Secretary of Legation at Lima, Peru. Mr. Harvey came of a leading Baltimore family. He was 47 years old.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Renewed Weakness Feature of a Session of Only Moderate Activity—No Sign of Pressure.

Without any signs of increased selling pressure the stock market again weakened yesterday and prices closed off from 1 to 3 points, with larger losses in a few of the higher-priced issues. The declines accurately reflected the feeling with which the financial community regarded the new developments in the war situation and appeared to be due rather more to the absence of outside buying than to any increase in the stocks offered for sale. At present levels the list does not offer an attractive target for short sellers, and liquidation of weakly protected accounts has apparently been about completed. Traders are following as closely as they can the confusing news from Russia and the changes in the crisis in Italy. Wall Street has long ceased to regard peace talk as inimical to security values and has been converted tothe belief that any development promising a prolongation of the war means a corresponding reduction in the value of stocks.

The outstanding development on the Stock Exchange was the weakness of the Government bonds, both the Liberty issues going to new low levels. The decline in the Liberty 3½s was more pronounced, the quotation dropping to as low as 99.86 on heavy dealings. The new 4s sold down to 99.18, but recovered to 99.70 at the close. To some extent the selling of the initial issue was ascribed to the necessity of making an 18 per cent. payment on the new 4s today. The decline in the Government bonds is not serious, although it would be much more satisfactory to see them sell above their issue price, and cannot go far in view of the fact that buyers know that the bonds picked up at a recession can be exchanged at their face value for anew issue, which obviously must be put out on a basis to command par at the time of sale. The selling of the 3½s appears to have come mostly from out of town. It is understood in bond circles that outside of New York only a comparatively small number of banks are carrying the Liberty Bonds.

The railways lost ground along with the industrials in yesterday's market, but in most instances their declines were moderate, especially so in view of the disturbing news of the plans of the Big Four Brotherhoods to impose a new wage increase upon the carriers. It is not believed that President Wilson will tolerate even the threat of a strike while the war is on, but the prospect of the granting of even part of the demands for an increase which might add upward of $100,000,000 per annum to the railroads' payrolls is not one to be regarded cheerfully by the holders of securities at a time when the railroad dollar is buying so little by comparison with its purchasing power when rates now in force were established. With equipment notes selling on a 6.25 per cent. basis, investment bankers are beginning to believe that the Federal Government may decide to supply funds for the carriers, or as an alternative plan itself buy equipment to be rented to the roads. Whatever solution is adopted, there can be no argument as to the vital necessity of keeping the country's transportation plant efficient to avoid embarrassment of the nation's war activities.

The overthrow of the Painlevé Ministry, the apparent intention of the Italian leaders to withdraw their lines to the Asige River, and the conflicting reports from Petrograd all had their part in readjusting sentiment to a long and bitter war. More cheerful reading was the announcement of the very real progress being made in the construction of ships to offset the destruction by U-boats and the evidence of closer co-operation between the United States and the European Allies. The Stock Exchange responded to the criticism brought against it for including in the scope of its inquiry as to the activity of short sellers only those for whose account it has been necessary to borrow stocks by supplementing its ruling to require similar reports from its own floor traders. So far, the public is uninformed as to the amount of short selling, but the Governors have it in their power to reduce the abuses arising from this practice and they will be held responsible for any failure to exercise their disciplinary powers.

LONDON TRADERS CAUTIOUS.

Prices Inclined to Drop Because of War Situation in East.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The Italian and Russian situations made dealers cautious on the Stock Exchange today, and prices were inclined to droop, only specialities like shipping, iron, steel, and rubber shares showing any strength or activity. Argentine rails and Russian isues were easy. Scandinavian bonds were strong following a decline in exchange rates.

Money and discount rates were quiet. The sales of Treasury bills last week bring the total amount outstanding to over £1,000,000,000.

Trading Inactive on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, Nov. 14.—Trading was inactive on the Bouse today. Three per cent. rentes, 60 francs for cash. Exchange on London, 27 francs 35½ centimes. Five per cent. loan, 87 francs 65 centimes.

Trust Company Forum to Meet.

The first meeting of the Trust Company Forum of the New York Chapter of the American Institute of Banking will be held this evening at 135 East Thirty-fifth Street. Frank W. Blair of Detroit, President of the Trust Company Section of the American Bankers' Association, will deliver an address on "The Growing Value and Importance of the Modern Trust Company." Edwin Gibbs of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company will speak on "The New War Tax Law as it Affects Trust Companies and Estates," and Professor George E. Allen, Educational Director of the Institute, will discuss "The Utility of Forum Work."

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

War-Time Cotton Consumption.

It is not often that the cotton trade is taken completely by surprise, but that condition was almost perfectly exemplified yesterday when the Census Bureau report of cotton consumption for the month of October was tacked up on the bulletin board. Almost every one had been prepared for a marked falling off in consumption, due to the reported labor scarcity in all the textile centres, as everywhere else. When the figures went up on the bulletin board, showing one of the biggest totals in the history of the trade, there was something like a scramble.

Passing Along the Strain.

The reason for the great increase appears to be simply that it is another manifestation of the strain of war preparations, which is communicating itself gradually to all the national muscles. To begin with, practically all linters are taken now for powder manufacture, and linters users have to make inroads on the better qualities of cotton. Then the shortage of wool and silk has led more and more to the mixing of cotton in former all-wool and all-silk fabrics—army khaki is now, it is understood, 40 per cent. cotton—and in a score of other ways the demand for substitutes has transferred the pressure to the cotton trade.

Production, Consumption, and War.

Cotton men yesterday were not slow to draw the lesson from the census figures. It is plain enough, and only emphasized by the short crop this year—which itself was at least in part due to war scarcity of labor, fertilizers, etc.—that the load of the war can at best only be distributed, and cannot be passed along. The shortage of wool cannot be passed along by using cotton, because that only brings a shortage of cotton. Everybody must do with less, and at the same time must do more. Substitutes only help distribute the burden more efficiently, they do not decrease its weight.

The Money Market Serene.

Notwithstanding that the banks will have to make very large payments today for the account of the Liberty Loan bonds, the money market yesterday showed every evidence of a normal condition. The rate for call loans was 4 per cent. and time rates were practically unchanged. If it were not for the Federal Reserve system and the arrangement by which banks are permitted to make payments to the Government by book entries on their records there would have been a disturbance in the money market in anticipation of today's huge transactions. The machinery of the banks has been so well adjusted to war financing that perfect smoothness now characterizes its operations.

World's Central Money Market.

Commenting on New York's money market, the Mechanics and Metals National Bank, in its circular letter issued yesterday, says: "That the rates for loanable funds in the New York market should have remained below 6 per cent. all through the period of the Liberty Loan subscription, and, moreover, that funds should have been in plentiful supply, is worthy of the recognition of every thinking man in the country, for out of what has transpired will be gained lessons as to how we shall proceed in the future. New York, it must be remembered, is in the position that London occupied for so many generations, that of the world's central money market. Yet London in the last century never was confronted with such problems as those which confront New York. In the present emergency the United States leans upon itself; it must be self-sufficient whatever happens, counting on no outside assistance in the conduct of its money market affairs, as England was wont to do. The test whether New York can be the world's capital, in a financial sense, is now being applied. The test is stringent, but there need be no fear of the outcome if, in the future, to the strain of financing the Government is not added the burden and the necessity of financing ventures not entirely essential to the conduct of war-time activities."

General Motors in October.

Whatever the future may hold for the General Motors Corporation in respect to earnings and production under war conditions, the October statement, issued yesterday, indicated that nothing of an adverse nature had developed during the month. Net sales amounting to $18,500,000 were reported, a gain of $5,400,389 over the same month last year. Undivided profits were $3,325,000, an increase of $1,000,742. Cars and trucks sold numbered 19,169, a gain of 6,221. As of Nov. 8, cash in bank and sight drafts with documents attached aggregated $22,100,000. In the automobile trade the switching of manufacturing capacity to war work is expected to be done gradually, so that it may be some time before earnings from automobile sales begin to shade off. The same gradual reduction in automobile making because of the absorption of steel by Government work is looked for, inasmuch as most of the companies are contracted ahead for supplies.

Bullish Traders Disappointed.

The opening transaction in Steel common yesterday brought a decline of a full point from Tuesday's closing quotation. This reaction appeared to summarise the Street's impression of overnight news in respect to war developments. Steel was under pressure throughout the morning and the accompanying declines elsewhere on the list caused a drop in spirits in many a commission house. Holders of stock bought at levels much higher up had hoped that liquidation was pretty well cleared away in last week's drop, and the irregularity of Monday and Tuesday, where there was no strength, stiffened expectations of better prices. Yesterday's recession tumbled bullish sentiment back into the old rut, without removing, however, the thought that hope might be revived shortly.

British Shipping After the War.

The keenness with which the British shipping industry is watching every point which may count in the after-war competition, not only with Germany, but with the United States and all other maritime nations, is shown by the flurry in British financial circles over some recent orders which, it is reported, Norwegian shipping men have placed in British yards for tonnage, to be delivered after the war. The proposal looks harmless enough—construction is not even to be begun until after the war, and not even then without the consent of the British Government—but The London Times has a long article on the possibilities involved. It is admitted that Norwegian shipping has been "friendly" during the war, yet British financiers are apparently afraid these friendly neutrals will tie up the capacity of their yards at a time when they are expected to be straining every nerve to add to the number of British bottoms.

LIBERTY BONDS DROP ON ACTIVE TRADING

The 3 1-2s Show Net Loss of .44 for the Day, and the 4s Fall Off .10.

TOTAL SALES $3,801,000

Many Holders of First Issue Sold to Meet Payments Due Today, It Is Said.

Active trading on the Stock Exchange yesterday in the 3½ and the 4 per cent. United States Government Liberty Loan bonds caused sharp declines in both issues. The 3½s sold down to 98.86, a net loss of .44 for the day; and the 4s dropped to 99.18, but rallied, closing at 99.70, a net loss of .10. The sales of the 3½ per cents. amounted to $2,093,500, and transactions in the 4 per cents. totaled $1,707,500.

Various explanations were made for the decline in the bonds, and it was generally assumed that inasmuch as the 18 per cent. installment payment on the second Liberty Loan must be made today, many holders of the 3½s were selling in order to place themselves in the position of meeting today's payment. It was pointed out that doubtless a great many persons in their enthusiasm had subscribed for larger amounts than they could afford to carry, and consequently had to make adjustments. This fact accounted for the liquidation in both the 3½s and the 4s. In the case of the 4s of the second Liberty Loan it appeared that a great many selling orders emanated from the West and Southwest, and in the opinion of bankers the transactions indicated that out-of-town institutions found it desirable to be relieved of bonds which they had taken in excess of their actual needs.

Trading in the 4s is limited to the so-called cash bonds which were issued and sold during the campaign. In this district the total amount disposed of was approximately $60,000,000, and it is estimated that the total for the whole country was not more than $100,000,000. For the fourteen days that these bonds have been traded in on the Exchange the sales have aggregated $7,635,500, an unusually small amount considering the volume of bonds outstanding and the size of the Liberty Loan.

Delivery of Bonds Delayed.

Although payments in full, or installments of 18 per cent., for the Second Liberty Loan must be made today at the Federal Reserve Bank, the bank will not be able to make deliveries until Saturday or Monday. Bonds sold on the Exchange yesterday must be delivered today, and consequently brokers could not very well have sold bonds yesterday in anticipation of receiving the same from the Federal Reserve Bank. On the other hand it will be feasible for brokers on the Exchange to make sales tomorrow, for transactions made on Friday do not require delivery until Monday, and by Monday the Federal Reserve Bank will have made a partial distribution of the bonds.

The bulk of today's payments for the Liberty Loan will be effected by book entries, more than 650 banks and trust companies in this district having qualified as Government depositaries. It is figured that approximately 60 per cent. of the subscriptions will be paid in full, and consequently the total payments today will run considerably over half a billion. Some banks will make payments with Treasury certificates of indebtedness, $400,000,000 of which mature today. Under a ruling made by the Secretary of the Treasury, payments may also be made by certificates which mature on Nov. 22, Nov. 30, and Dec. 15, the acceptance of which automatically cancels them. As far as the Government is concerned the receipt of certificates of later dates is equivalent to an anticipated payment of its obligation. For the sake of simplifying the bookkeeping it is understood that the larger city banks will make their payments by credits and send their maturing certificates to the reserve bank for redemption. They will, in most cases, retain the unmatured certificates as investments.

Little Disturbance Expected.

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York issued the following statement yesterday afternoon:

"Tomorrow is the first day upon which payments for 4 per cent. Liberty Loan bonds, either in part or in full, may be made. Arrangements have been completed by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York so that payments in this district may be handled with the least possible financial disturbance.

"About 650 banks in this district have qualified as Government depositaries, or about three times the number which qualified last June. Such Government depositaries make their payments by opening a credit to the Treasury on their books, thereby avoiding the transfer of any funds whatever. Payments made in cash or by check on New York City banks will be promptly redeposited with New York City banks which are qualified Government depositaries.

"No deliveries of bonds will be made to-morrow, but bonds will be mailed to banks outside of New York City after the close of business Saturday, Nov. 17, and deliveries to banks in New York City will be ready at the opening of business Monday, Nov. 19. The volume of bonds thus far received will probably not be sufficient to make complete deliveries, but partial deliveries for as large a percentage as possible will be made in each case, and the balance will be delivered as received by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York."

Rush to Convert Bonds.

There was again a big rush at the Bond Exchange Department of the Federal Reserve Bank, 50 Wall Street, where thousands of persons came to file their applications for converting their 3½ per cent. bonds into 4 per cents. Some of the bank messengers had to stand in line for several hours to be attended to, notwithstanding the fact that every window was used for the receipt of applications. The conversion bonds have not yet arrived from Washington, and the bank does not know when it will be ready to make deliveries. Bonds sent in for conversion after today will have the 4 per cent. rate of interest computed as of Dec. 15 instead of as of the date of presentation, unless the applicant indicates his desire to have the adjustment made as of the date of presentation. This policy has been decided upon by the Treasury Department for the purpose of simplifying the work, the difference in interest being so small as to be almost negligible. Holders of the 3½s have six months within which to apply for conversion. Applications will not be received after 2 P. M. and noon on Saturdays.

SHORTAGE OF FUEL CURBS STEEL TRADE

Manufacturers Show Apprehension with Winter Weather Close at Hand.

NEW BUSINESS REPORTED

U. S. Corporation Gets More Than Double Amount of Tonnage Orders This Month.

Operating conditions in the steel and iron trade are reported in the week's reviews of the situation to be unfavorable because of shortage of coal and coke. With Winter weather close at hand, manufacturers are concerned about the outlook. As far as new business coming to the steel mills is concerned, an improvement over recent weeks is reported. The Steel Corporation, it was learned yesterday, has received so far in November more than twice as large a tonnage of orders as in the same period of October.

"The adjustment of the steel trade to the new régime in prices and to an increased diversion of mill products from accustomed channels of consumption," says The Iron Age, "is proceeding with less friction than had been expected. The difficulties of the mills growing out of the lack of co-ordination at Washington are still painfully apparent, and in the last week the industry in the Central West, particularly at Youngstown, has lost pig iron and steel output from coal and coke shortage. Car troubles have also increased and the outlook for Winter operations, both as to cars, fuel and labor, is not encouraging.

"Working continuously, the manufacturers' committee appointed to bring all prices in line with those already fixed has brought out a new list including bar iron, boiler tubes, nuts and bolts, boat spikes, electric and automobile sheets, wire rope and pipe skelp, and further announcements are to be made covering screws, railroad spikes and track supplies and a variety of collateral products. Sheet and tin plate extras are about ready and there is yet to come a revision of crucible steel products.

"As the Government program of steel requirements develops, the steel consuming trade in various lines is feeling the first cleavage between essential and non-essential industries. As priority rulings multiply the disturbance from steel scarcity in certain minor lines increases and it becomes clearer that the lists of affected businesses will grow.

"Little finished steel is being sold for general commercial needs, most mills being sold for three to six months ahead. But very considerable shipments are still being made on contracts at lower prices than those lately fixed.

"The Government's requirements are now counted on to be 100 per cent. of ship plate output, after due allowance of plates for war and food industries and railroad upkeep. Many plate users must resort to universal plates and a larger use of rivets."

The Iron Trade Review says:

"The alarming curtailment of production by inadequate supplies of coal and coke outrank all other factors of immediate importance in the iron and steel industry. Operating conditions in the various districts have grown well-nigh intolerable. Blast furnaces continue to be banked right and left and the train of effects is running back to the steel works and rolling mills. Foundry production is suffering in the Youngstown and Valley districts. Mill and furnace production has been cut down from 25 to 50 per cent. The origin of the congestion continues to be laid both to sluggish transportation and unstable labor."

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

The movement of wheat at primary points was slightly smaller, although the total was of fair volume. Receipts so far this week show a slight increase over last week and are only about 100,000 bushels under last year. The Price Current stated that Winter wheat soil conditions are entirely favorable except in the Southwest, where it has been too dry and the growth in these sections is unfavorable. A cable from Argentina said that the present condition of unrest and favorable crop prospects as well as inadequate storage facilities are likely to send prices under those prevailing before the war.

RYE.—Market firm; No. 2 Western, $1.88, cost and freight New York.

CORN.

Longs in the corn market sold heavily on reports that the Chicago Board of Trade had issued another warning to members against overtrading in any of the pits or against the commission of any act deemed derogatory to the good name of the association. As a result prices were lower, closing with net losses of 1¾c. Cash prices were very irregular and in the local market new yellow corn was quoted at $1.85 to $2, according to date of shipment, cost and freight New York.

OATS.

Prices in the oats market were influenced by the warning against overtrading and by the action of corn, closing [illegible] net lower. It was also thought probable that farmers would be more willing to sell at the recent advance. The question of feed value is receiving a good deal of attention in all of the markets, and at present differences oats are relatively lower than corn. [illegible]

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was generally lower under liquidation influenced to a considerable extent by the action of grain. The Food Administration announced that while no prices will be fixed for hogs an attempt will be made to stabilize the market at a minimum price [illegible] for hogs in order to promote hog raising and to assure the farmer of a profitable operation. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 32,000; estimated for Thursday, 28,000. Kansas City received 13,000 and Omaha 5,500 hogs.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The market for cottonseed oil was again dull, with total sales amounting to only 1,000 barrels. The undertone was easier owing to reports that Southern mills were more disposed to sell crude oil and influenced by the easier tone to lard. The cash demand was less active and the whole situation showed a somewhat easier tone. Local prices declined 10 to 20 points. Range of prices:

COFFEE.

There was a further decline in the market for coffee futures yesterday under liquidation and a little trade selling. The volume of business was not active enough to indicate any material change in sentiment, but there appeared to be rather a more optimistic feeling as to ocean freights and the possibility of lower importing costs. December eased off to 6.98c and May to 7.40c, or about 7 to 8 points net lower, and the market closed at a net decline of 6 to 8 points. Business included further exchanges of December for July at 60 points and December for September at 77 points. The local spot market was quiet and unchanged at 7¾c for Rio 7s and 9¾c for Santos 4s. SUGAR.

The raw sugar market seems to be assuming a more normal position, as an increased business is being done. The sales yesterday, all to the International Sugar Committee, at an equivalent of 6.005c for centrifugal, delivered, included the following lots: 2,200 tons Peruvian, in port and afloat; 1,750 tons Philippines, by rail and boat, and 3,000 bags of Cubas, prompt shipment, and rumors of further sales of Cubas.

In refined no improvement was noted in new business as yet, and prices were unchanged, at 8.35c for fine granulated. Refiners were still busy distributing the recently acquired sugars.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 6,041 packages. Some shortage of high-grade fresh butter and a little firmer market for such. All other grades in free supply, selling slowly and feeling weak. Creamery, higher than extras, per pound, [illegible]

EGGS.—Receipts, 8,201 cases. The scarcity of fresh eggs continues, and any lots containing a fair to large proportion of new-laid quality are wanted beyond the supply. Prices show a further advance under competition to secure the few desirable lots obtainable, but values are extremely irregular, owing to the varying proportion of the different qualities contained in the cases. Storage eggs are having only a moderate movement, and the tone is somewhat unsettled and irregular, although the trade reported shows about previous range of prices. Nearby white eggs are still in small supply, but the demand is limited, and buyers looking for fancy stock are extremely critical when paying top quotation. [illegible]

EXTRA DIVIDENDS DECLARED

Standard Oil of Kansas Votes Extra Payment of $6 a Share.

Several important changes in dividend rates occurred yesterday. The Standard Oil Company of Kansas declared an extra payment of $6 a share, as well as the usual disbursement of $3 for the quarter, payable Dec. 15 to shareholders of record Nov. 30. Three months ago the extra voted was only $2. The Gulf States Steel Company declared a quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent. on the common stock, compared with 2 per cent. regular and ½ of 1 per cent. extra in the preceding quarter. This was the first time the stock had been on a straight 10 per cent. annual dividend basis. The dividends will be paid Jan. 2. The company reported operating income of $281,565 for October, and of $3,480,367 for the ten months ended Oct. 31, an increase of $1,378,169 over the same period last year.

The Cerro de Pasco Copper Company ordered the usual quarterly dividend of $1 a share and an extra payment of 25 cents a share, payable Dec. 1, to stockholders on the books Dec. 23. In the preceding quarter the extra was 50 cents a share. The dividends will be paid on about 782,032 shares of stock, an increase of 115,400 shares since the last dividend was disbursed. Conversion of bonds into stock caused the expansion, the $10,000,000 6 per cent. bonds becoming convertible Nov. 1.

The San Joaquin Light and Power Corporation resumed dividends on the preferred of $1.50 a share, payable Dec. 15. The last previous payment was on April 15, 1914.

BIG JUMP IN COTTON

Prices Advance 17-67 Points on Government Consumption Report.

The local cotton market was taken almost completely by surprise yesterday by the Government report of consumption for the month of October, which far exceeded all advance estimates with a total of 695,468 bales, including 100,136 linters. The heavy short interest rushed to cover, and the result was a very sharp advance all through the list, carrying prices to new high records for the season. The close, moreover, found the market notably firm, the net advance being from 17 to 67 points, very near the top figures for the day.

The opening was somewhat nervous and unsettled, apparently because of unfavorable war news. Prices were 3 points higher to 7 points lower at the call, and went down to 10 to 13 points below Tuesday's closing figures. At this point, however, considerable trade buying started the shorts to cover, and the market rallied strongly. The tonnage situation was also considered much more favorable because of the announcement from Washington of the agreement whereby the neutral tonnage, now held in American ports, will be put in motion once more, and Japanese tonnage brought into the American trade. The fact that the Liverpool prices were somewhat easier indicated that the same view of the situation was taken there.

The report of consumption, which formed the decisive factor in the turn of the market upward, does not appear to have been expected, even by the closest followers of trade conditions, who had generally set reports of labor scarcity at the mills against the known facts of increased demand for uniforms, powder manufacture, &c. The report, including linter consumption, is about 77,000 bales greater than the consumption a year ago, and makes the consumption for the first three months of this season about as much greater than that of last season. Exports for the day were 2,316 bales, making 1,414,225 bales so far this season. Southern spot markets were reported unchanged to 25 points higher.

Yesterday's quotations follow:

COPPER EARNINGS DECLINE.

Nevada Consolidated Reports $1,558,427 Drop for Quarter.

The Nevada Consolidated Copper Company reports for the quarter ended Sept. 30 net earnings of $1,988,324, a decline of $1,558,427 from the total for the June quarter and of $1,912,873 from the net of the September quarter last year. In order to pay the quarterly dividend, accumulated surplus had to be drawn on to the extent of $544,196. In the same period in 1916 there was a surplus after dividends of $1,625,348.

Earnings were based on a price of 20.76 cents a pound for copper, compared with 25.055 cents a pound in nine months ended Sept. 30. The sharp decline was accounted for by the fact that the company had considerable unsold copper on hand when the quarter ended, this being carried on the books at 13½ cents. The company's production to the end of the year has been disposed of since at 23½ cents a pound. The report, issued yesterday, said that production in the September quarter amounted to 20,917,678 pounds, compared with 20,517,356 pounds in the preceding quarter.

Thomas W. Lamont in London.

Thomas W. Lamont of J. P. Morgan & Co. arrived in London on Monday, making the voyage on the same vessel that carried Viscount Reading, the Lord Chief Justice of England, and Lord Northcliffe. There is said to be no special significance attached to Mr. Lamont's visit, as it is customary for members of the Morgan firm to make trips to London and Paris, where they maintain branch offices.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

J. B. Allen has resigned from his post with Merrill, Lynch & Co. in order to devote his time to the sale of War Savings certificates and other Government loans.

Exchange Governors Order That Names of All Traders Involved Be Reported.

BROADER THAN FIRST RULE

Members Who Trade for Their Own Account Now Brought Under Curb.

Governors of the Stock Exchange took action yesterday to extend their supervision to all short selling put through on the board room floor. Under the original measure brokers were required to report the names of short sellers only through the medium of stocks borrowed for them. This did not apply to traders who sold short and covered their commitments before the close of business on the same day, a procedure which necessitates no borrowing of stock. The additional rule demands that the name of every short seller be reported to the Committee on Business Conduct. The resolution said:

> Resolved, That all members of the Exchange, or their firms, be required to deliver before 12 o'clock noon every day to the Committee on Clearing House, in sealed envelopes, addressed to the Committee on Business, a statement of amounts and names of all stocks sold and bought in on the previous day for their own account, and also for the account of their customers, stating their names. This being in addition to the requirements of the resolution adopted Nov. 1, 1917.

The new ruling has especial reference to members who trade for their own account. In last week's break of prices, after news was received of the overturn in Russia, short selling was heavy, much of it originating on the floor. While the Governors assured themselves that no deliberate attacks had been made on stocks for the purpose of getting them down, the lack of supervision through records filed with the Business Conduct Committee was seen, especially as a great deal of short stock was covered before the end of the day.

As far as could be learned after the Governors' meeting yesterday, no information was supplied by the Business Conduct Committee in regard to the character of short selling revealed by the names of stock borrowers filed since Nov. 1. Governors said that they had been assured that no traces of pro-German influences to depress stocks had been uncovered, but the committee kept silence about the names. The Exchange authorities did not consider making public figures showing the proportion of short selling to the selling of "real" stock by investors and speculators.

ASK FOR DU PONT STOCK.

Stockholders File Complaints Against Heads of Powder Company.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Nov. 14.—Alleging that the meeting of stockholders of the du Pont Powder Company, which resulted in a majority of votes favorable to the retention of $60,000,000 worth of stock of the company, which President P. S. du Pont and his associates acquired for themselves, was influenced, complainants in the case now ask that the defendants be compelled to return the disputed stock. They also ask that the defendants be required to account for the excess in cash and the Anglo-French bonds not converted into cash and received by them.

Philip F. du Pont and other complainants filed in the United States District Court today a petition addressed to Judge J. Whitaker Thompson asking for a decree accordingly.

One of the allegations is that the defendants "used all the power and influence of the E. I. du Pont De Nemours & Co., its officers and Directors, agents, and employes, to induce the stockholders of the company at the meeting aforesaid, to vote against the resolution submitted to them by the court, thus using the company itself as the instrument to deprive its stockholders of the benefits of the enormous profit to the company referred to in the court's opinion."

SEE MEXICAN TRADE REVIVAL

Delegates to This Country Have Hopeful View of Business.

Trade conditions and the future possibilities of commercial and industrial expansion between Mexico and the United States, were discussed yesterday by Mexican Government delegates at a luncheon given at the Biltmore Hotel under the auspices of the American Manufacturers' Export Association. George Edward Smith, President of the association, who presided, introduced the officially accredited delegates of Mexico now in this country. They included Alejandro R. Cota, Inspector of Mexican Industries and Manufacturers; Abraham Ferriz Savinon, Chief of the Experimental Industrial Laboratory of Mexico; Bruno Newman, Melchor Ayala, and Guiterez de Velasco.

It was announced at the luncheon that the appearance of the delegates had the cordial approval of the Department of State and of the Mexican Ambassador. Mr. Cota gave a hopeful view of the situation prevailing in Mexico at the present time, and said that he believed that with sympathetic and intelligent co-operation on the part of American business interests, there would follow a big revival in trade between the two countries.

"Naturally, after seven lean years," Mr. Cota said, "Mexico will take time to recuperate. The Government is doing all in its power to restore the railroads, and is buying rolling stock as fast as possible. It must be realized, however, that time is required to get back to normal. There is no question Mexico will get on its feet in time, and much can be done by this country to restore prosperity to the republic south of the Rio Grande."

Asked as to the credit of the small merchants in Mexico, Mr. Cota said he believed little risk would be met with in extending credit for merchandise bought here.

Mr. Newman said the reason American manufacturers and jobbers did not get their full share of business from Mexican merchants was because business men here as a rule did not understand the commercial methods prevailing in Mexico. He gave it as his view that if sellers here were to compete successfully against European manufacturers after the war, they must be prepared to extend credit, and send Spanish-speaking representatives into the country. Following the addresses there was an open forum at which questions asked by the members of the association were answered by the Mexican delegates.

ROB PAYMASTER OF $3,164.

Band in Auto Knocks Him Down as He Steps Out of Taxicab.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 14.—Automobile bandits, who followed him from a bank in Boston, today assaulted Thomas A. West, paymaster at the plant of the American Net and Wire Company, and escaped with a bag containing $3,164, the weekly payroll. The hold-up was committed almost in front of the factory after West stepped from a taxicab. He was knocked down and rendered unconscious. Before anyone could go to his assistance the robbers jumped into the car, manned by a chauffeur, and raced away.

The license number of the car was obtained. It has been the custom of the company to send to Boston for the payroll every Wednesday. West was not seriously hurt.

OPPOSES CITY OWNERSHIP.

President of Third Av. Ry. Rejects Stockholders' Suggestion.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Third Avenue Railway Company yesterday a stockholder suggested that if the management was not able to maintain operations at a profit, it would be better for the holders of stock to take steps to turn the property over to the city to let it be operated on the municipal ownership plan. In reply President Maher said:

"I am not in favor of municipal ownership, and I say this without prejudice, as it is the last meeting of the stockholders of this company in which I shall participate officially. I am hoping to retire on Jan. 1. I have been working for more than half a century and feel that the time has arrived when I should step aside and let younger men take my place and maintain the company on a strong basis."

The discussion grew out of a request by a stockholder for information concerning the status of the application of the company to the Public Service Commission for permission to charge 2 cents for transfers. Mr. Maher read a statement showing the financial condition of the company last April, and suggested that further hearings before the commission be deferred until the places of the two Commissioners now on war duty should be filled. The commission has postponed further hearings on the matter until a week from next Monday.

Mr. Maher said that a request would have been made to the commission for permission to raise the fare to 6 cents except that the subway and elevated lines would not join in the request, and that it would be impossible for the line to compete with other service if the fare were increased. A committee consisting of an equal number of stockholders and bondholders was appointed to see if the revenues of the company could not be increased.

GOLD SHIPPED TO CHILE.

National City Bank Sends $2,200,000 to Valparaiso.

The National City Bank is shipping $2,200,000 of gold bars to Valparaiso, Chile. This is the first shipment to be announced for several weeks past, and it is understood that there are to be additional exports of the metal to South America in the near future.

Since the issuance of the President's proclamation placing the exportation of gold on a permit basis, the movement has been of exceptionally small volume. For the four weeks ended Oct. 12 the outward movement totaled $18,529,000, compared with more than $33,000,000 for the preceding four weeks. Since the beginning of the current year the exports have amounted to about $355,000,000 and the imports $545,000,000.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Weakness characterized practically the entire list on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. There were several small rallies during the day, but the trend was downward. The collapse of the French Ministry, the reports from the Italian front, and the absence of definite news from Russia contributed to the nervousness of traders. Reading and others of the railroad list showed in better tendency toward the close because of the announcement that there would be no strike of railroad workers during the period of the war.

TO BUILD 10 SHIPS AT BIG PLANT HERE

Federal Company Will Speed Construction on Contract Awarded by Government.

HUGE YARDS ALL EQUIPPED

Grew Magically on the Hackensack Meadows, Beating Construction Records—First Keel Now Ready.

The Federal Shipbuilding Company, owned by the United States Steel Corporation, has received contracts from the Emergency Fleet Corporation for ten steamships of 9,400 tons each, and the company is preparing to lay the keels for four of them within the next three weeks. In news of the transaction yesterday was found evidence of the extraordinary speed with which the Steel Corporation has prepared to help the Government in its shipbuilding program.

As the result of high-pressure construction, the Federal Company has practically completed facilities in three months for building twelve big ocean freighters at once at its yards in the Hackensack Meadows.

Buildings covering ten acres of land have been built in the three months of wood and reinforced concrete. Ordinarily, the better part of a year would have been devoted to an undertaking of similar size. The original purpose of the yard was to build barges for the new ship canal across this State, but before the plans were completed the shipping situation became acute, and the Steel Corporation's engineers turned to the making of sea-going boats.

Arrangements with the American Bridge Company, another subsidiary of the Steel Corporation, provide for the fabrication of steel for the new vessels, and the officials are aiming at rapid construction of the vessels called for by the Government contract. The keel parts for the first ship are already at the yard.

The rush work at the new shipyard had a parallel in the ship-plate mill recently finished by the Carnegie Steel Company at Homestead, Penn. In order to meet the Government's needs for plates, the Carnegie management set out early in the year to put up a mill in record time. The plant was finished in six months, compared with a normal period of twenty months. The mill, completed last month, was named the "Liberty" mill. It is one of the largest in the country, turning out 110-inch plates, solely for ship construction.

The ten ships under contract will require from 2,500 to 3,800 tons of steel each. The Newburgh Shipbuilding Company has orders from the Emergency Fleet Corporation for four 9,000-ton vessels, the steel for which, it is expected, will be furnished by the Steel Corporation. The latter has placed bids with the American International Shipbuilding Corporation for the steel for twenty-five new ships to be built for the Government.

Additional rush work on Government contracts came to light yesterday in information that 15,000 tons of steel rails had been rolled for quick shipment to France to be used in General Pershing's transportation system. The orders were distributed last week, 5,000 tons going to the Steel Corporation. This allotment was completed in three days, immediately put aboard cars at Chicago and hurried to the seaboard. Ordinarily the order would have supplied a week's work for the mill which handled it.

MURRAY HILL SUIT UP.

Builder Says He Could Not Fight J. P. Morgan.

George Backer, a builder, whose failure to carry out an agreement to buy the Havemeyer home at the southwest corner of Thirty-eighth Street and Madison Avenue from August Heckscher, caused Mr. Heckscher to lose a profit of $125,000 and resulted in his suit for $250,000 against Edmund L. Baylies, member of the law firm of Carter, Ledyard & Milburn, was the chief witness for the plaintiff yesterday at the trial of the suit before Supreme Court Justice Dugro and a jury.

Mr. Backer said he had planned to buy the property for the erection of a loft building and was to pay $525,000 for it in May, 1915, when he got a letter from Mr. Baylies advising him that the Murray Hill restrictions covered the building and that J. P. Morgan and other residents of the neighborhood would appeal to the courts to prevent the erection of a loft building on the premises. "I didn't believe the restrictions would hold," said Mr. Becker, "but I did believe that Mr. Morgan would fight and I was not in a position to fight Mr. Morgan. I showed the letter to Mr. Heckscher's broker and told him I was out of it."

Jabish Holmes, who was attorney for the South Church in previous restriction litigation involving property in the Murray Hill section, testified that while the case was on trial Mr. Baylies declared to the attorneys that "the Havemeyer property isn't restricted." The Court of Appeals has since upheld this statement by Mr. Baylies.

William Rand, Jr., counsel for the plaintiff, said that while the complaint asks $250,000, his client only seeks to recover the $125,000 he lost through the warning letter written by Mr. Baylies to Mr. Backer. The case will continue today.

MAY CUT OFF ARTIFICIAL ICE.

Hoover's Aid Sees Shortage Because of War Demands for America.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 14.—The artificial ice industry in the nation is facing serious conditions, according to Charles W. Merrill of the Chemical Bureau, who is associated with Federal Food Administrator Hoover.

Merrill conveyed this message in his address today before the Eastern Ice Association, which includes in its membership manufacturers and machinery makers of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and New England States. He said the war's demand for ammonia, one of the principal materials used in making ice, and the supply of which is now almost wholly absorbed in munition making, would create a problem, and he added that fuel conditions threatened to compel the suspension at times among the ice manufacturers as well as in other lines of business.

Mr. Merrill impressively urged upon the natural ice wholesale dealers that they make immediate and extensive preparations to fill storage houses to the limit of capacity, and that stacks for ice be employed where housing was not available. He could not assure the members of the association of a continued supply of ammonia during the Winter or next Spring, and he urged conservation until the $10,000,000 ammonia plant the Government plans to build is completed.

Mr. Merrill advocated a co-operative output where there are several competing plants in a city or district. When inquiry was made if the anti-Sherman law would not then interfere the reply was made that not where the combination did not tend to take advantage of the situation in regard to price. If the ice dealers would not sell at a reasonable price, Mr. Merrill said the method used in reaching grocers when they refused to sell sugar at a reasonable profit could be invoked.

TO TESTIFY AS TO CREDIT.

Vanderlip and Warburg Called in Railroad Rate Case.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—The Interstate Commerce Commission announced today it had called as witnesses in the 15 per cent. advance freight rate case Frank A. Vanderlip, New York banker and Chairman of the Government War Saving Committee, and Paul Warburg, member of the Federal Reserve Board, to testify Friday on credit available to railroads, industrial organizations, and other money market competitors. The commission acted on its own motion, without suggestion from either railroads or shippers.

Australian Wool Arrives.

Frank B. Windeler has advices of the arrival at a Pacific Coast port of 4,736 bales, part of the 45,000 bales of Australian wool the sale of which he is supervising on account of the British Government. This first arrival will be of the following grades: Eleven hundred bales of superior Merino combing, 1,200 bales of shafty top-making Merino, 800 bales of clothing, (64-70s,) and 1,000 bales of combing Merino, pieces and bellies, free or nearly free. It is expected that these wools will arrive in Boston within the next three weeks, when auction of same will be held, the date of which will be duly announced.

Gray Goods Sales Continue.

Print cloth sales in the local gray goods market yesterday included further December business on 38½-inch 64-60s at 11 cents, with some mills now asking 11¼ cents for this delivery and for spots. Sales of 39-inch 68-72s were put through at 12½ cents for shipment in this month and next, though the yardage sold was limited by the extent to which makers of these goods have sold them up. November business was reported on 38½-inch 60-48s at 9½ cents, bids of an eighth less being declined in certain quarters. For shipment in this month and next 27-inch 56-52s sold at 7 cents. Other print cloth business included the disposal of January-February lots of 38½-inch 48 squares at 8¼ cents and 44 squares in the same width at 7¾ cents. Quite a good business was done on sheetings, including 48-square, four-yards at 13 cents and 56-60 four-yards, for December and January, at 13¾ cents. Spot print cloth prices closed as follows:

39-inch, 80-80s	15½c	38½-inch, 64-60s	11¼c
39-inch, 72-76s	14½c	38½-inch, 60-56s	10⅜c
39-inch, 68-72s	12½c	38½-inch, 60-52s	9⅞c
39-inch, 56-44s	8¾c	38½-inch, 60-48s	9½c
38½-inch, 64-64s	11½c	27-inch, 64-60s	8c

May Change Underwear Demand.

One effect the war may have is to change the underwear tastes of many of the thousands of men who are now in the Federal service. According to an Eastern jobbing buyer who is now in this city, many of these men, who in civilian life wore union suits, will as soldiers become so used to two-piece garments that they will not immediately go back to unions again. Many of them, this buyer contends, will also become prejudiced in favor of wool underwear, as compared with ribbed or fleece cotton goods, because they are now being clothed in wool garments by the Government.

Prices for Next Fall Are Made.

The Mayo Mills, prominent factors in the manufacture of Winter underwear, have made their prices for the season of 1918. Compared with those made a year ago this time for the Fall 1917 season, the new quotations show as follows: Men's 16-pound ribbed union suits, 1918, $13 a dozen; 1917, $9.75; boys' union suits, 1918, $7 a dozen; 1917, $5.25; men's 11-pound ribbed shirts and drawers, 1918, $7 a dozen; 1917, $5.25. It is currently reported in the market that Eastern lines of underwear for the next Fall season will not be priced until after Nov. 26; possibly, because of the Thanksgiving holiday, not until Dec. 1.

Drugs Selling Higher Abroad.

Drug and Chemical Markets will say today that a number of drugs in the primary markets abroad are selling considerably above the parity of prices here. Efforts of local firms to purchase quinine sulphate in London have proved fruitless owing to the scant stocks there. Oils and fats used in the manufacture of glycerine are to be controlled by Great Britain because of the demand for this commodity for the making of explosives. There were a number of advances in the local market in the last week, but apparently few of them were of prime importance. The same was true of the declines reported.

***

How Much They Want Goods.

An executive of a local commission house yesterday furnished this illustration of how hungry the wholesale merchants of the country are for merchandise available for immediate delivery: One of the mills for which this house sells found itself with quite an accumulation of various kinds of odds and ends on its hands. Wanting to get rid of it, this mill notified the commission house to sell the goods at the best prices possible. Obeying instructions in all respects the latter offered them for division among a dozen of their best customers. All of the latter wanted a part of the goods in question, and six of them asked for the entire lot.

***

War Economies in Retail Stores.

Though two of the members of the War Advisory Committee of the National Retail Dry Goods Association were not present at its meeting held yesterday in this city, reports of the activities of the committee were gone over by those present and suggestions embodying further economies sought by the Government were discussed. The committee is said to have received active co-operation and support from the merchants in 300 towns in forty-five States, affecting a population of more than 25,000,000 people. Through the efforts of the merchants concerned, in following out the suggestions for economies made by the War Advisory Committee, 25 per cent. of the men formerly engaged in delivering for the retail stores have been released for Government use. The returned goods evil has been materially lessened and many old abuses have been practically done away with.

***

Cotton Gloves Actively Sought.

The popularity of the cotton glove which formerly came from Germany is said to have grown by leaps and bounds. American manufacturers, quick to take advantage of the situation, have consequently reaped a substantial harvest of orders which, it is reported, will carry them well into the last quarter of 1918. It is said further that the domestic product has thoroughly intrenched itself in the field, both as to quality and as to price, and that German competition after the war is over will not be able to dislodge it.

***

Vests for Women Become Popular.

Vests for women have jumped into prominence as one of the most striking developments of the Fall season. At first confined to mere suggestions in waist design, they now make their appearance as entirely separate garments which are said to be meeting with very general acceptance. The most popular models are of velvet or corduroy in the darker shades of blue, green and brown. While most are made with the same material in both front and back, there are some, particularly for sports wear, in which a lighter weight material is used for the back.

***

Change in Derby Demand.

Men's derby hats, of the popular and medium priced lines, are said to be as popular this Fall as they have been in the past. Men of limited means apparently are turning more to the soft felt hat. In the better grades, however, it is said that this shift is not so pronounced. Derbies retailing for $5.00 and over are said to be about as actively sought as formerly, and in some cases to be even more popular. In styles there seems to be no material change from last year; except that fancy shapes are not looked on with favor in most cases. The medium height crown with the rolling brim is consequently the best seller.

PRODUCE MORE PRINT PAPER

Increase Shown in Report of the Federal Trade Commission.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14. — Production of print paper in the United States during the first ten months of 1917 is shown by statistics made public today by the Federal Trade Commission to have been 1,084,391 tons, as compared with 1,067,947 tons in the corresponding period last year.

Prices paid during October for news print paper averaged $2.90 to $3.25.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Goldstein Brothers of Indianapolis, Ind., are now being represented here by Baer & Lilienthal, resident buyers and commission merchants, 1,150 Broadway.

J. E. Allen, resident buyer, 43 Leonard Street, is now handling the account of Blumberg Brothers of Baltimore in this market.

CONSUMING MORE COTTON.

595,332 Running Bales Were Used Up During October.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Cotton consumed during October was 595,332 running bales, and 100,136 bales of linters, the Census Bureau today announced. Consumption for the three months ending Oct. 31, was 1,687,418 running bales, and 268,193 bales of linters. Last year in October 550,655 bales of lint and 67,228 of linters were consumed, and during the three-month period 1,636,723 bales of lint and 201,295 of linters.

Cotton on hand Oct. 31 this year in consuming establishments amounted to 1,085,770 running bales and 69,887 bales of linters, compared with 1,721,990 of lint and 67,435 of linters a year ago, and in public storage and at compresses 3,030,455 bales of lint and 93,271 of linters, compared with 3,667,840 of lint and 77,207 of linters a year ago.

Coton spindles active during October numbered 33,576,922, compared with 32,557,717 a year ago. Imports were 3,682 bales, and for the three months 29,475 bales. Exports during October were 535,565 bales, including 31,322 bales of linters, and for the three months 1,449,379, including 94,166 bales of linters, compared with 796,588 bales in October a year ago, including 7,430 bales of linters, and 1,761,613 bales of lint including 75,000 of linters for the three-month period a year ago.

Rosenwald Insured for $2,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—Edwin Austrian, one of the Chicago agents for the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company, has just written $2,000,000 of life insurance for Julius Rosenwald, President of the Sears-Roebuck Company. The insurance is on the ordinary life plan, and is taken by Mr. Rosenwald chiefly to provide his estate with ready cash to meet the increasing State and Federal inheritance taxes.

WOOL BUYING IS HEAVY.

Traders Look for a Shortage in Some of the Fabrics.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 14.—The American Wool and Cotton Reporter will say tomorrow morning:

"Diversity of demand was the feature of the week's business in wool. Buying for Government orders and for civilian purposes continued in considerable volume. Wools for combing purposes have moved in fair weights, but owing to the almost entire absence of spot stock, those supplied have been taken almost entirely from fleeces and territory wools.

"The cotton market made further gains during the week on account of the spot situation, and holders are practically all unwilling to sell at less than 30 cents a pound. The freight situation is extreme, and the rate of $9 a hundred pounds, New York to Liverpool, was a figure never before dreamed of.

"The woolen goods market continues to improve, although there has been no large increase in distribution. There are indications that a decided shortage for some fabrics will develop. Heavy-weight fabrics are needed, but because of large Government buying the supply is exceedingly small."

Art Class for East Side.

The Educational Alliance, 197 East Broadway, announced yesterday that it had opened art classes for the benefit of persons living on the east side. Abbo Ostrowsky, the Russian artist, is conducting advanced and beginners' groups in sketching and painting; Victor Brenner is teaching modeling and sculpture, and there are classes in posing and in etching taught by Messrs. Hauptman and William A. Levy, respectively. An invitation is extended by the alliance to all persons looking for an opportunity to develop their artistic powers to join the groups already organized or in process of organization.

Increased Rates Suspended.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Increased rates on perishable freight in refrigerator, insulated, or heated cars, which were to have gone into effect tomorrow, were suspended today by the Interstate Commerce Commission until March 15, 1918, for investigation of protests from shippers of fruit and vegetables.

Don't Rob Yourself!
You are simply robbing yourself by cuttiug up stock, wasting yardage and sacrificing goods in order to raise ready cash!
If you're not convinced of this call on me and I'll prove it. Incidentally I'll show you how easily and economically you can finance yourself until present conditions are adjusted.
I'd suggest that you see me today. A conference will not obligate you in the least and it should take a load of worry off your shoulders.

SHORTAGE IN COAL IS 50,000,000 TONS

Use of Hundred Millions More, Garfield Says, Offsets the Increase in Output.

FINDS WAR DEMANDS HEAVY

Administrator Calls for Conservation and Plans Measures to Meet the Situation.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—The coal shortage in the United States with war industries operated on the present basis is approximately 50,000,000 tons a year, and that amount must be provided by additional production, the curtailment of non-essential manufactures and reduced consumption in the homes, if the nation is to do its full duty. The estimate is based on the current calendar year.

A statement to that effect was made public today by H. A. Garfield, Fuel Administrator, as a warning that radical steps might be found necessary. He emphasized that the plants providing munitions and other necessities must be kept running at top capacity at all costs.

In discussing the car shortage Dr. Garfield said that every effort was being made to map out a program which would give the greatest efficiency. Coal operators have stated that the lack of cars was the greatest impediment to increased output. The curtailment of the non-essential industries, it is believed, will help to relieve this condition, as well as clear the roads for the carrying of the output of the war factories.

The labor situation was more favorable today than at almost any other time since Dr. Garfield took hold as Fuel Administrator, and as a result of President Wilson's address to the workmen in Buffalo it is felt that the worst danger of serious complications in that direction is over.

The facts as set forth today by Dr. Garfield were in a sense, it was pointed out, an appeal to labor as well as to industries and householders for thorough co-operation. His statement follows:

"A survey of the entire coal situation completed by the Fuel Administration today demonstrates that the war needs of the nation for fuel have developed to a point where the demand threatens to outstrip the supply. Through the efforts of the Fuel Administration and other agencies the annual output of coal has been increased by approximately 50,000,000 tons. But the consumption of coal it is estimated, has increased by approximately 100,000,000 tons, leaving a gap of 50,000,000 tons to be bridged.

"Practically the entire increase in coal consumption is due to the necessities of war. Munitions plants, running twenty-four hours a day at full capacity, with continuous demands from the Government for increased production, are using from 33 1-3 to 50 per cent. more coal than they were a year ago. For instance, the Bethlehem Steel Company demands an increased coal supply of approximately 250,000 tons a month, or 3,000,000 tons a year.

"The direct demands of the Government for coal, including the requirements for the actual fighting forces of the army and navy, have increased by 300 per cent. Where 2,000,000 tons supplied the Government under normal conditions, the demand is now 8,000,000.

"The coal demands of public utilities plants, particularly in the industrial sections of the country, have increased by about 33 1-3 per cent. Practically all of this increase is due to increased power furnished to munitions plants and to other war industries.

"To close up the gap of 50,000,000 tons between the production and consumption of coal the Fuel Administration will take steps to increase production, facilitate transportation and enforce the most economical use of the available coal supply. The Fuel Administration is determined that war industries, public utilities, and domestic consumers shall be supplied. To this end the co-operation of every coal user of the country will be necessary. The Fuel Administration will use all of its authority to prevent the waste of fuel and the unnecessary use of coal. Domestic consumers will be urged to conserve their supplies.

"Wherever the unnecessary use of coal in industry threatens to embarrass war industry the Fuel Administration will see that the war needs are filled. All activities which are unnecessary to the maintenance of economic or military efficiency will have to give way by curtailment to the necessities of war, and this must be accomplished without undue curtailment to the domestic supply. This policy is expected to relieve not only the demand for coal, but a part of the enormous pressure on the transportation facilities of the country."

The first step toward the curtailment of the use of coal for non-essential purposes is found in the shutting down on the huge electric advertising signs in New York and other large municipalities. Dr. Garfield's order limiting the use of such signs from 7:45 o'clock to 11 o'clock will go into effect tomorrow night.

Definite directions in regard to shipments of coal to a number of factories which are turning out goods that do not contribute directly to the war probably will be issued within ten days or two weeks. All such factories will receive reasonable warning so as to have an opportunity to regulate their business to the new conditions.

The demand for labor in munition factories, shipyards, and other war industries has been so great that it is not believed curtailment of the non-essentials will work any hardship to the employes. The shipbuilding industry alone needs from 300,000 to 350,000 skilled and unskilled workmen in order to put on two and three shifts and rush the new merchant fleet contracted for by the Government off the ways.

BEGIN ORGANIZING WAR SAVINGS WORK

Fifty-seven Directors Will Co-operate to Raise $2,000,000,000 in Small Sums in Year.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—The work of organizing the sale of war savings certificates started off today with the appointment of Federal District and State directors. The entire personnel will meet here tomorrow to discuss methods of conducting the campaign.

Ten more directors are to be appointed. When complete the directorate will include six district directors and fifty-one State directors. Each district director will have charge of practically two Federal Reserve Bank districts, and each State director will have charge of his State, with the exception of New York, Pennsylvania and California, which will each have two directors. There will also be a director for the District of Columbia.

It is designed to make war savings certificates or stamps the most popular Christmas gift throughout the entire country. Mr. Vanderlip, as chairman of the War Savings Committee, will tell the directors that it is important to conduct an intensive campaign in every State during the holiday season and for at least a month afterward to start the war savings habit, from which the Government hopes to reap loans aggregating two billion dollars within a year.

REORGANIZATION PLAN OF RAINBOW DIVISION

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—The War Department made public today the plans of reorganization of three more of the National Guard divisions trained for service in France. Among the three divisions is the Forty-second, or Rainbow Division, which was trained at Camp Mills, Long Island. The reorganization plans for the Thirty-seventh Division, which embraces the New York Guard units, have not yet been announced.

The other two divisions are the Thirty-ninth, comprising troops from Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisiana, and the Fortieth Division, composed of troops from Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado, Utah and California. The formation of the new Rainbow Division follows:

DIOCESE FOR PROHIBITION.

Episcopal Body Would Make Country Dry During the War.

Discussion of war preparations undertaken by the diocese, and a resolution favoring national prohibition, at least during the war, were the principal topics at yesterday's session of the 134th annual diocesan convention of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of New York, meeting at the Synod House, Cathedral Parkway and Amsterdam Avenue. Announcement was made at the morning session of the death of George MacCulloch Miller of 270 Madison Avenue, President of the Board of Trustees of St. Luke's Church, and Secretary of the Board of Trustees of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

A resolution recommending that Congress adopt prohibition as a war measure, offered by Bishop Courtenay, was read in the morning and accepted by the convention. On the objection of a lay delegate that the matter had been rushed through without debate, the action was reconsidered and discussion postponed.

When the question of prohibition was brought up again, Dr. Leighton Parks of St. Bartholemew's opposed Bishop Courtenay's resolution. He said he favored temperance, but declared that even if Congress should pass such a law, it could not be enforced. It was also said in the debate that such an act would hamper the work of Herbert C. Hoover. The whole matter was finally referred to the Social Service Commission of the diocese, which was advised to act upon it as it deemed wise, with a view of obtaining national prohibition for the duration of the war.

Bishop Courtenay then offered another resolution providing that members of the convention pledge themselves to abstain from all alcoholic beverages during the war, and that clergymen urge upon their congregations the need for temperance. It was defeated almost unanimously on the ground that the convention had no right to ask its members to make such a promise.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

An interesting investment transaction closed yesterday concerned another valuable west side apartment house. William McBride purchased from the Gustavius Construction Company, Gustav Schneider, President, the new six-story building at 834 to 838 Riverside Drive, on a plot 54.1 by 147, between 158th and 160th Streets.

The property has been held at $135,000. Nehring Brothers were the brokers in the sale.

Lease Former Brokaw Building.

An important trade removal to the Astor Place section also figured prominently in the business yesterday. The Metropolitan Tobacco Company, for many years on Grand Street, leased for a long term of years the four-story buildings at 443 to 449 Lafayette Street through to 22 to 34 Fourth Avenue, formerly occupied by Brokaw Brothers.

The property, which is near the site of the old Astor Library, is owned by the Wilks and Nottbeck estates. It has a frontage of 105 feet on Lafayette Street, 140 feet on Fourth Avenue, and contains about 85,000 square feet. Buchman & Kahn are preparing plans for extensive improvements and alterations, on completion of which the lessee will occupy the premises as its executive offices and main branch.

The brokers in the deal were the Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company and Horace S. Ely & Co. Emmet & Parish represented the owners as attorneys, and Goldsmith, Cohen, Cole & Weiss acted for the lessee.

Advance in Bowery Rental.

Indicative of increased rentals obtainable for Bowery stores is the lease just closed by Charles H. Shulman affecting space in the building at the southwest corner of the Bowery and Hester Street. William and Leonard Isaac, haberdashers, who now occupy the adjoining store at 86 Bowery, have leased for ten years from March 1, 1919, at a rental of $7,200 a year, the corner stores, 50 by 100.

The rental represents an increase of about $900 a year over existing income returns for this space. About $10,000 will be spent by the lessees in installing a new front and making general improvements. Jacob Finkelstein & Son were the brokers in the lease.

Enlarges Theatre Site.

The B. F. Keith's New York Theatres Company is the buyer of the two five-story buildings at the northeast corner of Columbus Avenue and Sixty-second Street, known as 61-65 Columbus Avenue, and 59-61 West Sixty-second Street, with frontages of 75.5 and 40 feet, respectively.

These two parcels were recently reported sold for William Buchan and Sadie J. Wallenstein to Harold M. Silverman, and title was taken in the name of Samuel Posner, who now transfers them to the Keith interests.

With these purchases the Keith holdings now front 100.5 feet on Columbus Avenue and 155 feet on Sixty-second Street. The Broadway frontage is 28.11 feet and adjoins the Hotel Empire.

Heights Apartment Sold to Operator.

The Dratur Realty Corporation sold to Frederich Brown, operator, 520 West 144th Street, a six-story elevator apartment, on a plot 87.6 by 100, located between Broadway and Amsterdam Avenue.

Buyers for Private Dwellings.

The Ideal Mortgage Corporation purchased from the Bond and Mortgage Guarantee Company the three-story dwelling at 254 West 131st Street, on a lot 17.6 by 100.

Porter & Co. sold for the estate of Caroline M. Porter to Joseph Schaefer the three-story brownstone dwelling 56 West 124th Street, on a lot 18.9 by 55 by 100.

Mary N. Crosby sold to an investor 133 East 119th Street, a four-story dwelling, on a lot 18.9 by 100.11, located near Lexington Avenue.

Orphan Asylum Plan Progressing.

Substantial progress is being made in the plan to establish the Hebrew Orphan Asylum in the Wakefield section of the Bronx. The Local Board of Wakefield has indorsed the application for the closing of the necessary streets in the Schieffelin tract, to be acquired as a site for a new group of institutional buildings.

It is understood that as soon as the Board of Estimate approves of the project title will be taken and the planning of the proposed structures begun. The property consists of a tract containing between 100 and 110 acres in the vicinity of 230th street, lying about midway between the White Plains avenue subway and the New York, Westchester, and Boston Railroad.

The Hebrew Orphan Asylum is now located on Amsterdam Avenue and Hamilton Place, between 136th and 138th Streets.

Bronx Sales.

The Bond and Mortgage Guarantee Company sold to a client of George Schaefer 943 Longwood Avenue, a five-story new-law apartment house on plot 38 by 106, near Kelly Street.

The Lawyers Mortgage Company sold to an investor for occupancy 1,447 Bryant Avenue, a three-story two-family dwelling on a lot 20 by 100.

An investing client of Byrne and Baumann purchased from Sohmer and Sonnenthal 2,385 Grand Boulevard and Concourse, a five-story apartment on a plot 68 by 86 by irregular, located 62 feet north of 184th Street. The property was held at $75,000.

The Cruikshank Company sold the southeast corner of 202d Street and Grand Boulevard and Concourse, a plot fronting 44.5 feet on 202d Street and 100 feet on Grand Boulevard and Concourse, with a building which the purchaser intends to remodel.

The Amo Realty and Construction Company purchased from Amelia De Martin a plot 75 by 100 on the east side of Longfellow Avenue 200 feet north of 172d Street.

Brooklyn.

I. Salzberg sold for M. Wolsk to D. Salwen, the two-family stucco cottage, occupying a plot 50 by 100, on the northwest corner of Fifteenth Avenue and Fifty-first Street, now in course of construction.

Martin A. Ansbro sold for the Gustaf A. Johnson Building Company, the one-family brick dwelling at the southwest corner of Colonial Road and Seventy-sixth Street. The same broker also sold two-family dwellings at 750 Fifty-eighth Street for John Svenson and at 640 Sixty-first Street for Fred C. Johnson.

T. Adler sold to a client of Joseph Metzger, 367 South Fifth Street, a five-story double tenement on a plot 50 by 95.

Long Island.

M. Schneider sold to H. Vollmer a plot 50 by 100 feet on the north side of North Street, 200 feet east of Union place, Jamaica.

Lease in Insurance District.

The Merchants Fire Assurance Corporation, now at 1 Liberty Street, has leased, through William A. White & Sons, from the Charles F. Noyes Company, agents, the twelfth floor at 45 to 49 John Street for a term beginning May 1, 1918. Larger space was required to meet increased business demands.

Commercial Lease.

William H. Whiting & Co. and the Cross & Brown Company rented the store and basement at 141 to 145 Fifth Avenue to the Japanese Fan Company, now at 49 to 53 East Twenty-first Street.

Realty Note.

H. A. Kelber, formerly of the firm of Kelber & Karlebach, has opened a real estate office at 2,526 Webster Avenue, corner of Fordham Road.

A qualifying physical examination will be held. Candidates must be at least 17 years of age, and not more than 25 years on or before the closing date for the receipt of applications. The salary is from $600 to but not including $1,200 a year.

United States.

The commission announces for Nov. 21 at the New York Custom House an examination for apprentice plate cleaner, transferrer, and engraver, for boys only. Vacancies in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, will be filled from this examination. The salary is $500 a year for the first year, $600 for the second year, $700 for the third year, and $840 for the fourth year. At the end of the apprenticeship assignment is made either to plate cleaning, with an initial salary of $1,000 and promotion by successive grades to a maximum salary of $1,300 a year; or to transferring, with an initial salary of $1,000 and promotion by successive grades to a maximum salary of $2,400 a year; or to engraver, with an initial salary of $1,000 and promotion by successive grades to a maximum salary of $3,000. Promotion in these positions will depend upon the ability and efficiency shown by the employe. Competitors will be examined in spelling, arithmetic, letter writing, penmanship, copying from plain copy, elementary physics and mechanical drawing. Applicants must have had theoretical and practical training of a mechanical character in metal work, or in occupations that give training in the handling of tools and machinery requiring great precision and accuracy in measuring and adjustment. Applicants must have reached their sixteenth but not their eighteenth birthday on the date of the examination.

O. 96, dated June 5, will not be included.

TWO NEW SUBWAYS WILL BE DELAYED

Seventh and Lexington Avenue Lines Not to Operate Before January, Whitney Announces.

EQUIPMENT IS NOT READY

Interborough Declines at Present Time to Operate Extension in Queens Borough.

The hope that the Seventh Avenue and Lexington Avenue subway lines that are part of the dual system would be in operation early in December was dissipated yesterday in a statement made by Public Service Commissioner Whitney. If all went well, it was said, trains would be running in these subways early in January, but no definite promise was made to this effect. After saying that the Interborough Rapid Transit Company had known for five years when these subways would be ready for trains, Mr. Whitney's statement reads:

"The commission has been stating for over a year that it was extremely interested in having these two lines in operation early enough this Winter to relieve the extreme Winter congestion in the present subway, and yet the Interborough Company has so managed its affairs in the way of purchasing the necessary equipment and material that it looks as though operation of these two lines will not be possible until the worst of the Winter crush is over.

"The responsibility for that situation rests with the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, because if you go over the contracts they have made you will find that they certified to the need of the Seventh Avenue and Lexington Avenue lines. They know that everybody was anxious to operate early this Winter, and yet they waited until February, 1917, to give the order for 447 cars, and they waited until this Summer and this Fall to buy the necessary material for the equipment of those two lines. That now requires an explanation from them."

Queens Extension Held Up.

Mr. Whitney's statement was incidental to a brief letter from James L. Quackenbush, counsel for the Interborough Company, to the effect that he had been instructed by the company to notify the commission that it would not be possible for the company "at this time to undertake the proposed equipment and operation" of the trains to be run over the Long Island Railroad tracks to Whitestone Landing and Little Neck in Queens. The question of extending the rapid transit system from Corona to these points was before the commission early in 1915. There were many hearings.

Finally an arrangement was made by which a connection should be made between the present rapid transit line ending at Corona with the Long Island Railroad company's tracks, and recently everything was ready for the drawing and signing the contracts. Mr. Quackenbush's letter was the first intimation the commission had that the Interborough Company was opposed to the proposed method of extending the rapid transit system.

Under the dual contracts the commission may compel a company to operate trains over tracks built by the city, but as the proposed plan was to lease trackage rights the power of the commission fails. Mr. Whitney, in his statement, said that the line to Corona was accepted by the company, and that he was unable to explain why the Interborough Company should refuse to operate trains even as far as Flushing when it would mean a great deal more business for it.

"Whether," he said, "it is because of important real estate interests on the Corona line as it now is, or what reason it may be, there has been reluctance to extend the operation of that line further."

At the office of the Interborough Company no direct statement was made as to the reason for the refusal to consider the Queens extension at this time, but it was intimated that it was due to the difficulty in getting the necessary equipment because of the war. The commission will proceed with plans to build an extension of the line from Alburtis Avenue, Corona, to Main Street, Flushing. This would cost, it was estimated, about $1,000,000, but the commission would be in a position to compel the Interborough Company to operate trains over it.

GERMAN I. W. W. PLOTS BARED AT CLEVELAND

Attempts to Destroy Clothing and Foodstuffs Cause Warning to 100 Concerns There.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 14.—Several attempts have been made within the last week, it became known tonight, to destroy large Cleveland concerns which manufacture or store clothing and foodstuffs. More than one hundred such concerns, in the city and its vicinity, have been warned by the Department of Justice that such attempts may be expected in connection with carefully planned plots of German and I. W. W. origin. They have been asked to have their plants carefully guarded and to exercise great care to hire only loyal employes.

Federal operatives here already have arrested four men suspected of having connection with the activities of enemy agents. Other arrests are expected. The enemy activities in Cleveland are linked up by Federal officials with the recent fires in the Kansas City stockyards and at the Baltimore docks.

SUSPECTED SPY ARRESTED.

Reported to be Bernstorff's Cousin, but Denies Relationship.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 14.—Hans Beckendorff, said to be a cousin of Count von Bernstorff, is in jail at Tacoma, Wash., today, having been arrested on a Presidential warrant while working in a logging camp at Lake Tapps, Wash. Howard P. Wright, special agent of the Department of Justice, announced the arrest here today. Beckendorff is suspected of spy activities at Camp Lewis and along the Mexican border. Beckendorff, officials say, answers the description of a German spy who escaped from a London prison about a year ago.

TACOMA, Wash., Nov. 14.—Hans Beckendorff denied today that he was related to Count von Bernstorff. He said he left Germany when he was a boy of 16, and that he took out his first papers in the United States last year. He asserted he had attended school with the children of the German Emperor at Kiel.

WARRANT FOR PETTIGREW.

Ex-Senator Indicted Under Espionage Act to be Arrested in Chicago.

ABERDEEN, S. D., Nov. 14.—Robert P. Stewart, United States District Attorney for South Dakota, announced here today that a warrant for the arrest of R. F. Pettigrew, ex-United States Senator of South Dakota, on an indictment charging violation of the Espionage act would be served in Chicago, and that Pettigrew would be brought to South Dakota to stand trial. The indictment charges the ex-Senator with attempting to obstruct the selective draft and with making anti-war utterances, contrary to the provisions of the espionage law.

Although Pettigrew was indicted several weeks ago at Sioux Falls by a Federal Grand Jury, Mr. Stewart explained, a warrant had not been issued for his arrest because he understood Pettigrew was ill in a Chicago hospital.

Rules on New Explosives Law.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Secretary Lane today ruled that the new law licensing use of high explosives which prohibits their possession by enemy aliens, extends to subjects of any country allied with an enemy of the United States. Where a mining company had its own magazine and a licensed foreman, he held, explosives might be issued to aliens, for use on the premises surrounded with certain safeguards. The Austrian or German miner, however, may no longer buy his own explosives and use them without accountability.

MAY MAKE GOOD DWIGGINS LOSSES

Official of Bankers Life Insurance Company Here on Liberty Loan Case.

DISCREPANCY IS $75,000

Police of Country Instructed to Arrest Missing Agent Accused of Taking Money.

I. M. Earle, Vice President and General Counsel of the Bankers Life Insurance Company, arrived here yesterday from Des Moines, Iowa, to confer with the United States District Attorney and officials of the Federal Reserve Bank in an effort to determine just how far the Bankers Life Company may be responsible for the activities of its agent, Elmer Dwiggins, in collecting subscriptions to the Liberty Loan. While neither Mr. Earle nor any other official concerned in the matter would express any views yesterday, yet in the opinion of those familiar with the case the chances are bright for the company's making good to those who subscribed through Dwiggins any losses which they might have incurred.

Mr. Earle spent most of the day with Assistant District Attorney Knox, Assistant District Attorney Benjamin A. Mathews, officials of the Federal Reserve Bank, Lee J. Wolfe, consulting actuary for the Bankers Life, who has been in charge of Dwiggins's office since the latter's disappearance last Saturday, and Post Office Inspectors, whose investigation into the missing agent's books has shown a discrepancy of $75,000.

After the conference Mr. Mathews said that the Government had nothing to add to its version of the case except the fact that Dwiggins was still at large. Since the issuance of a warrant for his arrest Tuesday, the police of every city in the country have been asked to watch out for him.

Asked to make a statement whether or not the company would make good, Mr. Earle replied that it was "up to the Directors," and he couldn't say. In reference to a statement made by Francis Stoddard, Second Deputy Superintendent of Insurance of New York, to the effect that, even if it wanted to, the Bankers Life could not make good out of its surplus funds a shortage due to one of its agents, Mr. Earle said that he "wasn't sure but that that matter would have to be left to the State Insurance Departments of Iowa and New York."

He was asked if the main purpose of his visit here wasn't to see that no investor in the Liberty Loan plans of the agent of the Bankers Life lost any money.

"'I may feel that in my heart," he said, "but I am not shouting it from the housetops. I cannot speak for the Directors. In regard to the possibility that the Directors make good any losses out of their own pockets, let me say that they would need time to consider that. No body of men will dig down into their pockets for $75,000 without at least thinking over the proposition."

According to Mr. Earle, the Directors will reach some sort of agreement today in their meeting in Des Moines which will bear upon their responsibility for the activities of Dwiggins. He denied emphatically that any instructions from the company told Dwiggins to urge his Liberty Loan customers to convert their bonds bought through him into life insurance.

HYLAN IN ECONOMY PLEDGE.

Says Full Value Will Be Returned in City's Upkeep.

Mayor-elect John F. Hylan said yesterday that he fully realized how great and trying was the work ahead of him as chief executive of the City of New York, but would take it up with a determination to give to the people the best that was in him and leave no cause for complaint as to his stewardship.

"I have a tremendous task before me after the first of the year," said Judge Hylan, "but I will accept it with a confidence born of the consciousness that I will have but one end in view, and that is to serve the best interests of the people, first, last and all the time.

"The money of the people has been spent with an utter disregard of value to be returned to our citizens. My main duty will be to see that for every dollar the people are called upon to contribute, full value will be returned in the upkeep and development of our city and its institutions.

"As my mentors in this task, I will ask the aid of the people, who have given proof so adequate of their confidence in my honesty and integrity. I will give the people the best that is in me, and they can rest assured that I will not have to be ashamed of my stewardship when the time comes to render an accounting."

MAYOR PUTS AN END TO TAMMANY'S FEAR

He Says He Will Do Nothing to Hamper the Incoming Administration.

Mayor Mitchel said yesterday that the recently elected Tammany administration need have no fear that the present administration would take any action binding the new officials to policies to which they were opposed. That was the fear the Mayor read in the action of the members of the incoming Board of Estimate on Tuesday in requesting the Mayor not to make appointments between now and Jan. 1 and not to buy a school site in Brooklyn and not to do several other things the Mayor-elect seemed to think were in danger of being done, among them the leasing of North River piers to the New York Central Railroad.

"I do not intend to appoint any new City Magistrates," said the Mayor. "I had not even thought of it. As to the Brooklyn school site, I know nothing about it. It will be my policy for the rest of my term not to acquire any real estate that can be done without."

Asked about the leasing of waterfront property owned by the city to the New York Central, the Mayor said that Dock Commissioner Smith has informed him that there was no intention of taking any such action in the immediate future. Referring to the questioning of a proposed settlement with the Harway Improvement Company, the Mayor said:

"I know nothing about the reported proposed settlement, but I will say now that I will not sanction any adjustment, be it good, bad, or indifferent, but will leave it for the next administration."

The Hylan board also asked the Board of Water Supply not to execute a $12,000,000 contract for work on the Schoharie watershed until the next administration could look into it. There was no statement forthcoming from the members of the Board of Water Supply yesterday, but they said no statement would be made until the request had been considered officially. However, it was evident that the request of the Hylan forces got a cool reception. It was pointed out that the contract had already been signed with the Degnon Contracting Company. The Hylan forces contend that the work will not start until the Board of Water Supply says the word, and they wish that the word shall not be said.

Sheriff Alfred E. Smith, President-elect of the Board of Aldermen, denied yesterday that there was any politics in the move.

"It is straight business for the benefit of the city," he said. "We see no pressing need for this tunnel. The water has only just been turned on in the new Catskill Aqueduct system. The engineers who built it told the Legislature of which I was a member that it would give a water supply sufficient for twenty-five years. The supply is certainly adequate for years to come. Why build this new work now when prices for everything are sky high? Why not wait until after the war?"

Dock Commissioner R. A. C. Smith last night issued a statement in reply to one criticising his department by Sheriff Alfred E. Smith, President-elect of the Board of Aldermen, in which he said:

"Mr. R. A. C. Smith, Commissioner of Docks, presents his compliments to his namesake, the Sheriff and President-elect of the Board of Aldermen, and would advise him not to listen to idle rumors regarding the Dock Department. If the Sheriff requires correct information, he knows how to obtain it, and, as to the status of the New York Central railroad pier and other waterfront, he would learn that the tenure of occupancy by said railroad is covered by permits issued last May, which provide that the privileges begin May 1, 1917, revocable at the will of the Commissioner of Docks, and will expire by limitation of time on April 30, 1918, and that nothing has been done or contemplated to change the present status.

"As to swapping Coney Island real estate, the Commissioner desires that the truth should also prevail and that the Sheriff and other elected officials should not be fooled. It is stated that this matter comes before the Board of Aldermen next Monday. The Commissioner's answer to this is that it is not true and he has nothing to present to the Board of Aldermen."

VILLISTAS CAPTURE OJINAGA ON BORDER

Carranza Troops Evacuate the Town, Cross Line, and Surrender to Americans.

BATTLE IS WAGED ALL DAY

Rumors That Some of the Bandits Have Entered Texas—Villa Himself Reported in Command.

PRESIDIO, Texas, Nov. 14.—Mexican Federal troops evacuated Ojinaga at 8:30 o'clock tonight and came to the American side, where they surrendered their arms.

General Juan Espinosa y Cordova, commander, surrendered to American troops under Captain Theodore Barnes, Jr., commander of American troops here. He said the fighting was hand-to-hand before the evacuation. Villa troops now occupy the Mexican town. Many were killed, wounded, and executed.

The fighting was confined to the streets of Ojinaga and the municipal plaza. The Villa forces rushed past the outpost and charged down the streets and into the military headquarters. The rout started soon after 8 o'clock, and soon after 8:30 the evacuation had become a mob seeking safety on the American side of the river.

The Federal troops were rounded up by American patrols, disarmed and marched to the army camp, where they were guarded.

Fighting between Villa and Federal forces was resumed at 6:30 o'clock, Central time, tonight. Firing started from the Federal first line trenches, southwest of the town, and was answered by Villa cavalry. Villa troops were seen moving in along the roads in the hills and a general assault was expected.

The attack was made from both southeast and southwest. An assault in force from the steep slope of the northwestern approach to the town resulted in a successful storming expedition, which penetrated to the very heart of the old town.

No accurate estimates could be made tonight of the number of Government dead. No quarter was given or asked on either side. One of two Americans who were operating machine guns in Ojinaga was wounded and was later shot by Villista troopers as he lay on the ground. The other American was believed to have escaped across the river to the American side.

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 14.—Telegrams received here at 8:30 o'clock tonight announced the capture of Ojinaga, the Mexican border port opposite Presidio, Texas. Fighting had been in progress there all day between the forces of Francisco Villa and the Federal garrison under General Cordova.

It is reported that the Villa followers number 5,000 instead of the few hundred which the defenders of the town had expected. Unconfirmed reports here are to the effect that some of the Villa troops have crossed into Texas, and the commander of the El Paso district has been asked to send reinforcements from here.

OJINAGA, Mexico, Nov. 14.—After two hours of fighting early today Francisco Villa's troops were driven away from this town by the Mexican Government forces under General Juan Espinosa Cordova. This was officially announced at the military headquarters here.

The attack, which started at 5 o'clock, took place a short distance southwest of the town, where the Federal first line trenches were situated. The Villa forces were dismounted and were driven back after they had penetrated the town proper, and there was house to house fighting. A machine gun assisted in routing the Villa men.

Villa was believed to have 500 men when he attacked. The Villa troops fled down the river toward Lajitas, with cavalry in pursuit.

Fighting was resumed to the southwest of Ojinaga at 9 o'clock today, and a small band of Villa followers, advancing toward the plaza from the direction of the customs house east of the town, was dispersed with machine-gun fire. This was the second attack of the day by the bandits.

General Cordova placed the Villa dead at seventy. The Government losses included Captain Abran Alvarez, killed, and a dozen wounded, among whom was Lieut. Col. Ignacio H. Astudalle.

U-Boat Sinks a Dutch Trawler.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—An Amsterdam dispatch to The Daily Mail says that a German submarine on Monday torpedoed without warning the Dutch trawler Huibertje at a point twenty-five miles off the Dutch coast. A Dutch boy of 15 years was killed. Ten survivors were rescued after being seven hours in a small boat, and were landed at Ymuiden.

Little's Brother Is Arrested.

FRESNO, Cal., Nov. 14.—Fred Little, a brother of Frank Little, the I. W. W. organizer who was lynched at Butte, Mont., last Summer, was arrested last night by Federal officers. He is alleged to have received a supply of seditious literature at the I. W. W. headquarters here, where he was in charge.

Give your brain the advantage of a noiseless office

Don't let the bang and click of typewriters hamper your thinking. You, the brain-worker, need the "Noiseless." It never interferes—never "gets on your nerves." You're free from the noise-strain. You do more and better work—and do it more easily.

The "Noiseless" never disturbs—even when it's working top-speed right next to your elbow. You can telephone, confer with client or employee, concentrate on some knotty problem—and let the "Noiseless" go right on typing at the desk next to yours. You know that's impossible with any other machine.

Call up today and we'll take a machine to your own office for demonstration and test. Illustrated catalogue and impressive list of users sent on request.

Stenographers:—Let us send you "First-hand Experiences" and other literature which has been prepared specially for you.
